SMASH-UPS THAT DISFIGURE THE FACE ARE THE FEAR OF BEAUTIFUL WOMEN.

Statistics Show Enormous Feature Casualties.

During the last six months over 500 automobile accidents have occurred. This means nearly 2,000 people have suffered accidents to their features: Eyes, Nose, Mouth and Facial Contuor. Of these 2,000 people many have walked immediately to the JOHN H. WOODBURY Dermatological Institute for aid. Others have had their wounds dressed at the nearest hospital or physician, and of these sufferers many have afterwards sought the services of a Woodbury specialist to correct this reparative surgery. A physician or surgeon unites the edges of a wound and considers his work completed. But where the surgeon left off the Woodbury Specialist just begins. The wound heals under proper treatment, but the resulting scar or purple seam is the chief cause of complaint. "Can the scar be avoided," ask many physicians. "Yes," absolutely if the case is properly treated. The Woodbury System knows how in the most perfect manner.

Lacerated and Torn Features Disfigure for Life.—The greatest skill possible is required to unite the ragged edges of the small disfiguring wounds. Two things must be accomplished, perfect union of tissue, and, more important, complete eradication of the much-dreaded Scar. The Woodbury Method solves these difficult problems by stimulating the cell tissue to a new growth and prevents the ugly life-marking Scar. Note the well-defined linear, circular shaped or rugged Scars, the result of immediate surgery for automobile accidents, and note the absence of all scars done by the Woodbury Method for correction of this so-called surgery.

It is of daily occurrence to have beautiful women call upon Woodbury to remove the Scars of a well-healed wound. The face is perfect save for this hideous mark. To these unfortunates the Woodbury System is a boon. The facial disfigurement is removed, the complexion restored, and, above all, the woman is given back happiness in the thought that her face is no longer an object for staring, curious sympathizers.

For over 35 years Woodbury has made a world-renowned success of Featural Surgery. Broken noses, Torn Lips, knife wounds in the Face, dog bites, and cat scratches have disfigured for life many a perfect shaped face until the Woodbury art of featureising has removed every trace of the blemish.

HEARST PRETTY SURE TO RUN FOR MAYOR

Congressman Will Head a City Ownership Ticket.

COLER, FORD, WARNER ON IT

At a meeting of believers in the principle of municipal ownership held last night at the Astor House it was decided to put a third ticket in the field on a municipal ownership platform. All of the leading advocates of municipal ownership who participated in the Fusion conferences were present. Prof. John A. Martin presided.

The meeting was preceded by a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Municipal Ownership League. William R. Hearst is the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and he invited the members to take luncheon with him in the afternoon to discuss the local political situation, especially with reference to the attitude which the Municipal Ownership League should take in the campaign. It was the unanimous decision of the committee that a third ticket should be nominated.

A member of the Executive Committee of the league, who was one of those who took luncheon with Mr. Hearst yesterday, said last night that the ticket of the Municipal Ownership Party had practically been decided upon, and would be as follows:

For Mayor—WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.
For Controller—BIRD S. COLER.
For District Attorney—JOHN DE WITT WARNER.

The meeting at the Astor House was in response to invitations sent out to about 150 prominent municipal ownership advocates. The invitation, which was marked "confidential," was signed by Alfred J. Boulton, Bird S. Coler, Durbin Van Vleck, Michael J. Flaherty, Timothy Healey, August H. Stebbins, and about a dozen others.

Every person who got one of the invitations must have responded, for there were fully 150, if not more, men in the Astor House parlor when the gathering was called to order by Prof. Martin. The room was so crowded that many of those present were unable to sit. Judge Samuel Seabury, John Ford, Melvin Palliser, Thomas Gilleran, and Max F. Ihmsen were among the notables who attended the meeting.

Some fiery speeches were made, the voices of the speakers being plainly hard out in Broadway. At intervals there were wild outbursts of applause.

Several of the conferrees of the Municipal Ownership League to the Fusion conferences and several prominent members of the Citizens' Union spoke, all of them declaring that the two regular organizations were not showing a proper amount of sympathy with municipal ownership doctrine, and it therefore behooved those who favored the municipal ownership and operation of public utilities to put a ticket of their own in the field.

"Ninety per cent. of the membership of the Citizens' Union will stand like a rock for this movement," shouted August H. Stebbins, one of the Citizens' Union leaders.

A resolution that a third ticket be nominated was offered. It was put through with great enthusiasm and without a single objection.

Then a resolution was adopted that a committee of seventeen be named to consider nominations and with power to confer with other organizations. Next came a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of five on permanent organization. That was passed, too. An adjournment for twenty minutes was then taken to give Prof. Martin an opportunity of naming the committees. The Committee on Nominations is as follows:

For the Republicans—H. B. Smith, W. G. Brown, and Irving Washburn.
For the Citizens' Union—August H. Stebbins, Timothy Healey, and John J. Young.
For the Labor Organizations—James Hatch, Alfred J. Boulton, and William A. Coakley.
For the Independent Democrats—Ben Doblin and Simon J. Levy.
For the Municipal Ownership League of Manhattan—Congressman Frank E. Shober, John Cody, and M. F. Driscoll.
For the Municipal Ownership League of Brooklyn—Michael J. Flaherty, Charles T. Adams, and J. Durbin Van Vleck.

Petitions for the nomination of Mr. Hearst were in circulation yesterday. It was said by his personal representatives last night that the circulation of the petitions was without any authority from Mr. Hearst, but that the results were most gratifying, showing as they did a strong sentiment in favor of Mr. Hearst becoming a candidate.

The Municipal Ownership Leaguers intend to hold a great mass meeting some evening this week.

It will probably be held in Madison Square Garden. The friends of Mr. Hearst are said to be anxious to get a good test of the extent of the sentiment in favor of municipal ownership before advising him publicly to declare his willingness to run for Mayor on a municipal ownership platform. But that he will run, unless the demonstration being arranged for this week should fall below expectations, those who lunched with him yesterday are said to have had assurances. If Mr. Hearst should decide not to run the candidate of the Municipal Ownership Party for Mayor will be Judge Seabury.

This statement was issued late last night by Judge Seabury, C. Augustus Haviland, John Palmer, Thomas Gilleran, and Melvin G. Palliser of the Municipal Ownership League:

"The Municipal Ownership League Headquarters have been besieged all day by citizens of all descriptions who insist that William R. Hearst should be the nominee for Mayor on an independent ticket. Mr. Hearst has been acquainted with the great popular demand for his services as leader in this crisis. His attitude seems to be that, while he believes a strong sentiment for municipal ownership exists, he is not convinced that there is the demand for his candidacy that was described to him. Under any circumstances, a third ticket will be put in the field."

Representatives of organized labor from all over town are to be induced, if possible, to call on Mr. Hearst and ask him to head a ticket.

POLICE FORCE STEEL DOORS.

Crowbars and Revolvers Used in a Union Square Raid.

Acting Captain Eggers with six detectives from Headquarters raided an alleged poolroom in Union Square at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon without taking Capt. Hussey of the East Twenty-second Street Station or Inspector Schmittberger into his confidence. Axes and crowbars were used in getting into the place. The police also drew their revolvers, but no shots were fired. There were about 250 men in the rooms.

The first door encountered by the police bore a sign which read: "Hair Dressing and Art Studio." But there was no evidence of a hair-dressing parlor or anything to indicate that art was studied there. The entrance to the rooms reminded one of that in a refrigerating plant, there being four thick doors shod with steel between the entrance and the inner rooms.

The first door was pried open, and Detective Jones, who is of slender build, squeezed through. On the other side he found a crowd of men, who promptly made for the rear. The other doors were forced in a similar way, until the raiders finally reached the rear room. There they were threatened by the crowd and drew their revolvers.

Those arrested and charged with aiding and abetting a poolroom were: John Gary of 300 Hudson Street, Louis Moore, 224 East 124th Street; Frank Nelson, 279 East Tenth Street; Samuel Morgan, 128 Second Avenue; Daniel Williams, 207 Jay Street; Thomas Estey, 69 Willoughby Street, Brooklyn; John Grundy, 22½ Patchen Avenue, Brooklyn.

After the raid Acting Captain Eggers said he thought that an injunction had been served on Capt. Hussey and Commissioner McAdoo, restraining them from interfering with the place. The police confiscated some telephones and racing charts.

TRIPLE PARK RUNAWAY.

It Was All Started by a Cranky Electric Cab—No Serious Hurts.

Central Park was the scene late yesterday afternoon of a series of runaways, started by a cranky electric cab. The cab butted into a wagonette, causing the horse attached to it to run into a vehicle ahead. Horse No. 2 took to his heels following the crash and ran into a third vehicle. Horse No. 3 started off full tilt and kept going for several blocks before it was brought to a stop by a mounted policeman.

The trouble began shortly before 5 o'clock, when the electric cab belonging to the New York Transportation Company, and driven by Henry Haarst, became uncontrollable at 106th Street and dashed up the East Drive. Just ahead was a wagonette driven by John Mulgren. When the crash came Mulgren and his daughter, who was with him, were thrown out.

The Mulgrew horse then started ahead at breakneck speed and about 100 yards further north humped into a buggy in which Thomas G. Corbin and his wife were enjoying an outing. Mr. and Mrs. Corbin were both tumbled out of their vehicle and their horse bolted.

Near 110th Street the Corbin horse ran afoul of a third surrey the occupants of which were Mrs. Dora Deizels and Miss May Jackson. The young women were thrown out and their horse joined the procession of runaways, all headed for the Park entrance at 110th Street.

Stationed at the One Hundred and Tenth Street entrance of the Park was Mounted Policeman Callan. Callan stopped the runaways, one after the other, and after securing them rounded up the six persons who had been dumped overboard. An ambulance surgeon was summoned, who, after dressing the bruises of the unfortunates, sent them all home.

Haarst, the driver of the electric cab, was arrested for reckless driving and locked up after he had put an end to its antics by running the machine into an embankment.

AUTO FLARES UP; FIVE HURT.

Narrow Escapes in Gasoline Explosion on H. O. Jamison's Car.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., Sept. 30.—Five persons were burned more or less seriously here to-night, when an automobile belonging to H. O. Jamison, a New York business man who lives at Montclair, N. J., took fire. The injured are Joseph Mechaley, a member of the automobile firm of Mechaley Brothers & Co. of Stamford; Walter Greeney, an assistant at the Mechaley garage; Lester Parker, son of Fire Chief Parker of Stamford; Bertram De Camp, son of a Brooklyn business man, and Gordon Wagner, a chauffeur.

Mr. Jamison was en route from Montclair to New Hampshire. The car stopped at the Mechaley garage for gasoline. Greeney filled a five-gallon can, and while he poured the gasoline into the tank of the car De Camp held the funnel. It seems that the gasoline was spilled over the heated exhaust pipe below the tank of the car.

Mr. Jamison, Mr. Mechaley, and young Parker were standing near by. Flames shot up from the tank into the face of Greeney, who dropped the can, and instantly the entire machine was a mass of flames. The blazing fluid was scattered over those who stood about the car. A cousin of Mr. Jamison, who was seated in the car, saved herself by a quick jump.

Mechaley was in flames from head to foot. He threw himself on the road and rolled over and over. Greeney's arms and face were badly burned. People who escaped the flames ran into the garage and procured chemical fire extinguishers. They dashed their contents over Mechaley and the burning car. To every one's surprise, Mechaley was not much injured. Young Greeney is the most painfully burt. The machine can be repaired.

PATTERSON MAY QUIT DAYTON.

National Cash Register President Rejects Demand of Printers.

Special to The New York Times.

DAYTON, Ohio, Sept. 30.—At a meeting of all employes this morning President John Patterson of the National Cash Register Company declared that the company would never sign the eight-hour agreement with the printers.

He said he was going away this evening. "I may be away a week or a year," he continued. "I have thought of leaving Dayton and never returning. That I believe would be the best thing to do, as I cannot stand the hard strain of labor difficulties."

The local Typographical Union will not take action until officially notified of the National Cash Register Company's decision. Thirty-five printers are employed by the company.

BROTHER FRANK'S KICK COST GATES $100,000

JOCKEY'S COSTLY MISTAKE

Used the Whip to Make a Sure Thing Surer, and the Horse Stopped, Kicked, and Lost.

The uncertainty of racing never had a better exemplification than was furnished in the sixth race at Brighton Beach yesterday afternoon, when a tantrum on the part of a race horse such as no turfman at the race course would say he ever saw before lost a plunge bet estimated at $50,000 for John W. Gates, and upset the surest thing, in prospect, of the day. The horse in question was the two-year-old Brother Frank, a colt which seems destined to sensational happenings. He is the horse which ten days ago at the Gravesend course won a race at odds of 200 to 1, surprising his stable then about as much as he surprised the general public. He has proved his worth since then, and on private form as well as on his running in public he looked unbeatable in his race yesterday. He actually was winning, and Mr. Gates's plunge looked all but safely landed, when, in resentment of being whipped, the colt stopped to kick and fight against his jockey just one jump short of the winning post, and so let up another horse to beat him by a head.

Brother Frank, a brown colt by Knight of the Thistle, is owned by C. E. (Boots) Durnell, the ex-jockey, now rated as one of the cleverest young trainers racing horses. It has been said that the Durnell stable is owned by John W. Gates, but this both Mr. Gates and Trainer Durnell deny, though it is widely known that Mr. Gates is a firm friend and great admirer of the ex-jockey. Trainer Durnell in the past has pulled off some big coups, and Mr. Gates has won large sums on the same coups, and the connection readily was understood when a plunge set in yesterday on Brother Frank, entered in a selling sprint at five and a half furlongs. The men who placed the money in the betting ring and through the clubhouse commissioners made no secret that they were betting for John W. Gates, and as the thousands poured in the odds against Brother Frank dropped rapidly from 2 to 1 at the opening to 10 to 9 on at the post. Eleven horses ran in the race, but Brother Frank justified the confidence reposed in him by breaking with the first flight, and at once going on to the lead, attended by Ala Russell. After a half mile he shook off Ala Russell, and, with a fair lead, seemed to be winning beyond any question. He was tiring a bit from his early effort, however, and as the others of the field closed on him a bit near the end, his jockey, Jack Martin, who, as sometimes happens when a great coup is planned, and much money is bet, had more than his retaining fee to consider, grew a trifle uneasy.

Half a dozen jumps from the post Martin looked back, and, seeing the other horses at his mount's heels, concluded that he would make a sure thing of it, and, drawing his whip, struck Brother Frank once. It was something new to the colt, and he evidently was surprised, for he jumped away from the whip, but kept running straight and drew a trifle away from his pursuers. Still they closed, but a jump from the winning post, Brother Frank had the race all but won, with a lead of nearly a length, when Martin, in his anxiety, struck him again. Then the unexpected happened. Punishment was something that the colt did not understand, and he showed his resentment by raising his heels to kick while striding on in the race, the colt, for just the fraction of a second, balancing on his forelegs, while his hind legs were launched out in energetic style in a vicious kick at the something which had hurt him. The halt was for an infinitesimal time, and then Brother Frank, while threatening to turn a somersault, caught his feet again. The surprised jockey on his back sat in wondering doubt as to what might come next.

Brother Frank, after venting his indignation, went on again as if his remarkable acrobatic performance was a matter of course, but he had delayed just long enough to lose the race, and the horse Aviston, owned by "Lucky Jack" McGinniss, and at 15 to 1 in the betting, had caught him and snatched the decision by a short head.

Accepting the ring estimate of Mr. Gates's bets on the colt as $50,000, for which amount he could not have averaged less than even money, Brother Frank's kick made a difference of $100,000 to Mr. Gates.

SUES TO ENJOIN ERIE DEAL.

Homer Lee Asks an Injunction—Has a Claim for $2,000,000.

A suit has been begun by Homer Lee against Eugene Zimmerman, President of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad; Henry F. Shoemaker, Frederick H. Prince, and Harry B. Hollins, Bernard J. Burke, Rafael R. Govin, and Briton N. Busch, the last four general partners in H. B. Hollins & Co., bankers, to show cause why an order shall not be made restraining and enjoining the defendants "from disposing of $2,000,000 worth of securities to J. P. Morgan and the Erie Railroad, or any other person or persons until the termination of this action."

The suit is brought in the Supreme Court and is on the calendar for hearing next Monday. It is the outgrowth of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton deal with the Erie Railroad, Mr. Lee seeking to restrain the sale to J. P. Morgan & Co. or to the Erie. The amount, $2,000,000, Mr. Lee contends, is due to him for commissions for his work in the combination of the Pere Marquette, the Toledo Terminal, and the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton.

When asked about the suit last night, Mr. Lee said:

"I have been forced to bring this suit. There was no alternative. The defendants made agreements which they did not live up to. It is time that it shall be appreciated what is being done.

"It is not long since one of these defendants came to me and asked that I pay him 10 per cent. on work I was doing for his company. This very man pretends that he does not know me now."

Frederick D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad, said he knew nothing whatever about such a suit.

LINER ALAMEDA ASHORE.

Vessel Bound for Honolulu Hits Rock in San Francisco Bay.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 30.—The Oceanic liner Alameda, Capt. Dodwell, bound for Honolulu with ninety-one passengers and an exceptionally valuable cargo, struck at 11:45 this morning on the jagged reef jutting out from Fort Point. A thick fog hung over the water, and no one could tell just where the vessel was; yet there was neither panic nor confusion, and the passengers were quickly transferred to tugs and brought back to this city.

The lifting of the fog almost immediately after the accident showed that the Alameda was standing upright on the reef that juts out from Fort Point several hundred feet. This is the same reef on which the steamer City of Rio Janeiro struck and went down with more than half her passengers.

Johnson, the pilot, gave the following account of the accident to-night:

"As we passed down the channel Capt. Dodwell suggested we might be a little too near Lime Point, and acting on this suggestion I steered off a little to the southwest. We heard nothing, and about 11:45 I was surprised to hear a warning whistle at Fort Point. Half a minute later the Alameda struck with a grating tremor, hard and fast. Then I realized where we were. Soon the fog lifted, and soundings showed there were four fathoms at the stern."

As soon as the steamer grounded the crew went to their stations, and the boats were promptly launched and filled with passengers, the lowering and manning being executed with great dispatch. Many tugs and launches went to the assistance of the vessel as the fog lifted and took off a number of the passengers.

Every effort is being made to pull the vessel from the rocks and there is a possibility that she may be saved. A force of men was sent out with instructions to discharge her cargo, which is valued at $100,000.

CITY HAS A THEATRE TO LET.

Both Syndicate and Anti-Syndicate Managers Bid on the Montauk.

As an experiment in municipal ownership New York may soon try its hand in the theatrical business. Report has it that the city has made arrangements to lease the old Montauk Theatre of Brooklyn which it bought some time ago, so that performances may be held there until the property is needed for the approach to the new Manhattan Bridge.

Politicians at the City Hall yesterday were much interested in the report. They figured that free passes to the theatre would be in order for political lieutenants.

The purchase of the Montauk Theatre by private contract caused some criticism of Controller Grout in the early Summer, the charge being made that too much had been paid for the property by the city and also that some of Controller Grout's personal friends had profited by the transaction.

"This does not look as if I had been working with the old theatre crowd," said the Controller yesterday. "If I had been I certainly should not now provide opposition for them in their own territory. I cannot say anything except that the city is trying to lease the property. Several offers have been received, and it looks as if the lease would go to a man who will use the building as a theatre. It is up to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund to approve or disapprove the lease, and until the matter comes before that body I can say nothing as to who is seeking the property."

It was learned last night that both syndicate and anti-syndicate managers—in fact, about every producing manager in the city—had put in bids for the control of the old Montauk Theatre. The Shuberts for the independents and Klaw & Erlanger for the syndicate have bid on the theatre.

TO STOP RAILROAD GRAFT.

Pennsylvania Official Forbids Employes to Accept Gifts.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 30.—Orders have gone out that grafting among employes of the Pennsylvania Road on the Middle Division must stop. An order was issued to-day by Supt. C. A. Preston which forbids employes accepting gifts from shippers on the company property.

The order is the result of trouble over four quarts of milk between two of the employes and the Sanitary Milk Company, Altoona. The Division Superintendent took advantage of this opportunity to send forth the ukase.

There is a great deal of ill-feeling among the men over this new rule, as oftentimes shippers, wishing to show their appreciation of good service on the part of the railroad employes, make gifts to them.

200 BAPTISTS IN PANIC ON A DARK STAIRWAY

NOT A MATCH TO BE FOUND

About 200 Baptists, who were attending a lecture on Russia, given by the Rev. Dr. Robert S. McArthur in Spencer Hall, at Eighth Avenue and 116th Street, last evening, were in a pitiable plight for a while because nobody had a match. Humorous as the experience seemed afterward to those who passed through it there was little laughter among them for the period of twenty minutes, and several women fainted.

The Baptists have been holding religious meetings in a tent on a vacant lot at 110th Street and Eighth Avenue. With the arrival of some cool nights the meeting place was moved to Spencer Hall, where the meetings will be continued during the Winter.

The announcement that Dr. McArthur would lecture on Russia drew a large crowd, many of them women. Besides Dr. McArthur, the Rev. Dr. Smith, the Rev. Dr. Mapleson, and the Rev. Dr. McGregor were on the platform.

The lecture hall is on the second floor of the building. It is reached by an elevator which opens on circuitous dark hallways.

When the lecture was over the elevator had stopped running. The march down the circuitous hallway was then begun. Somebody had turned out all the lights. When the first of the descending crowd got to the front door a loud cry was heard:

"Somebody has locked the door!"

Women began to snicker a little, as though the announcement were a joke, but everybody kept on going down.

"Don't crush!" was the warning now passed up along the dark stairway. The caution was poorly heeded, however, and everybody pushed on all the harder.

"A match! Has anybody got a match?" somebody yelled.

There were no smokers in this Baptist crowd and no match was to be had. The crowd was on the verge of a panic.

"What if there should be a fire now?" a voice whispered.

To add to the consternation of the crowd, wedged in the hallway like sardines, a woman announced that another woman had fainted near her.

At this moment a man joyously announced that he had found a match in his upper waistcoat pocket. He managed to light it, too. As soon as he found a gas jet it was discovered that the tip was off. That did not prevent the gas from flaring up luminously, and the situation was somewhat relieved.

A man climbing out of a window and the exit was thrown open. An investigation developed the information that the Irish janitor of the building had been told that the meeting in the hall was an A. P. A. affair, and had played what he evidently considered a practical joke upon the crowd.

WOMAN PRESIDENT QUITS.

Thinks Society Better Than a Railroad Presidency—Made Big Profit.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The only woman railway President in the United States quit public life to-day and went back to home life.

Mrs. Mary S. Holladay was President of the Williamsville, Greenville, and St. Louis Railroad. She negotiated the sale of the property for a million dollars, and received the money at the National Bank of Commerce in this city to-day. The road, though only sixty miles long, is one of the best feeders in Southern Missouri. The purchasing syndicate is headed by John S. Long of Kansas City, who will succeed Mrs. Holladay as President.

At the Planters' Hotel to-night, Mrs Holladay was in high spirits. "I guess I have made more money in the last ten months than any woman in America," she said. "I liked being at the head of a big enterprise, but it burdens a woman and she drops out of society. I will move to St. Louis now and return to society for a while.

"What made me go after the Presidency was that I could not have any pass while I was a Director, so I got the Presidency. Then I had all the passes wanted."

SUEZ CANAL STILL BLOCKED.

Explosion Caused Channel to Fill In—To Reopen by Oct. 8.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The Suez Canal Company to-day made public the following statement:

"The soundings taken after the blowing up of the British steamer Chatham show that the channel has filled in to a depth of 5 meters across the entire width, for a distance of 80 meters. It seems that the débris projected on the western side can be removed with shears without having recourse to explosives. Draggings establish that the channel is entirely free at the north from Kilometer 18 and at the south from Kilometer 19.

"We expect day transit to be resumed Oct. 8 at the latest."

THREE KIDNAPPING ARRESTS.

Police Suspect a Former Employe of Brooklyn Boy's Father.

Three arrests were made by the Brooklyn police last night in connection with the disappearance of six-year-old Antonio Maracandina from his home, at 586 Seventeenth Street, on Sunday last. The prisoners are Salvator Picona, his wife, Simonetta, and Salvator Lafata of 569 Twentieth Street.

The police say that Picona at one time worked for the father of the missing boy. According to the police, Picona called on the father several times and demanded money for the return of his son. The father, terrified by the threats of the "Black Hand," the police say, let Picona come in the back way, so they couldn't see him.

The police intercepted a letter to the father in which it was said that a letter containing directions as to the payment of the money for the return of the boy awaited him at the New York Post Office. The police got this letter and then made the arrests.

CAPITAL THRONGS OUT TO CHEER ROOSEVELT

No Other President Ever So Honored by Washington.

MRS. ROOSEVELT IS RADIANT

Chief Executive Kept Standing in Carriage as It Drives from Station to White House.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The return of President Roosevelt to Washington after his summering at Oyster Bay was marked by a demonstration by the people of Washington such as was never before seen in the capital.

The return of a President is a familiar incident. It is usually a mere passing incident. Crowds never gather, and the occurrence is simply a whirl of three or four carriages rapidly up Pennsylvania Avenue, in one of which those who have a quick eye sometimes distinguish the features of the Chief Magistrate of the Nation.

To-night the President's homecoming was an ovation. He was received at the station by the District Commissioners and all the Cabinet members who were in the city, together with a score of Government officials.

In the afternoon both sides of the avenue had been roped off, as they are at inauguration or other great demonstrations. The Marine Band concert in the White House grounds was hurried to a finish an hour earlier than usual, and the crowds there and from all parts of the city poured out and down to Pennsylvania Avenue. By 6:30 o'clock both sides of the great thoroughfare from the Pennsylvania Station to the White House were crowded. Business houses were thickly decorated with the National colors.

The Presidential train came into the station at 6:19 o'clock. On the platform were assembled a dozen or more officials. At their head was Mr. West, the District Commissioner, who was in charge of the arrangements for the welcome, and who was the first to shake the President's hand as he stepped from the train. With the President were his Secretary of State, Mr Root, and Mrs. Root, and the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Shaw. Secretary Hitchcock, Postmaster General Cortelyou, Mr. Quesada, the Cuban Minister; Dr. Rixey, the Surgeon General of the Navy; Mr. Palmer, the Marshal for the District of Columbia, and others met them.

A cheer went up as the crowd inside the station caught sight of the President. It was taken up by the crowds outside and passed along as the President was recognized.

Mr. Roosevelt shook hands first with the Cabinet members and other officials. He then gave Mrs. Roosevelt his arm and walked slowly to his carriage, which was waiting at the Sixth Street entrance. As he reached the locomotive he thanked the engineer for his safe trip, and stopped to shake his hand.

In the carriage with the President were Mrs. Roosevelt, Ethel, Kermit, and Quentin. Quentin sat on the box with the coachman. The Cabinet and the other members of the party followed in carriages to the White House. The President frequently arose and bowed to the crowds on both sides of the avenue, and during the latter part of the drive the "hurrahs" became so enthusiastic that the President stood most of the time. Mrs. Roosevelt was greatly pleased with the greeting, and her face was radiant as she bowed to the right and left.

The White House was illuminated from basement to attic, bathing the whole white structure in a soft, radiant glow. A group of newspaper men and others had assembled to witness the President's return and to share in the greeting to him. He assisted Mrs. Roosevelt to alight, and walked with her up into the porch. Then he turned and said:

"I am deeply sensible of the great honor that has been shown me in this demonstration, and I am very glad to come back to such a greeting."

Turning quickly, he strode in between the heavy glass doors.

Mrs. William Loeb, Jr., wife of the secretary to the President, who is ill with fever, was taken from the President's train to her home, where it is understood she is resting quietly this evening.

FAREWELL AT OYSTER BAY.

The village of Oyster Bay was gorgeous with flags and bunting when President Roosevelt and his family left it at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. A large crowd was gathered at the station to see him off. Schoolgirls in white, with small American flags in their hands, were grouped near the platform.

Above the door through which the party was to walk had been placed a symbolic flower piece—a white dove on the wing above the National coat of arms, and the word "Peace" beneath. Around this emblem were grouped the colors of the United States, Japan, and Russia.

On the platform, which had been roped off for the occasion, stood twenty young women in white, with shoulder knots of blue and red. As the Presidential party boarded the train they sang, "God Be With You Till We Meet again."

With the President were Mrs. Roosevelt and Ethel, Archie and Quentin Roosevelt. Archie was hugging a small dog that looked as if it had eaten its own pedigree. The dog went along to Washington.

The President stood on the rear platform of the last car till the train was well under way. He was visibly moved, and lifted his hat repeatedly in acknowledgment of the cheers raised by the crowd. As he was borne away he waved his hand and shouted:

"Good-bye and good luck!"

The train was made up of three passenger cars, two of which carried the secretaries and members of the clerical force stationed at Sagamore Hill during the Summer. Secretary Loeb and his wife were not on board. On account of Mrs. Loeb's recent illness they had to make the trip to Jersey City on board the Sylph.

At several stations along the road great crowds had gathered to greet the Chief Executive, and as the Presidential train rushed past without stopping, they cheered lustily, President Roosevelt replying by waving his handkerchief.

At 11:02 the train pulled into Long Island City. The usual precautions had been taken by the police. The walk from the station to the ferry was roped off and guarded by Inspector Nally with fifty uniformed policemen and a squad of plain clothes men. The Long Island Railroad's ferryboat Nassau was used to carry the Presidential party to Jersey City, leaving at 11:15 o'clock. The embarkation occupied but a few moments, the police opening the gates only to let the party pass through.

The Nassau made Jersey City at 11:55, landing at the pier of the Adams Express Company. In the Pennsylvania station was waiting a train made up of a combination car, a dining car, a parlor car, and the private car Plymouth Rock, reserved for the President and his family. Before going ashore President Roosevelt went down to the engine room of the Nassau to have a chat with Engineer Truworthy.

The northern half of the railroad station had been roped off. Chief of Police Murphy and a force of thirty men were on guard. In the other half of the station several hundred persons were waiting. Among them was an aged man carrying a small American flag. As soon as the President appeared he waved his flag, whereupon the President gave orders to admit him within the ropes. He was H. G. Otis Smith, a nonogenarian, who had written to the President asking for permission to shake hands, telling also of the flag he would use as a signal.

"You are a very good American," said Mr. Roosevelt as he patted the delighted old man.

On board the train the President was joined by his sister, Mrs. Cowles, and by Dr. C. F. Stokes. Secretary and Mrs. Loeb had arrived forty-five minutes earlier, Mrs. Loeb being carried from the Sylph to the train on a stretcher. The train started at 1:23 o'clock as the second section of the regular 1:14 train.

A report was circulated yesterday about a lunatic of foreign birth and Anarchistic tendencies having escaped from the Manhattan Asylum and being bent on making an attack on the President. Inspector Nally at Long Island City and Chief Murphy at Jersey City denounced the story as false, denying that they had taken any extraordinary precautions on that account.

PRESIDENT IN ACCIDENT.

OYSTER BAY, Sept. 30.—An accident to the President's carriage to-day might have had serious results if the ancient vehicle had been going fast at the time the President was riding to the station.

Mr. Roosevelt's other carriages had all gone ahead to Washington, and he was riding in an old trap that has been used for years. He was on the back seat with his wife and son. Quentin, when the Secret Service men who were following in another vehicle saw the rear axle of the vehicle give way.

They shouted a warning, and the President threw a protecting arm around Mrs. Roosevelt and his son, as the back part of the vehicle struck the ground. The coachman quickly brought the horses to a standstill, and Mr. Roosevelt helped his wife and son out of the wagon. No one was hurt, and he laughed over the mishap. Another carriage was brought from a near-by stable and the trip was resumed.

ONCE SAVED ROCKEFELLER.

Man Who Rescued Him in Riding Accident Gets an Invitation.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 30.—Henry Wagner of 22 Vassar Street, who forty-eight years ago saved the life of John D. Rockefeller, will visit Mr. Rockefeller at his Forest Hill home next week.

Seven years ago Wagner was well-to-do. Besides having valuable oil interests, he owned the Sweaton & Haskell Company's holdings in mining property. Through desperate competition of the Standard Oil Company he was forced to the wall and is now a poor man. This fact came to light to-day.

Wagner accompanied the deputation of business men who on Tuesday last called at Forest Hill. Here he renewed acquaintance with Mr. Rockefeller, who recalled the time when, being then in the employ of the Moorhouse Company, he was thrown from a horse he was riding and dragged on the ground. He would have been killed had not Wagner rushed to the street and at the risk of his own life stopped the horse. On Wednesday Wagner wrote the following note to Mr. Rockefeller:

"Sincere thanks for your praises and kind expressions. May I have the honor of seeing you again?"

To-day he received a reply, inviting him to be a guest at Forest Hill some week day.

J. T. McCADDON ARRESTED.

American Whose Circus Failed Accused of Fraudulent Bankruptcy.

SOUTHAMPTON, England, Sept. 30.—Joseph T. McCaddon, who was head of the McCaddon Circus, was to-day arrested on a warrant, charging him with fraudulent bankruptcy as he was embarking on the American liner St. Louis for New York. On board the St. Louis was the coffin containing the body of Mr. McCaddon's wife, who died in London last week.

The warrant was issued at the request of the French authorities in connection with the recent collapse of the McCaddon Circus in France.

Mr. McCaddon, who is detained by the police of Southampton, will be brought to the Bow Street Court, London, for extradition proceedings.

The circus of which Mr. McCaddon was the manager was stranded at Grenoble, France, about Aug. 10, after a season of continuous misfortune. On Aug. 21 the French Foreign Office advised the American Embassy regarding the pitiable condition of 250 employes of the circus, men, women, and children, who were then virtually in pawn in Grenoble.

The French authorities allowed them a small pittance daily for their subsistance. Finally Henry Vignaud, American charge d'Affaires, and Consul General Gowdy called the attention of the American public to the circus people's straits. Contributions for their relief were made by various persons, and finally they were enabled to sail for home.

The Grenoble authorities sought to sell the horses, vans, and other property of the circus for the purpose of relieving the destitute Americans, but the customs officials declined to permit this on the ground that bonds had been given for the return of the property to the United States.

STUDENT WORKER ACCUSED.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Raleigh D. Morrill of Stratford, Vt., a student at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was arrested at the South Station to-day, charged with the theft of a trunk and a bag, the contents of which are valued at $200.

Morrill has been working as a substitute baggagemaster on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad during the Summer. In the past three months large quantities of baggage have been reported missing at the South Station.

OFFICIALS ACT AS YARDMEN.

Men Strike on Grand Trunk, But Now Seek Conference.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Railroad officials worked as switchmen to-day in the yards of the Grand Trunk Road, where the yardmen struck last night. Division Superintendent F. W. Egan, Assistant Superintendent W. E. Costello, Yardmaster M. J. Conron, and others assisted a handful of non-union men to make up trains.

There is little likelihood that the trouble will be extended. The strikers, less than fifty in number, held a meeting to-day and determined to send a committee to call upon Supt. Egan in an effort to reach a settlement.

CLUE TO CHECK FORGER; ARREST EXPECTED SOON

ORGANIZED GANG SUSPECTED

A man suspected of being the chief accomplice in the swindle by which $360,000 worth of securities were obtained from the National City Bank on a forged check last Wednesday, was being kept under surveillance by Pinkerton detectives last night.

Another important development yesterday, which, it is said, sent the sleuths on the trail of this suspect was the discovery of the establishment from which was obtained the rubber stamp used in forging the certification of the Hanover National Bank on the bogus check for $300,037.50. This check was passed to the loan clerk of the National City Bank, when the Pesri & Co. collateral was obtained.

An impression is gaining ground that the swindle was perpetrated by some organized gang that had been watching for an opportunity for some time, perhaps preparing to do other jobs of a similar nature, had they been successful in this particular operation. On this theory the Pinkertons have had some of their ablest agents out looking up forgers, swindlers, and confidence men to see if any were missing from their haunts.

No part of the stolen securities has turned up in the market or in any of the transfer offices or Clearing Houses. It has been suggested that the swindlers may be occupying themselves with efforts to alter the face of the certificates, preparatory to negotiating them. This idea is pooh-poohed by Wall Street men, who declared that this would be about as easy as to turn out counterfeit paper money.

Bonds and stocks certificates, it was pointed out are as a rule manufactured by the same concerns that manufacture bank notes, and with as much care to prevent falsification. The spaces where the numbers on the certificates, the names of the holders, and the value are printed are protected against forgeries by an elaborate background of scrollwork, which would vanish and have to be renewed the moment aelds were applied to obliterate the text.

About the only method it is considered likely the swindlers might adopt to realize on the stolen securities now would be to try and strike as good a bargain as they could for their return to the bank. In this way they are likely to fail. The National City Bank is a member of the American Bankers' Association, under whose auspices the Pinkertons are working. It is one of the principles of that association not to pay a cent that might put a premium on crime.

One statement authorized at the office of the Pinkerton agency yesterday was that never for a moment had suspicion rested on Alfred R. Goslin of any complicity in the affair. Mr. Goslin attained notoriety in the Dean syndicate swindle some years ago and the attack on Brooklyn Rapid Transit.

Goslin read in a morning paper that the Pinkertons were anxious to have a talk with him in connection with the National City Bank affair. He called the agency up on the telephone at once, asked if they wanted him, and received a negative reply. The Pinkerton agency then, at Goslin's request, sent Assistant Superintendent Norman T. Bailey to see him.

Mr. Bailey spent half an hour in Goslin's office, and said that he had a very satisfactory chat.

Goslin, after his talk with the Pinkerton man, also pronounced the interview most satisfactory. Goslin looks as plump and prosperous as ever. He has grown a black Van Dyke beard. He has two offices in the Vanderbilt Building, at 132 Nassau Street. His name does not appear on the door of either.

To one of his offices, on the seventh floor, which has the sign "Law Offices" on the door, access is gained through a narrow hall, and few pass the nervous, alert young clerk who unfastens the door when anybody knocks. Goslin receives his callers at a lawyer's office on the eleventh floor.

"Why did you send for Mr. Bailey?" Goslin was asked.

"Oh, just to have a talk with him. We had a very pleasant conversation. We discussed a good many things which I cannot talk about. Mr. Bailey told me some things which I wish I could tell you. I have reason to believe that the Pinkertons are close on the track of the swindler and that there will be an arrest soon. Then you will find that Goslin had nothing to do with this thing."

Goslin seemed to resent that, after the reputation he has built up for himself, he should be suspected of having a hand in anything as "crude" as the City Bank affair.

"That clumsy swindle was perpetrated by some green hand in Wall Street who used a stupid dummy," said he. "I make my money too well—mind you, cents, I am not saying too easy, but too well—to be diverted to any trick as crude and clumsy as this.

"No, this is all so raw and simple and stupid that the merest novice ought to feel ashamed of it. It's my opinion some office boy lost his head and thought those securities would be as valuable in his pocket as they were in the hands of other people. Only a fool would pick out the National City Bank for his victim, anyhow. The man who has those securities will never realize a cent on them. He has got a white elephant on his hands; that's about all."

DYING BOY'S PLUCK.

Calmly Uttered Farewell Message After Accidental Shooting.

WILLINGTON, Conn., Sept. 30.—While gunning with other boys this afternoon John Toberman, aged sixteen years, accidentally shot and killed himself. The boys were crossing an open field about a mile east of South Willington when Toberman exclaimed that he would show them how to be soldiers. He brought his gun in front with a sudden motion, and, the muzzle hitting his chest, the weapon was discharged.

He fell into the arms of a boy who was behind him and died within five minutes. He was conscious and said to his companions:

NEWPORT, Sept. 30.—The Naval War College closed its Summer sessions to-day. The sessions, which began July 1, have been in the nature of conferences, with no class work, as formerly. Under Capt. Charles S. Sperry, the President of the college, no publicity has been given to the sessions. Mrs. Bindloss Held in $10,000.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Sept. 30.—Mrs. George Bindloss, who on Sunday morning last is alleged to have shot Stephen M. Crocker at her home, was arraigned this afternoon before Judge Coit, in the Police Court, on a charge of assault with intent to kill, and held in bonds of $10,000, furnished by friends of the woman's husband. Crocker is in the Memorial Hospital suffering from a bullet which entered the abdomen. The cause of the shooting, according to Mrs. Bindloss's story, was Crocker's act in forcing an entrance into her home.

JERSEY CITY WATER HITCH.

Company Tenders Its Plant and Asks to See the Money, Please.

Officers and counsel of the Jersey City Water Supply Company formally tendered to Mayor Fagan for the city yesterday the new water plant at Boonton. At the same time they demanded payment of the contract price, $7,505,000. The contract provided that, if the city was not ready to accept and pay for the plant on Oct. 1, 1905, the price should be increased to $7,905,000.

Corporation Counsel Record replied that the tender could not be accepted for the reason that the water plant was not completed. He served on the company's officers certified copies of resolutions adopted by the Street and Water Board directing him to bring suit to compel the company to complete the plant according to contract. The question was put to counsel whether the company was willing to make any reduction in price on account of the uncompleted work.

"About how much reduction do you want?" asked the company's counsel.

"About a million dollars," said Mr. Record.

"Let us see your money first," was the reply. "It will be time enough to talk of a reduction afterward."

Mr. Record later said that the city had not been able to float the water bonds.

SUIT CASE TRAGEDY HUNT.

Boston Police Now Seeking for a Missing Druggist.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—The State and city police are understood to be searching for a South End druggist in connection with the Winthrop suit case tragedy. This druggist, who is said to have been missing for about a week, is thought to answer closely the description of the man who bought from Pawnbroker Joseph Berkman the suit case in which the torso of a woman was found on Thursday of last week.

This afternoon the police began a search of all the vacant houses in Winthrop with a view of finding evidence that would show that the woman was dismembered in that town. This inquiry is in line with the theory of the Winthrop officers that the girl may have died in one of the many cottages used by Summer residents.

Godfrey Hyams, a clerk in an Atlantic Avenue tobacco store, to-day identified the dress suit case found floating off T wharf, part of which was recovered yesterday afternoon, as belonging to two sailors who had left the case in his store last week. It had been suggested that this case might be the second light suit case sought by the police and thought to contain some of the dismembered parts of the woman victim.

"DEAD MAN" WALKED AWAY.

Dr. Abbott, Who Called the Police, Then Arrested for His Pains.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Sept. 30.—While on his way home to Fleetwood, a suburb of Mount Vernon, to-night, Dr. Frank Abbott of New York thought he saw a dead man. He rushed into the home of ex-Supervisor Albert S. Jenks and telephoned to the police station for a patrol wagon.

Sergt. Grant sent several policemen off to Fleetwood. They did not find any dead man, but decided that Dr. Abbott needed police care, and arrested him on a charge of having sent in a false alarm. It developed later that the supposed dead man was only intoxicated and had walked away before the police arrived. Dr. Abbott gave the police a fight before they landed him in a cell.

SWING IS TO JEROME IN REPUBLICAN RANKS

Leaders Favor Indorsing Him If Tammany Fails To.

MURPHY FACES A PROBLEM

Casting Up Chances of Rivalry to McClellan in the State—Jerome Will Win, Wigwam Fears.

Sentiment in the Republican ranks appears to be swinging back to Jerome. Some of the district leaders, who spoke against his indorsement when the matter was under consideration in the conference at the Republican Club early in the week, yesterday declared in favor of Jerome's nomination by the Republican County Convention in the event that the Tammany convention left him off its ticket.

It is realized by the Republican leaders that it would be useless for them to make an effort to get a pledge from Jerome that he would not accept a Tammany nomination. The organizations must either take him up as an independent or let him alone. Should the Democratic County Convention leave Jerome's name off, the Republicans could name him with perfect assurance, it is said, that he would be anti-Tammany to the end of the campaign, for Tammany could not then take off its ticket the name of the man selected for District Attorney.

It begins to be apparent that the problem as to what is to be done with Jerome is one for Charles F. Murphy. If Murphy concludes that the Democrats should not indorse Jerome he will be confronted with the possibility, which now seems a probability, that Jerome's popularity will be made an asset of the Republicans.

There is no doubt among Tammany leaders that Tammany can win without Jerome, but, in view of the common understanding that McClellan is to be the Democratic candidate for Governor next year, Murphy may conclude that it would not be good politics for him to decide upon a course which would have a tendency to reduce the majority for McClellan.

On the other hand, if Jerome should be placed on the Tammany ticket, the Republicans would then be compelled to indorse him, and he would be elected without real opposition, which might make him a formidable candidate for Governor as against McClellan. That phase of the situation is not lost sight of by the Tammany leaders who call for indorsement of Jerome. Their argument is that Tammany should first make absolutely sure of the city election before figuring on State politics. Besides, they hold that with D. B. Hill on the retired list and Tammany for McClellan, Jerome could not be formidable for the Gubernatorial nomination as against the Mayor.

A Jerome banner was thrown across Broadway at Twenty-eighth Street yesterday. It is the first political banner to be raised for the present campaign. It attracted a great deal of attention and brought many hundreds to the headquarters of Mr. Jerome in the Gilsey House to sign his petition. On the banner raised yesterday and on all the Jerome banners which will be put out, there is conspicuously displayed the Jerome emblem, a black square. Lithographs of Mr. Jerome were also hung yesterday at every elevated and Subway station in New York.

Brooklyn Republican leaders came over to the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday and gave the boom of ex-Lieut. Gov. Woodruff for the Mayoralty nomination their verbal assistance. They said the information that Woodruff had been solicited was true, and they sincerely hoped he would see his way clear to accept.

"The nomination of Woodruff," said Harry Ralston, "would insure the election of the Republican county ticket in Kings. There is no doubt in my mind that Woodruff could carry Brooklyn as the Republican candidate for Mayor by a handsome majority. He would get the full Republican vote and he would get more Democratic votes than any other man who could be named. Brooklyn Republicans are anxious to have him make the race."

The talk among the Republicans was that, in the event of Woodruff's declining the nomination, the next best man whom the Republicans could select to head the ticket was Attorney General Julius M. Mayer. It was said that Mr. Mayer would not have to resign his present State office to make the canvass for the Mayoralty.

REPUBLICANS FOR DOOLEY?

Report That They May Take Up the Deposed Kings Leader.

It was said yesterday that Senator McCarren's proposal that Matthew E. Dooley be renominated for County Register in Kings was made with the idea of circumventing a scheme on the part of the Brooklyn Republican leaders more than with a view to placating James Shevlin and his followers. The tale had it that local Republican leaders have been scheming to name Dooley on their ticket, thinking thereby to gain the support of anti-McCarren Democrats. According to the story, when Senator McCarren heard of this move he aimed to block it.

Michael E. Butler, who made the fight for McCarren in the Twelfth District in the recent primaries and wrested the leadership from Dooley, has taken a determined stand against the renomination of Dooley.

It was believed last night that the idea of renominating Dooley would be abandoned. None of the Republican leaders would admit any knowledge of the scheme to name Dooley on the Republican ticket.

WHITEHOUSE FOR THE BENCH.

Democrats Refuse to Indorse Burr's Nomination in Kings.

The Democrats of the Second Judicial District, in convention in the Kings County Court House yesterday, named Samuel Stewart Whitehouse for Justice of the Supreme Court.

The committee appointed at the Republican Convention on Friday to request the Democratic Convention to indorse Joseph A. Burr, the Republican candidate, failed to put in an appearance. It was headed off on the way to the Court House and told that there would be no indorsement.

Samuel S. Whitehouse was born in Portsmouth, N. H., forty-seven years ago, and has lived in Brooklyn ever since he was a boy. He studied law in the office of Morris & Pearsall and was admitted to the bar in 1879. For seventeen years he was in partnership with ex-Judge Samuel D. Morris.

Ex-Bank President Lear Convicted.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—Henry Lear, formerly President of the Doylestown (Penn.) National Bank, was convicted in the United States District Court to-day of willful misapplication of the funds of the institution. He had been tried twice before for the offense, the trial in each instance resulting in a disagreement of the jury. Pending an appeal bail was increased by Judge McPherson from $7,500 to $10,000.

"INSANE," SAID THE JUD[GE]

And Things Looked Dark for Re[agan] Till a Great Light Broke.

"You are insane."

When Peter Reagan heard this v[erdict] as to his mental condition pronounc[ed] in the Gates Avenue Court yesterda[y] Magistrate Higginbotham, he almos[t] collapsed. Two court officers stepped [and] seized him.

"Insane?" Reagan gasped when [he] recovered from his astonishment. "[Why,] my dear Judge, my mental equilibri[um] as well poised as your own."

"Tut, tut," answered the Magis[trate,] as he curiously gazed at Reagan [and] "I know better. I have a notice here [from] the medical examiners of the Depar[tment] of Charities, which declares you to [be] insane."

"Try and see," protested Re[agan.] "Give me any problem in mathem[atics,] and if I don't solve it correctly I'll [de]cide by your decision. Ask me any que[stion] pertaining to United States histor[y or] geography, and if I don't answer I'll believe myself that there is some[thing] wrong with one of the convolutions o[f my] brain."

"It is all a mistake," Adams info[rmed] the court. "The clerk in the Depart[ment] of Charities made out the report o[f the] doctors on the wrong paper. He us[ed a] form which is filled out for the insan[e in]stead of the one which pronounces p[eople] mentally sound."

"Accept my most humble apology," said the Magistrate to Reagan. "You may go."

Reagan did not require any urging. He stood not upon the order of his going, but left at once.

GAVE A BAD CHECK.

MINEOLA, L. I., Sept. 30.—George Rothmann of Sea Cliff, son of the late George Rothmann, for many years the President of the East Side Bank, Manhattan, was arraigned to-day before Justice George Tatem on a charge of forgery in the second degree. He was held for examination, and in default of $4,000 bail was sent to the county jail.

Rothmann was arrested on the fairgrounds last night on the complaint of Peter Goode, a horseman of Paterson, N. J., who owns the horse Marie Standard, which won a race here on Thursday. Rothmann saw the horse win and afterward went to Goode and offered to buy the animal. It was agreed that $200 should be paid down to clinch the bargain. In payment thereof Rothman is said to have offered a check for $[illegible]00, payable to H. Breene Son, indorsed by George Rothmann and reindorsed by William Weeks.

When the check was presented at the bank payment was refused, and it is alleged that it was found to have been altered from $200 to $4,000. Goode made a complaint to George Smith, a court officer, who arrested Rothmann.

MRS. CHADWICK IS FAILING.

Has Incipient Tuberculosis as a Result of Imprisonment.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30.—Mrs. Chadwick has contracted incipient tuberculosis, the result of her long confinement in the County Jail here.

She has aged much in the last few months. The lines on her face have grown deeper, her hair grayer, and her eyes have lost their lustre. Lately she has denied herself to callers almost entirely. She professes to be satisfied and confident of the future. She says she has been persecuted, and some of her old-time force shows in her voice and appearance when she discusses the possibility of confounding her persecutors.

Arguments will be made Monday in Cincinnati before the United States District Court of Appeals for a new trial for the woman. Her attorneys allege numerous errors in the trial resulting in her conviction before Judge Taylor here.

It is said that the road is a part of George Gould's plan to practically duplicate the Southern Pacific system in California.

FRENCH AMBASSADOR BACK AT HIS POST

M. Jusserand Refuses to Discuss Venezuelan Affairs.

MOROCCAN CASE PLEASES HIM

Declares the Success of the Portsmouth Conference a Triumph for Roosevelt.

M. Jusserand, the French Ambassador at Washington, and Mme. Jusserand, arrived from France on La Lorraine yesterday. The Ambassador had as a fellow-passenger Capt. Fournier, the French Military Attaché at Washington, who was one of the aides appointed by the French Ministry of War to serve on the staff of Lieut. Gen. Chaffee during the recent manoeuvres of the French Army.

Ambassador Jusserand denied the report that he had bastened his return to the United States as a result of the friction between Venezuela and the French Cable Company. However, he caught the first train for Washington.

"I have been on the water a week," said M. Jusserand, "and in that time much could have happened. My only anxiety is to get to Washington. As for the Venezuelan affair, it is much the same trouble you in this country have had over the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company."

"Will France make a naval demonstration against Venezuela?" was asked.

"I can tell you nothing at present," he replied. "There are many cables awaiting me in Washington, and I cannot map out my plans now."

"Would France join with the United States in making such a demonstration?"

"I am not in a position to answer that question. If she did, it would not be the first time the two countries have acted together," and the Ambassador smiled.

"I suppose you know that the Moroccan question has been settled to the satisfaction of Germany and France?" M. Jusserand was told.

"I have just heard that," he replied, "and I am indeed happy to hear it."

M. Jusserand then referred to President Roosevelt, saying:

"The successful termination of the peace conference was received with universal rejoicing in France, and the result is that the President of the United States is very popular over there. It was indeed a splendid triumph for Mr. Roosevelt—a great diplomatic victory."

Gained Fame by Staying in Jail.

ANSONIA, Conn., Sept. 30.—William Carter of this city, a brass molder, who gained notoriety several years ago by remaining in jail in New Haven twenty months rather than pay a small poll and military tax, died to-day in the New Haven Hospital. BOY SLEUTH NIPS A ROBBERY

You'll Make a Good Citizen, Says the Magistrate—Caught Three Men.

On the testimony of a fifteen-year-old boy, Joseph Falolico, whose parents live at 150 Elizabeth Street, three men were held for the Grand Jury yesterday in the Tombs Court, charged with robbing a store. The men were Charles Foley and John King of Boston and William Dunn, alias Lipton, who says he lives at 20 North Moore Street.

Falolico is an office boy for a shoe dealer at 167 Bowery. The store runs through to 240 Elizabeth Street. Young Falolico's home is near by. About 2:30 o'clock yesterday morning he says he heard men breaking in the store. He got up and dressed. In a short time three men came out of the store, each with a bag over his shoulder. Falolico followed them until they got to Marion and Spring Streets, where Policeman Breen of the Mulberry Street Station was on post. The boy told the policeman what he had seen, and Breen arrested the three men.

When the men were arraigned in court yesterday the proprietor of the shoe store, Jacob Blyn, said the shoes found in the possession of the prisoners were his. When young Falolico had given his testimony Magistrate Mayo said:

"You are a bright boy, and in a few years you will make a good citizen."

LONELINESS THE CAUSE OF VALENTINE'S SUICIDE

He Thought No One Understood Him and Became Misanthropic.

HIS AVERSION TO TIPPING

Generous in All Else, He Said the Practice Degraded Servants—His Wards in the City Hall Park.

Herbert Valentine, who killed himself Friday afternoon in his apartments at the Hotel St. Andrew, Seventy-second Street and Broadway, did so because he was lonely, and because he thought the world didnt understand him. There were many who knew and some who sincerely liked him, and when they learned yesterday morning of the suicide they were not surprised.

He had been in more than his usual state of unhappiness since his return from a trip to Europe about a month ago. His announced purpose in going with a group of tourists, when, with his means he could have traveled without the discomforts of such a journey, was to see if he could make friends with his fellow-passengers.

He often said that he had never had one close friend in his life, other than his widowed mother, and after her death a year and a half ago in their fine old home, 177 Madison Avenue, he was absolutely alone. While she was alive he had never thought of marrying. When she was gone he feared that at 50 he was too old to seek a helpmate and companion.

On the trip abroad, including a visit to the Holy Land, Egypt, and the Mediterranean ports, the others in the party of more than a hundred formed their individual friendships and gathered in congenial company about the decks and on the railroad trains, but Valentine wandered among them alone. They did not understand him, and he did not understand them. When one of the sailors was hurt he was the first to subscribe liberally to a benefit fund, a surprise to the others, who had seen him quarrel about a penny when he thought he was being imposed upon.

Another thing the others noticed was that he never tipped the servants, although it was evident that he was a man of large means. This gave him the reputation of being close fisted and not good company. The others did not know that he gave liberally to many charities, and that he was always generous toward the unfortunate.

They did not know that the loungers in City Hall Park had profited so largely by his generosity that the sum amounted to more each year than many people who are carefully and considerately served spend in several years of tipping. Any man broken down by drink could go to him with a tale of woe and get from 50 cents to a dollar. It was a saying about the benches in the park that "the little old fellow in the Morton Building was good any time for a drink, a feed, and a bed."

His fellow-voyagers looked upon him as a moody man, who cared for no one other than himself. He had never told them that he refused to tip because he believed the practice degrading.

On his return Valentine tried to tell his acquaintances that he had had a good time. It was evident to Walter R. Beach, who occupied offices with Samuel H. Valentine, the suicide's brother, that the man he had known many years was in a bad mental state.

Valentine told him that no one liked him and he was lonely. He said that the waiters at the hotel would stand in groups in the corner of the dining room to whisper about him. He would gladly help any of them at any time, but would not bribe them to be polite to him.

Mr. Beach advised him to renew his former custom of bicycle riding, go home hungry enough to make the waiters hustle and tired enough to go to sleep when others were starting to the theatre.

"There would be no one to ride with," said Valentine.

"Then take a long walk with me."

"No, you would be bothering about neglected business."

Mr. Beach tried to interest his friend in many other things, but the melancholy man shook his head. The old house where he was born and where his mother died was occupied by strangers. He blamed himself for ever having leased the house and excused himself, saying that the proceeds had gone to charities in which his mother had been interested.

Mr. Beach suggested that as Treasurer of the Vestrymen of the Church of the Incarnation, he might busy himself with its affairs. Mr. Valentine said that they were in perfect shape. This had been a pride of his for twenty years as a Vestryman. He seemed to have no further interest in the New York Genealogical and Biological Society and the New York Botanical Gardens, which had occupied much of his time.

He went home after announcing that he would tip everybody in the hotel to see if it would not make the world look brighter. That was the last seen of him by Mr. Beach.

He went to his room and packed his baggage as if he meant to go on a long journey. He handed a dollar to the bellboy, a fact which caused great surprise in the hotel. Nothing more was seen of Mr. Valentine until the door was broken open and his body was found with a revolver beside it.

His brother, who has a splendid place at Narragansett, and has courted rather than shunned society, was notified, and the body was removed to an undertaking shop.

Mr. Valentine's funeral is to take place to-morrow. The services will be held in the Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street.

FLAGS TO GO AT AUCTION.

A Labor Union's Colors Unclaimed at the Custom House.

Unless the Excavators' and Rockmen's Union acts quickly, Mr. Stranahan, Collector of Customs, will sell on Tuesday to the highest bidder a stand of richly embroidered colors remaining unclaimed at the Appraiser's Warehouse. The union has been notified of the intended action of the Government, but no response has been received.

Several customs brokers have been asked to throw some light on the flag importations, but nobody appears to know the circumstances attending the entry. The flags came from Naples, and that is all the Government knows about them. They are valued at $100.

The office buildings to be erected by the Hudson and Manhattan Railroad Company over its tunnel terminal at Cortlandt and Church Streets will be twenty stories high and will cost $3,000,000. W. G. McAdoo, President of the company, has commissioned McKim, Mead & White to prepare plans for the structures.

The total ground area to be covered measures about 200 by 250 feet, including the two block fronts on the west side of Church Street, from Cortlandt to Fulton Street. An underground passage through Dey Street, from Church Street to Broadway, will connect the terminal with the subway station at Fulton Street.

AMERICAN WOMEN WARNED.

Marriages with Greeks Must Be Performed by a Greek Priest.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—George Horton, American Consul at Athens, has sent to the State Department a warning to American women against marrying Greeks without making sure that the ceremony is performed by a reputable Greek priest.

He says that the desertion of American wives and families by Greek husbands who return to Greece and remarry without obtaining a divorce (which seems to be permissible in Greece unless the precaution above noted is observed) is a matter of too frequent occurrence.

The Consul incloses in his report a copy of a legal opinion as to the legality in Greece of marriages contracted abroad by Greek subjects to strengthen his warning.

AGREEMENT REACHED IN MAIL DRIVERS' STRIKE

Attitude of the Government Hastened the Settlement.

CONCESSIONS BY BOTH SIDES

Increase in Wages Granted—New Men to be Kept, But No Discrimination Against Strikers.

The strike of the mail drivers was declared off yesterday, an agreement having been reached at the last moment between the New York Mail Company and representatives of the Mail Drivers' Union by which concessions were made on both sides. The settlement came none too soon, as Superintendent J. M. Masten of the Railway Mail Service for the Eastern cities had everything arranged for terminating the contract and taking charge of the mail delivery on behalf of the Government.

The settlement may be regarded as a victory for the union. It was hastened by the contractor being notified of what would happen if the service was not at once made at least as good as it was before the strike. Postmaster Willcox was notified of the settlement about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon by J. L. Crawford and W. B. Cox, lawyers for the New York Mail Company. They had a brief conference with Postmaster Willcox, Supt. Masten, Supt. of Mail Delivery Roome, and other officials, after which the following statement was made by the Postmaster:

"The strike of the mail drivers against the New York Mail Company has been declared off and an agreement reached. The drivers now employed will be retained, but all vacancies will be filled by the old drivers in the order of their applications. I understand a slight increase of wages has been granted by the contractor. This settlement will in all probability enable the contractor to go ahead with the service as it was before the strike.

"So far as this office is concerned, we have had no connection with the strike. I interfered so far as to bring about a conference between the contractors and the representatives of the strikers, who called with me on Friday. An agreement for four years has been signed with the union, and such of the old drivers as there are vacancies for will be taken on to-night."

Under the terms of the agreement, which is dated from July 1 of this year and ends July 1, 1909, the strikers will have $2.25 a day for driving double trucks and $1.65 for single trucks. Their demands were for $2.50 for double trucks and $1.65 for single trucks. A twelve-hour workday is provided for, with an hour off for dinner or luncheon and 25 cents an hour overtime.

The negotiations started on Friday night with a conference at the Gilsey House between representatives of the New York Mail Company and a committee of six, representing the strikers.

At 2:30 yesterday morning the committee telephoned to C. H. Wolcot, the contractor, who was waiting in the Imperial Hotel, that terms of settlement had been agreed on. The strike was then declared off and the agreement was signed by G. W. Scott, representing the New York Mail Company, and Thomas Madden, Acton Herman, and V. Hoffman, representing the union.

Vice President Gould of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, who had charge of the strike, said that a guarantee had been given that 110 of the strikers would be re-employed between last night and to-day. He said that the first steps to bring both sides together were taken by Robert W. Hawthorne of the New York State Board of Arbitration, formerly of the Civic Federation.

Just before midnight a big double wagon loaded on top and inside with ex-strikers arrived at the General oPst Office. The wagon was soon backed up to the door and loaded with mail for the Grand Central Station. It left soon after midnight in charge of Edward Benson. Five others draped on the seat with him, while the crowd cheered.

Two other wagons came up from the stables loaded with old drivers. With them came two girl sympathizers, who carried American flags. The girls were Polly Ward and Mary Phillips of 514 East Fifteenth Street.

The wagons made a tour of Chinatown on the way downtown and were often cheered. No police were necessary to escort the old men, and Sergt. Chandire, who had forty-five men on hand, said he expected to send them home early. The ex-strikers said, despite the agreement reached, that as the "scabs" reached the stables they would "get the bounce."

Flags were waved and tin horns blown around the Post Office, much to the delight of a crowd of persons on their way home, who gathered to see the men take back their old places. One hundred and sixty old men and boys will get their old places back, but many of the old drivers have gotten other places and will not return.

Revolt in Asiatic Turkey Spreads.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.—Contrary to semi-official assurances, the insurrectionary movement in the Sanjak and Bazar districts of Asiatic Turkey is growing, and the Servian population is mutinying against the Turkish authorities.

FEDERAL REVENUES GROW.

Customs and Internal Receipts for September Increase Sharply.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—The monthly statement of the Government's receipts and expenditures, which will be issued next Monday will show a remarkable increase in the receipts from customs and internal revenue sources.

For September, 1904, the customs receipts amounted to $23,230,360, and for the three months of that fiscal year to $65,131,784. For the month just closed the receipts from customs were $27,244,146, and for the three months $75,015,577, an increase of $4,013,786 for the month and $9,883,793 for the three months.

Last year at this time the deficit amounted to $17,884,256, as against $9,623,165 for the quarter ended to-day.

During the last three months the internal revenue receipts show a gain over last year of $2,491,979.

Since May 3, 900 women have had ten days each at the seashore, 15,500 were given day excursions, and 165 sick wage earners were boarded in the country for two weeks or more. The work of treating consumptive children in the hospital will be continued throughout the Winter.

They are exclusive and altogether original in design, and Oriental in character. The necklaces and pendants are made of a special metal covered with gold, which promises never to tarnish. They are jeweled with large sapphires, topazes, garnets, emeralds and amethysts, which are as brilliant and perfect as the true stones.

An Important Exhibit and Sale of High Grade Oil Paintings

Discrimination and discernment both were exercised in the selection of the paintings. They came to us direct from the studios and salons of Paris, Rome, Vienna, Berlin and Munich—and all within two months. Every painting receives its initial presentation in this country at our exhibition.

More than one thousand five hundred canvases are represented—perhaps a larger collection than any other gallery affords other than those attached to public institutions.

The sale of paintings is with us a specialty, conducted upon a purely commercial basis. Perhaps that will help you to understand why we can afford to offer a canvas by even a master, such as Levy or Beauquesne which their works command in the exclusive shops. To our mind that is a fair test and establishes our position in the world of art.

The character of our paintings is high. They include the works of a representative number of the modern masters, from Georges Laugee who, in his meek, lowly, peasants afield, shows the influence of Millet, to A. Sani, the master of Italian genre studies—from Beauquesne's violent martial subjects, expressing with infinite detail and mighty action the heat of carnage and riot, to Jean Jacques Bellecour's grenadiers and Henri Levy's historical canvases. Such is the diversity of the subjects, and such are the artists represented.

SULTAN GIVES KAISER AEGEAN NAVAL STATION

Germans Also Get a Mining Concession in Thasos.

MAY CAUSE COMPLICATIONS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1903.]

PARIS, Sept. 30.—According to a well-informed correspondent in Constantinople the Sultan of Turkey has granted to Germany the right to establish a naval station on the Island of Thasos, and, moreover, has given to a German company the concession of all the mines on the island.

It is added that negotiations are proceeding between the Porte and the German Anatolian Railway Company for a loan to the Sultan of $500,000 with which to cover the expenses of his forthcoming jubilee and pay the State functionaries a month's salary.

It seems that Germany, whose attempt to interfere in Morocco has resulted practically in failure, is now again turning her attention to the Near East. If the report that she is to have a naval station in Thasos is true, no one can foresee what complications may result.

Thasos, only ninety miles northwest of the Dardanelles, is an ideal place for such a station, and the establishment in the Aegean of a centre of German power would hardly be regarded with equanimity by the other countries of Europe. It is feared that Germany's policy of friendship toward Turkey has at length borne fruit which will give her a preponderant position in the Near East.

As for the mining concession to the German company, this also may result in complications. The marble quarries of Thasos were celebrated in antiquity, and though they have not been worked for a long period, it is known that they are still very valuable. In 1841 the island was given to Mehemet Ali, Viceroy of Egypt, and the Khedive of Egypt claims the mines on the island as his private property.

The Sultan has persisted in ignoring the claim, but the concession to the Germans may bring matters to a head.

BIG BERLIN LOCK-OUT BEGUN.

Trouble in the Electrical Industry Likely to Spread.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—A lock-out in the works of three of the greatest electrical companies of Berlin began this afternoon. It affects all the factories of the Allgemeine, the Siemens-Halske, and the Siemens-Schuckert Companies except one lamp factory, and throws about 33,000 workmen out of employment.

As yet the trouble has not affected the entire electrical industry, but it shows signs of spreading. The employes of the Berlin Electrical Works, which generate nearly all the electricity consumed for power and traction purposes in Berlin, met this evening to consider a sympathetic strike, but postponed action until to-morrow night in order to await the result of a conference to be held to-morrow morning between the three companies affected and their employes.

This conference will be presided over by Herr von Schultz, President of the Government Arbitration Bureau, but will have no official character, as the companies refused to participate in the appeal for arbitration. They agreed, however, to meet the labor representatives in conference with Herr von Schultz presiding. He is an expert hand at settling labor difficulties, and therefore it is hoped that he will succeed in ending the present trouble.

The engineers of the Berlin Electrical Works, fearing a strike, are spending their entire time in the shops. The office force is also being held in order to operate the machines in case of an emergency. The suspension of work in these shops would stop every street-car line in Berlin.

It has already been arranged that a detachment of machinists shall be brought from the navy yard at Kiel in order to keep the works going.

BREW TROUBLE AT BUDAPEST.

Coalition and Socialists Plan Demonstrations for Same Day.

BUDAPEST, Sept. 30.—The Coalition Party has given notice of its intention to arrange a torchlight procession on Oct. 3. The Socialists have announced a similar procession for the same evening.

The members of the Coalition and the Socialists are summoning their adherents in the provinces to the capital. The Socialist leaders have ordered the workmen to take a holiday on Oct. 3, and it is expected that 100,000 Socialists will participate in the demonstration. As both parties have arranged to march in the same streets the authorities and the public are apprehensive of disturbances.

The anxiety is accentuated because of the fact that the King's name day, Oct. 5, coincides with the anniversary of the execution of the thirteen so-called "Martyrs of Arad" at the time of the revolution of 1848.

The authorities have asked assistance from the troops.

VIENNA, Sept. 30.—Count Czaky, President of the Upper House of the Hungarian Diet, was received in audience by the King-Emperor at the Hofburg this morning, and there was a lengthy exchange of views, in which the situation in Hungary was fully thrashed out.

Count Czaky was able to communicate to the King the real feeling of the Magyar nation and to indicate the line of action most likely to lead to a compromise, which, it is believed, both sides are now heartily desirous of reaching.

NEGRO ESCAPES FROM POSSE.

Father of Murdered Woman Appeals for Burning of Fugitive.

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 30.—"Monk" Gibson, a negro arrested yesterday in connection with the murder of Mrs. A. J. Conditt and her children at Edna, Texas, Thursday, last night escaped from the posse having him in charge. Officers declare that Gibson knows all about the crime. The posse is searching for him.

S. H. Beasley, father of Mrs. Conditt, issued an appeal to the people of the Edna community to-day. It declared that the Sheriff was criminally negligent in allowing Gibson to escape, and said he would take the negro from the authorities when recaptured and "burn him for a week" if the people would stand by him.

Many persons who heard the appeal read shouted approval and yelled at the Sheriff, "Why didn't you handcuff the negro?"

Sheriff Egg replied: "It's easy to ask that now, but if any of you want to make a personal matter of it, just step out from that crowd, and we will settle it now."

The people of Jackson County are in a high state of excitement, and many avow that they will burn Gibson when he is apprehended. The officers say they will protect the negro, and serious trouble may result.

GERMAN PROPOSALS TO US.

Definite Plans for a Commercial Treaty Almost Ready.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—The German Government's definite proposals to the United States for a commercial treaty are almost ready to forward to Washington. They have been prepared in consequence of a request of the State Department, which inquired in June precisely what it was that Germany wanted if the existing arrangement was unsatisfactory.

Chancellor von Bülow asked the German Chambers of Commerce and the organizations of the individual trades to inform the Government of their ideas of the lines a new convention should take. These reports, some of which have been cabled, form a mass of material on which the Second Division of the Foreign Office, that devoted to trade policies and Consular administration, has been working. Dr. von Koerner, Director of the department, who more than any one else carried through the difficult Russian and Austrian treaties, has the American affair in hand.

Americans doing business in Germany who have built up the import trade in American manufactures are continually asked by Germans what they think of the prospects of a reciprocity treaty, and they usually reply that the outlook is doubtful, but they have been considerably cheered by the recent action of the New York and other Chambers of Commerce in favor of a trade treaty.

COMPARTMENT CARS MAY GO.

Murder on English Railway Starts Crusade Against Them.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Nearly a week has passed since the body of Miss Mary Money of Clapham Junction was found in the Merstham Tunnel of the London and Southeastern Railway, but the mystery of her death remains unsolved.

The outrage has served to start a crusade against the continued use of the cell-like compartment cars on the British railroads and at least one main line is said to have countermanded a large order for old-type cars in consequence of the crusade.

Sir A. Conan Doyle was asked, in his capacity of "Sherlock Holmes," to give his opinion of the tunnel tragedy. He declined, but warmly denounced the present style of car and lack of protection for women traveling alone. He said:

"I think it perfectly scandalous that such a state of affairs should be allowed to exist. Any railroad company not reserving at least one carriage for ladies on every train ought to be held responsible and pay compensation where a woman is murdered."

FRENCH HONOR FOR GOWDY.

He Is Made an Officer of the Legion of Honor—Farewell Banquet.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—At a farewell banquet to-night to the retiring United States Consul General, Mr. Gowdy, given under the auspices of the American Chamber of Commerce, Ambassador McCormick, on behalf of the French Government, presented to Mr. Gowdy the insignia of an Officer of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. Gowdy, in replying, referred to the enormous increase in trade between the United States and France during his tenure of office. He said his recompense for fighting was victory, and for duty done the approbation of his country.

William S. Dalliba and William Seligman made addresses in which they urged a reciprocity treaty between France and the United States.

Mr. Gowdy will leave Paris on Monday for Liverpool, and will sail for the United States on board the Baltic on Oct. 5.

EXPECTS NO MORE CRUISERS.

Albert Vickers Says Fast Battleships Will Take Their Place.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS, England, Sept. 30.—The Duchess of Devonshire to-day launched the armored cruiser Natal, which Col. Vickers, who presided at a luncheon after the launching, described as the most powerful cruiser in the world.

Albert Vickers of the firm of Vickers Sons & Maxim, builders of the engines of the Natal, said she would probably be the last cruiser launched, as such vessels in future would be fast battleships and carry heavier guns. The displacement of the Natal is 13,550 tons. Her speed will be 22.33 knots and she will carry 6 9.2-inch guns, 4 7.5-inch guns, 2 twelve-pounders, 28 three-pounders, and 2 machine guns.

LEOPOLD NOT TO ABDICATE.

He Says All His Remaining Years Will Be Devoted to His Country.

BRUSSELS, Sept. 30.—King Leopold at the banquet of the Congress on Colonial Expansion to-night gave emphatic denial to recent reports that he intended to abdicate. He said:

"Life is uncertain, and I cannot foresee how many years I may still have to live; but I can assure you that all the remaining years of my life will be devoted, within the scope of my constitutional powers, to the welfare of my country."

BRITISH TO PUNISH ARABS.

Cruiser Arrives at Hodeida Owing to Pirates' Attacks on Dhows.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30.—The arrival at Hodeida of the British cruiser Fox promises to lead to a speedy settlement of the British claims in connection with the piratical attacks of Arabs on British vessels in the Red Sea.

The Commander of the Fox has been instructed to see the local authorities, arrest and punish the culprits, destroy the pirate dhows, and pay compensation to the owners of the British dhows.

Insanity Experts Coming.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—William P. Byrne, Principal Clerk of the Home Office; Dr. Horatio B. Donkin, a Commissioner of Prisons and Consulting Physician to Westminster Hospital; Dr. William H. Dickinson, Consulting Physician to St. George's Hospital and former President of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society; J. C. Dunlop, and Mrs. Pinsent, composing the sub-committee of the Royal Commission on the Care and Control of the Insane, sailed from Liverpool for New York to-day on the Cunard Line steamer Etruria to investigate American methods of treating the insane.

Curzon Stays to Receive Prince.

SIMLA, Sept. 30.—The departure of Lord and Lady Curzon from India has been postponed, as King Edward desires Lord Curzon to remain and officially welcome the Prince and Princess of Wales. The Viceroy and his wife will therefore reach Bombay in time to preside at the ceremonies connected with the arrival of the royal party, and will sail thence for England on Nov. 18.

Marshall Defeated Again.

NUREMBERG, Sept. 30.—Tarrasch opened the tenth game of the chess match of eight games up against Marshall this morning, playing pawn to King's fourth. Marshall again relied upon the French defense, which led to a rather interesting game from the start. At the fortieth move Marshall resigned. The score now is Tarrasch 5, Marshall 1, drawn 4.

TURKS STILL SLAYING INOFFENSIVE VILLAGERS

European Representatives in Macedonia Hoodwinked.

PORTE WOULD EXPEL BRYCE

Asks Permission of England to Stop His Investigations in the Disturbed Region.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—W. A. Moore, Secretary of the Balkan Committee, who has returned from a two months' tour of Mnecdonia, said to-day:

"The wanton slaughter of Christians in Macedonia continues under the eyes of Europe's representatives. Crossing the Bulgarian border, the first news to greet me was of an unpardonable massacre in the little village of Konopnitza, which occurred three days before my arrival. On visiting the village, I found the bodies of a man, two women, a girl, and three children still unburied and laid out in the Christian Church. The women had been shot, but I saw one child whose head had been crushed, probably with the butt of a gun.

"The wounded had been taken to Egri Palanka, an hour's ride distant, where resides the Austrian officer in charge of the district.

"The story of the affair is a repetition of the oft-told tale. An insurgent band visited the village and demanded food on departing. The Turkish authorities, learning of the visit, dispatched a body of troops, which, discovering no insurgents in the place, dealt out their revenge on the Christians. The observation of the European officers seldom deters the Mohammedans from slaying Christians.

"The Austrian officer in the Koumanova district has charge of 119 villages, where most brutal murders are of daily occurrence, and are not noticed by the authorities. In the Monastir district the Italian officers sleep with the Turkish Army in order to observe its methods of 'suppressing insurgents.' This, however, only prevents special detachments from perpetrating crimes.

"The village of Mogla, in which an Albanian brigand was assassinated, was punished by the Turkish troops. Nine unarmed peasants were killed and arms were placed beside them in a cornfield in order to deceive the Italian officers who were invited to inspect the 'insurgents,' but the rifles were of the pattern used by the troops in the Monastir district.

"Brigandage continues flagrantly, and life and property are less safe than before Austria and Russia received the mandate to reform the country two years ago. The gendarmerie officers admit their inability to protect the population, and several of them told me they had so reported to their Governments. The Macedonians have no hope left."

Mr. Moore says the country is still swarming with Asiatic troops, which have not been removed since the mobilization against Bulgaria in 1903.

The Right Hon. James Bryce, M. P., President of the Balkan Committee, is now touring Macedonia and observing conditions there preparatory to laying the results of his tour before the British Parliament. The authorities in Macedonia are said to be employing every means to prevent him from gathering information.

The Porte has requested the British Government to permit the expulsion of Mr. Bryce from Turkey.

Indorsed by Special Committee of the Legislature of New York in May, 1905, and by Many Prominent Men and Women Throughout the World.

Lady HENRY SOMERSET OF LONDON, ENGLAND, WRITES:

"I have carefully watched the cases which, during these past few months, passed under his care, and am quite prepared to state that Dr. Oppenheimer has accomplished what he undertook to carry out. I frankly own that at first I was skeptical as to what the result would be. I had seen so many failures, and had hitherto little faith in such remedies; but from the first Dr. Oppenheimer maintained that what he would undertake to do was to kill the urgent desire and craving which a patient might have for stimulants, and that he would restore him to health."

WITTE MADE A COUNT; CZAR CORDIAL TO HIM

Telegram Inviting Him to Bjoerkoe Was Warmly Worded.

SIGNING OF TREATY DELAYED

It Is Now Set for the End of This Week—Witte Denies Alleged Interviews.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 30.—M. Witte has been created a Count.

Though M. Witte had expected to return to St. Petersburg this morning, at the invitation of Emperor Nichols he remained to luncheon on board the imperial yacht Polar Star, returning to St. Petersburg at 6 P. M.

"I congratulate you on your return from Washington, after brilliantly carrying out my mandate, which was of the greatest importance for the State, and invite you to come and see me Friday aboard the yacht Polar Star at Bjoerkoe. The yacht Strela is placed at your disposition, in accordance with my wishes. NICHOLAS."

In regard to alleged interviews which have appeared in the foreign press, M. Witte asserts that he has received no newspaper correspondent since he left Paris.

Owing to the absence of the Emperor, it is announced that the signature of the peace treaty will not take place until the end of next week.

BERLIN, Sept. 30.—According to a dispatch from St. Petersburg, Emperor William, in addition to conferring on M. Witte Germany's highest order, the Black Eagle, presented to him his (the Kaiser's) portrait, framed in gold and inscribed with the Emperor's own hand.

PROTESTING JAPANESE SUFFER.

One Professor Already Forced to Resign, and Others May Go.

TOKIO, Sept. 30.—Prof. Nakamura Taksutaro, one of the six professors who signed the anti-peace memorial to the throne, was compelled to yield to the pressure brought upon him and tendered his resignation, which was accepted to-day.

As he was a professor in the Nobles' School, which is under the jurisdiction of the Household Minister, he had to yield, but this does not apply to the other professors, who hold seats in the Imperial University, as that institution is controlled by the Minister of Education.

The outcome of the Government proceedings against these professors is being watched with keen interest.

JAPANESE CANNOT GET AWAY.

Troops in Russian Sakhalin Must Stay for the Winter.

TOKIO, Sept. 30.—Snow is falling in Sakhalin, and, owing to the impassable condition of the roads, the Japanese troops remaining at Alexandrovsk (the Russian part of Sakhalin) cannot be withdrawn overland into Japanese territory.

Strong gales are constantly prevailing, making it next to an impossibility to remove the troops on transports before navigation completely closes, which will be within a few weeks.

Preparations will therefore be made to winter the men at Alexandrovsk.

Another Russian Protest to Japan.

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 30.—The Russian Government, through France intermediary, has made representations to Japan concerning the treatment of Russian prisoners of war who have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment as ordinary criminals by Japanese courts for attempting to escape, such offenses being considered disciplinary rather than criminal in Russia.

SOUTH NOW CONVERTED TO MOSQUITO THEORY

People Roused Against Old Methods of Fighting Yellow Fever.

WANT FEDERAL QUARANTINE

Recognize That It Would Eliminate Politics and Incompetency at Port Stations.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—From every quarter of the South come indications that the temper of the people has been aroused against the old and ineffective methods of fighting yellow fever, and radical changes to conform to the mosquito dogma are being demanded by the newspapers of nearly every section. The early fright is now fast giving way to the serious consideration of the several great problems involved, and of late there has been a very radical transformation in the attitude of the press and the people at large.

Many striking illustrations of the effectiveness of the methods prescribed by the United States Marine Hospital Service have done wonders in weening the people away from shotgun quarantines, concealment of yellow fever cases, and general ignorance and prejudice in fighting the disease.

At Leeville, La., the mosquito dogma was laughed at. The people of Lake Providence and Tallulah, La., refused to believe in it, and made no war on the stegomyia faciata. As a result each of these communities has suffered very severely from the ravages of the disease. On the other hand, in every instance where the Marine Hospital methods of mosquito destruction have been applied promptly the disease has spread very slowly, and at many points has been quickly stamped out.

On the Godchaux sugar plantation a rapidly spreading little epidemic among the 1,000 or more Italian laborers was completely stamped out in three weeks' time, while on an adjoining plantation, where old methods obtained, the epidemic has run its course. At Vicksburg, Natchez, Lafayette, Mississippi City, Pensacola, Gulf Port, in the Shreveport detention camp, and at a number of other points where the proper work has been done, there has been similar successful experience.

This is why the people of the South, speaking, a few days ago, through the Mayors of 283 cities and towns, almost unanimously advocated Federal control of the quarantines at all ports of entry subject to yellow fever infection, and also an expansion of the beneficial influence of scientific education at the hands of the Marine Hospital surgeons.

The fact is being recognized that such control would in no way interfere with States' rights or local police power, but would eliminate politics and local business influence from the port quarantine stations, and give equal protection to all States and communities that are now subjected to danger by the incompetence of politically appointed State Boards of Health in those States bordering on the Gulf of Mexico. The Louisiana Board of Health, in order to facilitate the banana business of the port of New Orleans, let down the bars at the mouth of the Mississippi, and in this way New Orleans became infected by several centres.

NEW ORLEANS HOPEFUL.

Alabama Quarantines Against Whole of Mississippi.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—The yellow fever report to 6 o'clock this evening shows: New cases, 31; total to date, 3,000; deaths, 2; total, 388; new centres of infection, 11; under treatment, 240; cases discharged, 2,372.

The relatively small number of new centres of infection that are now appearing in the daily reports of the Marine Hospital Service is regarded as one of the best signs of the certain decline of the fever here. In the matter of new cases the week ending to-day shows the largest measure of improvement since the fever started.

President Souchon of the State Board of Health and Dr. White of the Marine Hospital Service give it as their opinion that quarantine against passengers may be safely raised after Oct. 15.

The country reports continue to be most encouraging.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 30.—State Health Officer Dr. W. H. Sanders, after consultation with the local Board of Health to-day, announced that Alabama had quarantined against the entire State of Mississippi.

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 30.—The Mississippi yellow fever summary to-night is as follows: Vicksburg, 5 new cases, 2 deaths; Hamburg, 3 new cases; Gulfport, 2 new cases; Mississippi City, 1 new case; Hansborough, 1 new case; Port Gibson, no new cases, 6 suspicious; Roxie, 2 suspicious cases; Moss Point, 1 cases; Scranton, 3 cases; Natchez, 7 new cases. No additional points of infection reported.

PENSACOLA, Fla., Sept. 30.—Two deaths from yellow fever were reported to the State Board of Health up to noon to-day. No new cases were announced.

BRIBERY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Candidate Charges That Money Is Used to Defeat Him.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Frederick S. Hall of Taunton, one of the three candidates for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant Governor, issued a statement to-day in which he charges that bribery is being employed to defeat him in the Republican State Convention next week.

"I learn that money is being offered to delegates chosen to support me, if they will surrender their credentials," he says. "I am reliably informed that this was done Friday in Barnstable County. I am investigating the matter, and shall take suitable action both in and out of the convention if I can get the necessary evidence."

Mr. Hall goes on to say that his name will go before the convention next Friday, and he urges his friends to see that his delegates are present.

SWINDLED MANY WOMEN.

Man Made a Good Income for Four Years by Petty Fraud.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—George Moore, 50 years old, who admits that for four years he has made a business of swindling women of Chicago, Milwaukee, and other places, is under arrest here.

Moore posed as an agent for an art journal published by a department store. He offered yearly subscriptions to housekeepers at $1.50 and gave them an order on department stores for six yards of dress goods, saying the store filled these orders free to get the magazine started. His weekly receipts are said to have been large.

Moore's arrest was accomplished by one of his victims, who met him on the street after a department store manager had declared Moore a fraud.

TRIED SUICIDE ON A TRAIN.

Finn Was to Have Sailed Yesterday on the Umbria.

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA, Sept. 30.—Thomas Thomasson Peltonan, a passenger on a Delaware and Hudson Railroad train from Montreal, attempted suicide by cutting his throat with a penknife as the train was approaching this place this afternoon. It is believed that he will recover.

He is fifty years old, a native of Parkanoseckan, Finland. He left Hurley, Wis., on Sept. 26 and had expected to sail from New York to-day in the Cunarder Umbria, his destination being Hango, Finland.

PRINCETON'S BIGGEST CLASS.

410 Students Register Under Banner of 1909—The Preceptorial System.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 30.—The enrollment of the class of 1909 at Princeton University has been completed. It is one of the largest in the history of the university, with a registration of 410.

For the past few years there has been a rapid growth in the Scientific school at the expense of the Academic, but this year's class shows a gain in the candidates for A. B. degrees. There are 191 applicants for the academic department as against 146 in the class of 1908. This change can largely be attributed to the departmental system which President Woodrow Wilson has introduced and also to the change in entrance requirements.

The civil engineering department is growing steadily. It boasts 84 applicants for the class of 1909.

The total enrollment of the university is calculated to show an increase of about 50 students.

The new preceptorial system of instruction passed through its first week in a satisfactory manner and is now a part of the curriculum. The confusion at first caused by the introduction of fifty new members into the Faculty has disappeared, and the system is working smoothly. Not even the undergraduates of the university were posted as to how the new method of instruction would be applied, until they returned to find postals announcing their engagements with certain new professors at their homes.

There is a preceptor in each department, and the hour spent in his company takes the place of one of the lecture hours under the old régime.

At the election of officers from the class of 1908 the following were chosen: President—W. J. Phillips, Pennsylvania; Vice President—Timothy N. Pfeiffer, New Jersey; Secretary and Treasurer—Lewis B. George, Massachusetts.

The following were elected to the Brica-Brac Board: H. J. Van Dyke, R. C. Clothier, H. E. Joy, J. R. Dickson, and D. H. Pyle.

WEATHER FOR 34 OCTOBERS.

Highest Temperature 61, in 1900, and Lowest 50, in 1876.

Local Forecaster Emery sent out figures yesterday showing what the weather has been in October for the last thirty-four years. Mr. Emery says the figures are not made public as a prognostication of what is going to happen this October.

The mean temperature of the month for the thirty-four years was 55 degrees. The warmest October was in 1900, when the average temperature was 61 degrees. The coldest October was in 1876, when the average temperature was 50 degrees. The highest temperature in the period was 88 degrees, on Oct. 16, 1879, and on Oct. 1, 1881. The lowest October temperature recorded was on Oct. 15, 1876, when what is usually referred to as a "killing" frost occurred; the average date for a "killing" frost in the Fall is Nov. 6.

The average precipitation (rain or melted snow) for October is 3.71 inches. The greatest precipitation was 11.55 inches, in 1903. The greatest precipitation recorded in twenty-four hours was 9.40 inches, on Oct. 8 and 9, 1903.

The prevailing winds in October have been from the northwest. The average velocity per hour is 11 miles. On Oct. 16, 1900, the wind blew at the rate of 76 miles an hour.

FROG CLUB PRISONER FREE.

Magistrate Frowns on His Arrest, and Members Talk of Damage Suits.

The lone prisoner arrested Friday afternoon by Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley in their raid on the Frog Association in West Thirty-first Street was discharged yesterday by Magistrate Poole in Jefferson Market Court. He was Joseph Belgrave, a negro waiter on the Pennsylvania Railroad, and had been arrested because he had a pawn ticket calling for diamond earrings pawned for $110.

"Why is he suspicious?" Magistrate Poole asked.

"Because he had that pawn ticket and because of his surroundings," answered Detective Murphy, who stood sponsor for the case.

"Why, this arrest is an outrage," said the Magistrate, "and I discharge the prisoner at once."

More than 250 men, most of them negroes, were found in the three rooms occupied by the organization. They are all still saying things about Inspector Schmittberger and Capt. Dooley, who, they declare, swept through their quiet and orderly clubrooms, breaking heads, firing pistols, and smashing things generally. They threaten all kinds of damage suits.

OPERATED ON AN OSTRICH.

"Big Dick," the Bronx Zoo's biggest ostrich, was yesterday corralled and put in a crate that an operation might be performed upon him to remove a blood tumor which had formed over his right eye.

Ostriches are strongest in their legs, and when the operation was performed special precautions were taken to prevent Dick from landing a kick. He was captured by Dr. Blair, Acting Director Mitchell, and half a dozen workmen in the Park yesterday afternoon.

When crated only his head and neck were exposed. Then the doctors climbed upon the crate and removed the tumor. The eye was treated with cocaine so that the cutting was not painful. When Dick was released the sight of his right eye had been completely restored.

PHILADELPHIA GIRLS ASK AID.

Can't Find Work Here, and Beg the Police to Send Them Home.

Two young women applied for protection last night at the East Fifty-third Street Police Station. They said they were Jennie McCourt, 19 years old, living at 2439 South Clarion Street, and May Knorr, 20, of 1029 Emily Place, Philadelphia.

The young women told Sergt. Bingham that they had arrived here in the afternoon to find employment, and had sought work in vain. They begged to be sent back home. The Sergeant was so much impressed with their appearance that he ordered food for them and put them in the custody of the Matron until he could hear from the younger girl's brother, Joseph McCourt of 1207 Snyder Avenue, Philadelphia.

JERSEY CITY BANK SOLD.

St. Louis Syndicate Gets Second National from Hogencamp.

Control of the Second National Bank, Jersey City, passed yesterday into the hands of a St. Louis syndicate of bankers. It was reported that the transfer was the result of a continuation of the fight made last January to oust William D. Hogencamp from the Presidency, but this was denied by President Hogencamp.

He said that the change was an amicable arrangement made possible by the sale of 1,800 of the 2,500 shares of the bank's stock held by himself, George W. Young, and a few others, and that there would be no change in the conduct of the bank's affairs.

SAY LOOMIS DID NOT TRY TO HURT MICHAEL

Explanation by State Department of Transfer of Cipher Work.

SECLUDED SPOT WAS WANTED

Declaration That Some Hints of Public Business Have Leaked from Chief Clerk's Office.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—A statement was issued at the State Department today explaining why the cipher work was transferred recently from Chief Clerk Michael to Assistant Secretary Loomis's private secretary, Charles R. Dean.

It is said there was no attempt to cast any reflection on Col. Michael, and that the step was taken simply as a precautionary measure. Why there should be need of such precaution when there had never been any leak in the service while in the chief clerk's hands is not explained. Why Mr. Loomis should make such an important innovation just as he was going out of office and when Secretary Root might have a desire to arrange the matter to suit himself also, was not made the subject of explanation. The statement follows:

"There is no reason why there should be any public discussion or reference to the manner or the place which has been provided for the work of enciphering and deciphering of cablegrams for the Department of State.

"The cipher work of the department was, after careful consideration extending over a period of several months, transferred from the office of the chief clerk to a more protected and secluded part of the building, for the reason that the room occupied by the chief clerk is the public reception room of the Department of State, and it has been found by experience that visitors to the office of the chief clerk have sometimes been able to get an inkling of the contents of cablegrams which were therein being deciphered or enciphered.

"In this connection, no reflection whatever was made upon the integrity or the discretion of the chief clerk by Mr. Loomis, nor is it apparent that there has been any criticism of him. The matter of the alleged reflection upon his integrity has only been raised by some of the chief clerk's indiscreet friends who have rushed into print upon the subject.

"It is stated at the department that while portions of cipher telegrams may have leaked out, it was not charged that the chief clerk was at fault, but was due to the fact that his office room is entirely unsuited for confidential cipher work.

"The transfer of this work to a secluded part of the department has the hearty approval of every one who has given the matter the slightest impartial consideration, the almost unanimous comment being, 'This ought to have been done long ago.'"

FULTON WANTS A RATE LAW.

Oregon Senator Would Give Power to Commerce Commission.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Senator Fulton of Oregon is in Washington on department business. He favors legislation this Winter on railroad rates, and says the people of his State demand it.

"My own view," said Mr. Fulton today, "is that we ought to give more authority to the Inter-State Commerce Commission or abolish it altogether. It is almost useless as it is now. My idea would be to give the commission authority to inquire into charges of discrimination and rebate and to fix maximum rates. I am not in favor of the proposition to permit the commission to name maximum and minimum rates.

"The present laws are plain in denouncing and prohibiting rebates, and it seems to me that the Department of Justice will be able to see that they are enforced in case the Inter-State Commerce Commission is abolished. We do not have a commission to prevent counterfeiting, and why have a commission to prevent rebates and discrimination in freight rates unless we are going to give it sufficient authority to put a stop to these practices?

"As to the private car system, I believe this ought to be turned over to the Inter-State Commerce Commission also. I think about as good a way as any would be to prohibit private car concerns entirely and require the railroads to take over the work of furnishing all the facilities for transportation. The roads would then be amenable to transportation laws."

OLD SLAVE GOT A PENSION.

Drew Government Bounty Fifteen Years Illegally Without Detection.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—That a man has drawn a pension fifteen years illegally was brought out here to-day in the trial of John Dixon, a negro.

The testimony showed that Dixon had drawn over $1,300 from the United States Treasury since 1890 as a pension because of alleged service on the United States ship Pocahontas during the civil war. How Dixon ever proved his claim and how he afterward escaped detection are points which are not clear to those who have investigated the case.

He drew his first pension early in 1890, and every month thereafter has cashed his voucher. The error was detected only when he applied for an increase. The examiners, in making a review of his papers, were startled to learn that no such man ever served on the Pocahontas, and that at the time of the alleged service he was yet a slave belonging to a Southern land owner.

A careful examination of the record shows that one John Dixon did serve during the war of the rebellion, but he enlisted in 1860 from Massachusetts, and is said to have died a few years afterward.

OLDEST DIPLOMAT MAY GO.

A. Grip, Now at Washington, May Offer Services to Norway.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—In view of the fact that Norway and Sweden have become separate nations and will in the future be represented by different Ministers, Washington probably will soon lose the Nestor of the Diplomatic Corps in this capital.

A. Grip, the Minister of Sweden and Norway to America since 1889, is a Norwegian, and it is believed that he will follow the example of many of his contemporaries and swear allegiance to Norway, resigning his present position and placing himself at the disposal of the Norwegian Government.

BATTLESHIP SQUADRON SAILS.

First Division, Under Admiral Evans, Coming to New York.

PROVINCETOWN, Mass., Sept. 30.—The First and Second Divisions of the battleship squadron of the North Atlantic fleet sailed from here early to-day under command of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans. The First Division, including the flagship Maine, will go to New York and the Second Division to Norfolk.

The battleship Kentucky sailed late yesterday, and the battleship Massachusetts remained here to coal this forenoon, planning to sail this afternoon. The torpedo-boat destroyer Lawrence will remain here for several days, and the cruiser squadron is expected to arrive on Monday

MISSISSIPPI LAUNCHED WITH VARDAMAN ABSENT

Miss Mabel Money Names the Newest American Battleship.

SMALL, BUT HEAVILY ARMED

Has a Displacement of Only 13,000 Tons, But a Battery of Tremendous Power.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The battleship Mississippi was launched shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon at the yard of the William Cramp Ship and Engine Building Company. The vessel's sponsor was Miss Mahel Clare Money, daughter of United States Senator Money.

Owing to the prevalence of yellow fever in the South Gov. J. K. Vardaman of Mississippi and his staff were unable to attend the launching, and the Governor was represented by Senator Money. The guests included Admiral Dewey, Lieut. Commander Wood, Rear Admiral Rodgers, and Mayor Weaver of this city.

Special interest is attached to the Mississippi, since it will carry the smallest displacement of any United States battleship now being built with the exception of the Idaho, a sister ship. The displacement of these two vessels is 18,000 tons each, while all the later battleships, including the Vermont, Kansas, and Minnesota, now building in other shipyards, have a displacement of 16,000 tons.

The Mississippi will be equal to many battleships of 16,000 tons displacement, and no vessel of the same displacement in any navy of the nations carries equally heavy batteries. The main batteries will consist of four twelve-inch breech-loading rifles, mounted in two turrets; eight eight-inch breech-loading rifles, in four turrets; eight seven-inch breech-loaders, behind casement armor, and two twenty-one-inch submerged torpedo tubes; also these secondary batteries: Twelve three-inch, six three-pounders, two one-pounder automatics, two one-pounder rapid-fire guns, two three-inch field pieces, two machine guns, and six automatics.

The Mississippi will be 375 feet in length on the water line, and the length over all will be 382 feet, with extreme beam of 77 feet. The speed requirement is 17 knots. The ship will be equipped with triple expansion twin screws of 10,000 indicated horse power, fitted with eight Babcock & Wilcox water-tube boilers, set in water-tight compartments. Except for the windlass and steering gear, practically all the machinery will be run by electricity.

Wireless telegraphy apparatus will be installed, and, in fact, the Mississippi will be so equipped as to equal in every way the highest standard of requirement for modern warships. There will be commodious quarters for the crew of 750 officers and men, with special attention to sanitary needs.

ENGINEER'S CLEAN RECORD.

Never Cost Railroad a Cent of Damages Through Negligence.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 30.—After serving the Central Hudson Railroad Company for fifty-three years, Engineer Sanford Austin of Amsterdam has resigned. He entered the employ of the company as a brakeman in 1852. In 1861 he became an engineer, and for forty-four years continued as such with but few brief interruptions.

During his long service he was never seriously injured, and never through any neglect of duty on his part was the company made to suffer damages. His record is so clean that the company has placed his name on the honor roll, and he will receive the highest pension paid to retired engineers, $360 a year.

FOUR DIE BY FIRE IN A 2-STORY SHACK

Sailors' Lodging House in West Street Proves a Death Trap.

ONLY A STEP TO SAFETY

Firemen Found Men Clinging to an Awning a Few Feet from the Ground—Ladder of Beer Kegs.

Four men, three of them sailors, trapped by the fire in the two-story, water-front lodging house 221 and 222 West Street early yesterday morning, were burned to death. A half dozen other persons in the house were blistered from head to foot. The housekeeper—the only woman in the place—was scorched about the face and bruised by falling from an awning to which she climbed when the flames drove her from her bed.

The first floor at No. 221 is used as a restaurant. Next door, at No. 222, is a saloon. They were serving breakfast in the eating house and selling drinks at the bar downstairs four hours after the fire was discovered, and while two of the victims were yet breathing.

The fire, which snuffed out four lives, caused a property loss of only a few hundred dollars. The value of the whole building was not more than $2,600. It was erected so many years ago that the oldest frequenters of the neighborhood regard it as a landmark.

There were twenty rooms, rudely partitioned off on the second floor. These were let to lodgers of the fifteen and twenty cent variety. The rooms were veritable death pens, reached only through a narrow hallway, its only exit a flight of steep stairs, which led to the street.

The two front rooms had windows opening on an awning, from which a man might jump to the street all day without so much as spraining his ankles. The eighteen other rooms all opened into the hall, in which the fire originated and which was a seething mass of flames two minutes after the first alarm had been raised. The occupants of the front rooms escaped.

This is a list of the dead and injured:

DOWE, PATRICK, 30 years old, sailor, of Poughkeepsie; died at the Hudson Street Hospital.

SIMONSON, HANS, 63 years old, Norwegian sailor; burned about the face and feet.

KRESKY, MARY, 48 years old, housekeeper; burned about the face and contusions of the body.

SKINNER, HENRY, 32 years old, sailor; burned about arms and body.

Vaughn and McMahon, the first to die, were sleeping together in Room 13. They evidently had, from the position in which their bodies were found, been awakened by the crackling of the flames and suffocated before they could reach the door. The other lodgers were all in separate rooms.

The fire is believed to have been caused by a drunken sailor, who is known to have entered the stairway to the upper floor shortly before the flames were discovered. Simonson, one of the survivors, passed him on the stairs, and noticing his condition, advised him to go to bed. Just before Simonson went to sleep he heard some one striking matches in the hall, but paid no attention to it. The first cry of fire followed soon after.

The stairway and the woodwork about the hall flared up like tinder. Flames belched simultaneously from the front windows. Policeman O'Connor was the first to discover the fire, and turned in an alarm. Miles Boylan and Richard Hazel, longshoremen, were across the plaza, and ran to the burning building. When they reached it they saw a dozen persons, who had managed to get to the front windows, clinging to the awning. Among them was one woman—the housekeeper. She weighs 240 pounds.

The two longshoremen raised a pyramid of beer casks and the lodgers clambered down in safety. If they had dropped over the edge of the awning by their hands their feet would have almost touched the ground. The housekeeper was the last to make the descent. Her weight shattered the pyramid of casks and she fell to the sidewalk.

About that time Engine 27, Lieut. Fiske in command, arrived. The firemen were in time to see a man, his clothing ablaze, start for the river at racing speed. The man was Patrick Dowd. Fiske gave chase, threw the man to the ground and smothered the fire with his rubber overcoat.

After turning in the fire alarm, Policeman O'Connor had sent in a call for ambulances to the Hudson Street Hospital, and summoned the reserves from the Leonard Street Station. The first ambulance came while the fireman was smothering the fire in the remnants of Dowd's clothing.

Dowd, screaming, was loaded into the ambulance, and taken to the hospital. He died there at 10 o'clock. In the same ambulance was McClennon, who had dared the fiery stairway and been fatally burned. He had run from his bed clad only in an undershirt. The undershirt was burning when William Kelly, the bartender in the saloon at 122, saw him, and threw a bucket of water on him, but McClennon was so severely burned that he died at the hospital.

It was some time after the fire had been put out that the charred bodies of Vaughan and McMahon were found.

MAY START RATE WAR.

New Southampton-New York Service via the West Indies.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—A new though roundabout steamship service between Southampton and New York was started to-day by the sailing from Southampton of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company's steamer Tagus, which, after calling at West Indian ports, will proceed to New York. The service will be fortnightly.

A news agency says that the Hamburg-American Steam Packet Company has withdrawn from the West Indian Conference in consequence of the inauguration of the Royal Mail Company's new service. It is affirmed that the Atlas Line, which is controlled by the Hamburg-American Company, will be seriously affected by the new service, and it is considered possible that a rate war will follow.

INQUIRIES ABOUT ALBERS.

Nicaraguan Minister Wants to Know of His Habits.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Letters have been received at the State Department from persons in different parts of the country stating that they have received communications from Mr. Corea, the Nicaraguan Minister here, about as follows:

"Understanding that you have an acquaintance with W. C. Albers, I should be pleased to have you furnish me with information with regard to his methods of life and business enterprises."

It is supposed that this information is intended to be used in the course of the negotiations between the Nicaraguan Government and the State Department here relative to the imprisonment of Albers, an American citizen, on a charge of resistance to Nicaraguan legal process.

JAPANESE A SUICIDE.

Couldn't Bear the Disgrace of the Peace Terms, He Said.

K. Nakamura, a Japanese, tried to kill himself by hara-kiri last night, and when this failed to bring death slashed his throat and then plunged from the roof of the Delaware Hotel, Third Avenue and Thirty-fourth Street, a distance of five stories. Nakamura had been unable to sleep for several days, and it was said at the hotel that he worried over the outcome of the Portsmouth conference.

Nakamura didn't have a keen-bladed Japanese dagger, so he ground a razor to a point and plunged it into his body. Then he waited for death, but it was not swift enough. With the strength he had left he crept from his room on the fourth floor of the hotel to the roof. Then he drew the razor blade across his throat and jumped.

Adjoining the Delaware Hotel is a one-story extension, used as a kitchen. The cooks at work there heard a thud and found the body.

Nakamer received some letters yesterday from Japan, in which his relatives told him of the riotous times and the discontent among the people over the outcome of the war.

"Life is not worth bearing such disgrace," he remarked as he left the reading room to go to his own room on the fourth floor. He immediately ground his razor to a keen point, packed up his effects, destroyed all his letters and documents, and prepared for the end of a Samurai.

Nakamer was about 35 years old, and is said to have been graduated from a university in Tokio. In his room was found $300 in cash and a notebook in which was the name, "George Horton, 137½ Union Street, Rockland, Me."

At the hotel it is believed that Nakamer is a fictitious name and that the man had something to do with the peace conference at Portsmouth. From what he had said, it is believed that he feared to return to his native country.

HILL'S RAILROAD PLANS.

Announces That Work on New Lines Is Being Rushed.

SEATTLE, Washington, Sept. 30.—James J. Hill, President of the Great Northern Railway, and party reached this city late yesterday, and in the evening were entertained at the Rainier Club. During the evening Mr. Hill made a speech in which he criticised the people of Washington for the creation of the Railway Commission. Later in an interview Mr. Hill made the following statement:

"The Portland and Seattle Railroad will be rushed to completion. It is being constructed for business purposes, and the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Railroads are jointly interested in this new line.

"At the present time we have 2,000 men at work on the construction of the Victoria, Vancouver and Eastern, and this line is to be completed quickly, as we are building up a trade in the British Columbia country which demands the use of branch lines in the immediate future.

"The name of the Great Northern has been associated with the projected Victoria, Westminster and Yukon Line, but the rumor is without foundation. In fact, the first I knew of this proposed railway movement was since reaching the coast."

HEAVY AUGUST DEATH LIST.

Cities Were More Healthy, But the Country Suffered Severely.

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The State Department of Health, in its monthly bulletin to-day, states that the mortality for August exceeded by 1,000 the average for seven years, which has been 10,800. The department says:

"The 12,800 deaths in July exceeded the average by 1,300. The epidemic mortality and from consumption this month (August) is but little above the average, so that the increase is almost entirely in local diseases and general diseases not epidemic.

"There is a considerable increase in the deaths from whooping cough, the mortality from which has commonly risen to its highest point in August in this State; its extensive prevalence at this time is to be noted. The typhoid fever mortality is excessive, and the increase is chiefly in the maritime district.

"Save in typhoid fever and whooping cough, the epidemic mortality is less in all diseases than in July, that from diarrhoeal diseases being reduced by 600, although still excessive. It is noteworthy that while the urban mortality is 1,200 less than in July, the death rate being reduced from 20.6 to 18.2, the deaths in rural towns has increased by almost 10 per cent., and their diarrhoeal mortality by 60 per cent. from that of July."

GAVE $300 FOR HIS LIFE.

Oyster Sloop Captain Bought Off Murderous Deckhand—A Man Missing.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 30.—Capt. Arie L. Johnson of Toddville, Md., master of the oyster sloop Annie Francis, is in a critical condition at St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering with a fractured skull, and his mate, Harry J. Farher, is at the same hospital, suffering with a lacerated scalp and other injuries, the result of being assaulted last night while asleep in the cabin of their vessel when off Rock Creek, by James Burrell, colored.

Burrell and Harry Gardner, a negro deckhand, were on watch while the mate and Captain slept. The assault was made with a chain hook and a handspike. Capt. Johnson says that he told his assailant he would give him $300, the amount derived from the sale of his cargo of oysters, if he would spare his life. The negro escaped with his booty in the boat's skiff, and has not been heard of since. Gardner, who was on watch with Burrell, is missing, and the belief is that he was murdered and thrown overboard.

The Francis was found floating down the Patapsco by the tug Uncle Sam, and was brought into port about 8 o'clock this morning.

"MRS. MARTIN" IDENTIFIED.

New York Woman Who Tried to Kill Herself in Philadelphia.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The mysterious "Mrs. Martin" who shot herself in Fairmount Park on Friday evening of last week and has since been in a critical condition at the German Hospital has been identified as a former resident of New York. Her maiden name was Cusick.

She is a daughter of James J. Cusick, who until his death, eight years ago, lived at 1,116 Ogden Street, in the Bronx.

Since the young woman tried to kill herself in the park she has made every effort to conceal her identity. It was learned late to-night that a woman who went to the hospital to see her last Wednesday was Mrs. George Myers of 71 West 105th Street, Manhattan. She arrived here in response to a letter sent by a clergyman at the request of "Mrs. Martin." Mrs. Myers departed without telling anything about the patient.

"Mrs. Martin," as she still calls herself, says she was wealthy, but lost her money because she was "not a business woman." With her fortune gone and with no more hope of a life of luxury, she said she became desperate and desired only to die unknown. It is believed to-night that she will live.

Hippodrome Rider in Peril.

Mlle. Therese Renz narrowly escaped injury while performing at the Hippodrome yesterday afternoon. She had finished with the white horse on which she gives high school exhibitions and had mounted Beautiful, a sorrel thoroughbred, who jumps a rawhide robe twirled by her rider. The animal was in nervous mood and shied as she rose in the air to clear the moving lash. Her hind feet came down on the ring bank and she fell prostrate. Mlle. Renz's dress was pinned under the horse. Frank Melville, equestrian director, and others went to her assistance and freed her

MURDER TO CONCEAL MURDER, IS CHARGED

Strange Tale of Three Tragedies in an Illinois City.

MAN IS DRIVEN TO SUICIDE

His Brother Goes to Chicago to Tell Story of Persecutions and His Suspicions.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Statements that may clear up the mystery of the death of John V. Streed, an attorney and politician, whose body was found at his office door in Cambridge, Ill., a week ago with a bullet in the head, were made here to-day by Byrd C. Powell, a veterinary surgeon of Sandwich. Mr. Powell believes the death of Streed and of his brother, William D. Powell, who committed suicide in Cambridge on Aug. 26, were due to the determination of men in control of the politics of that place to cover up the murder of a woman.

This woman, according to Powell, was a Swedish servant in the home of a wealthy resident of Cambridge. She died mysteriously and was buried secretly, without death certificae or inquest.

William D. Powell went to Cambridge to live about the time of her death, the facts of which he learned accidentally. His own domestic life was unhappy, and several men of prominence took the part of his wife. First stories detrimental to his business were circulated. Then a crowd made it their business to offend him in the street.

He wanted to arm himself, but was told the Sheriff would arrest him for carrying concealed weapons. Men visited him at unexpected hours, day and night, at his home and his office and told him he would better leave town. He refused to be intimidated. Finally he awoke one morning to find "tar and feathers" written on his door with a note ordering him to leave town within four days or suffer violence.

Then Powell summoned his brother. They talked all night long, William detailing the story of his sufferings, of his love for his wife, the persecutions and threats of death.

"What shall I do?" he asked in despair.

"Go after them," replied his brother. "You know something of the death of the girl. The men persecuting you are involved in that case."

Two detectives were taken to Cambridge to work up evidence on the death of the woman. W. D. Powell took their reports to Streed and asked him to prosecute the men. Streed refused to do it because it involved some of his best friends. William D. Powell's suicide followed.

Byrd C. Powell believes that Streed and some of the suspected men quarreled and in the dispute Streed betrayed some knowledge of the tragedy.

"My brother," said Dr. Powell to-day, "was hounded to death by a clique of men who control everything in the administration of law in Cambridge. His knowledge of the girl's death, passing to Streed, shifted to the latter the gang's enmity. If Streed was murdered it is a simple matter for the Cambridge authorities to figure out who are the persons interested in bringing about this death."

SHOWERS DEADLY HOT WATER

Plantations Ruined and Ships Deluged by Nicaraguan Volcano.

MAZATLAN, Mexico, Sept. 30.—The Santiago volcano in Nicaragua is in violent eruption, and is throwing water and hot rocks over a considerable area. Passengers arriving here on Pacific Mail steamers and on the Kosmos liner from the south report that the hot water fell on the vessels at several locations off the coast of Nicaragua.

At the port of Corinto it was stated that millions of coffee trees on plantations adjacent to the volcano had been destroyed by boiling water falling upon them.

The Santiago volcano had not been violently active for several years.

Ladies' Tailored Suits. 3d Floor.

Of all outer garments the most serviceable is the tailored suit—for morning or street wear its appropriateness is unquestioned, likewise for the matinee or informal calling. It is essential, however, that it be made of the proper material and so perfectly cut that the tailor's careful sewing combines to make a garment that neither usage nor stormy weather can put out of shape. Tailored suits of this sort are the kind for which we are famous—we specialize and supervise their manufacture with censorship so severe that we can unhesitatingly recommend any garment in our stock to give satisfaction in fit, serviceableness of material and a guarantee that its shapeliness will be maintained to the time you discard it.

On MONDAY we will place on special sale for two days only two models of tailored suits, 50 inch coats, one tight, the other semi-fitting, made of superior quality broadcloth or excellent cheviot, plaited or stitched strap seams, in black and the exclusively favored distinctive colorings of this season—a positive value of $33.00, for sale on Monday and Tuesday only.... $24.95

Killed by a Subway Express.

An unidentified negro was almost instantly killed by an express train in the Subway at Ninety-first Street yesterday afternoon. How he got on the tracks is a mystery. The body was thrown over on to the third rail and the man's clothing was almost entirely burned off it. In a portion of the man's coat was a ticket to Liberty, N. Y., and two baggage checks.

I TOLD YOU SO, CHORUS THE ELDER STATESMEN

They Do Not Find the Unfusing of the Fusionists Surprising.

FUNNY IF WOODRUFF RUNS

And Then Turns Up as Odell's Man for Governor—Some Observations About That Black Incident.

"Well, I see that the frictionists—leastways the Fusionists—have unfused," said the Elder Statesman from Chemung yesterday, addressing the political postgraduates in the Amen Corner at the Fifth Avenue.

"Never expected any other result," remarked the Elder Statesman from Columbia, "don't believe I ever knew of a worse case of political misalliance than the attempt to wed the Republican Party to the Hearst League. No wonder leading men in the Republican Party stepped right at the halter—I mean the altar—and forbade the ceremony.

"Say, I saw from the start that Cutting wasn't stuck on his job as best man. You see, when he attends a meeting of the Citizen's Union City Committee he wears his evening clothes. When he went to meetings of the Fusionists he was disguised in his business suit. That gave him away. Why, when the match was broken off he was so tickled that he just couldn't restrain himself from going up to William Halpin and expressing his thanks for the relief."

"Whom do you think the Republicans will run?" asked the Elder Statesman from Westchester.

"Don't look as if it was going to be a running match. Strikes me it will be just pedestrian exercise for McClellan. Of course they'll have to get the best man they can to make a showing for the organization. Woodruff would be a good man, if he would take it. But Tim's too old a bird to be caught by putting salt on his tail."

"Wouldn't it be funny," asked the Elder Statesman from Brooklyn, "if Woodruff were to run for Mayor and then turn up in the next State Convention as Odell's candidate for Governor?"

"Well," observed the Elder Statesman from Columbia, "it would be interesting if the line-up in the next State Convention should be just the reverse of that in the State Convention a year ago, but just as strange things are happening all the time in politics. There's just about as much gratitude in politics as there was virtue in Gomorrah. Put it down as a settled principle of the game that political leaders will line up as they think will best promote their interests in the future regardless of obligations they may have incurred in the past.

"Now, brethren, we have heard a lot in the last two weeks about Odell's ingratitude to Black, as shown in the Senatorship matter. Of course, Odell did go back on Black. But to hear Black and his friends talk, you'd think that in their whole careers they had never had a similar smudge on their political togas. Now, let's see about that.

"When Black got mad at Odell because Odell switched about and threw his influence to Depew for Senator, what did Black do? Why, he made an agreement with Barnes, according to Barnes, that he would support Surrogate Fitts, Barnes's candidate for Supreme Court Judge in the Third Judicial District against Odell's candidate, Hasbrouck. Now, Hasbrouck has been for years the Republican leader of Ulster County and Black never had a more loyal political friend in the State than he.

In every fight that Black has had Hasbrouck has been his stanch supporter. He was one of the men who stood by Black when Platt and Barnes turned him down for Roosevelt in the convention of 1898. He was for Black for Senator against Depew. But it was Odell who appointed Hasbrouck to the Supreme Court, and for that reason, and no other, Black makes an alliance with Barnes, who opposed him in 1898 for Governor, and was Depew's political manager in the Senate fight to beat for renomination the man who has always been his political friend.

"The prospects are, I understand, that Black will deliver Rensselaer County's vote for Barnes's man in the Judiciary Convention to be held in Albany on Oct. 5, but the vote of Columbia County will go for Hasbrouck. There was no more ardent supporter of Black for Senator than Lou Payn, but the old man won't desert his neighbor across the river."

"I noticed when the news was printed about the meeting between Odell and Black at the Manhattan Beach Hotel some of Black's friends insisted that there was to be no political reconciliation between them, but that Black had sent for Odell merely for the purpose of enlisting his influence in behalf of Justice Hooker," said the Elder Statesman from Herkimer.

"Yes, and I don't imagine that will help the Black-Barnes candidate a whole lot in the event that Hasbrouck is defeated," said the Elder Statesman from Columbia. "I suppose you've noticed the way Republican members of the Assembly who voted to acquit Hooker are being turned down for renomination all over the State. I remember hearing Jim Sheldon of Cattaraugus say he would cast his vote for Hooker's acquittal if it was to be the last act of his political life. Looks like Jim had a hunch on what was coming to him. They beat him out for renomination on the Hooker issue. They 'handed it' out to Charles Foster in the Second Jefferson on the same account.'

One of the Elder Statesmen remarked that he had noticed in the papers that Harry H. Bender had not been re-elected Treasurer of the Albany County Republican organization.

"Yes," said the Elder Statesman from Columbia, "I heard there was trouble between Bender and Barnes. I don't know what it is about, but I have my own ideas. Bender was appointed Fiscal Supervisor by Odell and some say Barnes thought he couldn't count on Bender's loyalty in the coming State fight. But my idea about it is entirely different.

"Bender, you may recall, has had trouble with the Civil Service Commission over levying on the employes of his office for political contributions. The commission was making it so hot for Bender that he got scared and hastened down to Columbia County where he got a court order staying further proceedings by the commission against him and the boys. I don't think Barnes was willing to continue as Treasurer of the Albany County organization a man who would levy tribute for political purposes on his employes—and get caught at it."

Here an Elder Statesman knocked three times on wood and all the Statesmen adjourned to where the sandwiches are kept.

OPPOSE JUSTICE WRIGHT.

Onondaga Delegation Will Vote to Nominate De Angelis for Judge.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 30.—The Onondaga County Republican Convention this afternoon named the following delegates to the Fifth Judicial Convention at Oswego next Tuesday.

Charles Andrews, ex-Chief Judge of the Court of Appeals; J. B. Brooks, William Nottingham, Leroy B. Williams, M. E. Driscoll, F. A. Kuntzsch, Horace White, C. H. Lewis, F. R. Hazard, C. G. Baldwin, E. I. Edgcomb, A. P. Fowler, C. C. Cole, and W. W. Cheney.

The delegation was not instructed, but it is understood will vote as a unit. Its leaders openly favor the nomination of P. J. C. De Angelis of Utica, and are opposed to Justice M. L. Wright of Oswego.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 30.—The Republicans of the Seventh Judicial District today nominated Justice Nathaniel Foote and County Judge Arthur E. Sutherland to be Justices of the Supreme Court. The Democrats named John Desmond and G. Fort Slocum.

ACKER TO OPPOSE CROMWELL

Richmond Democratic Leaders Pick Him for Borough President.

The Democratic leaders of Richmond County have decided to nominate Augustus Acker of New Brighton for Borough President, against President George Cromwell. Mr. Acker long has been one of the chief lieutenants of Tax Commissioner Nicholas Muller, the Democratic leader of the borough.

Some of the disaffected Democrats of Staten Island, seeking to aid the re-election of President Cromwell on the Republican ticket, are talking of nominating Joseph H. Maloy of West New Brighton as a third candidate, with Sheriff Sutherland as second choice. These Democrats are circulating a report that an agreement has been made between Muller and Charles F. Murphy whereby Staten Island is to be taken into Tammany and Muller made a member of the Tammany Executive Committee.

At Tammany Hall yesterday it was said that under the State laws each county must have its independent party organizations and that Tammany therefore is confined to New York County. Mr. Muller has heretofore worked in harmony with Tammany.

KNEW MAN WHO KNEW GIRARD.

Bronxite Arrested for the Admission—Watch on Mott Haven Canal.

Detective Sam Price last night discovered a man who said he knew another man who was harboring Girard, the alleged murderer of Gussie Pfeiffer. Price held on to the man and tried to make him give up the man's name, but he wouldn't.

"Don't you know that it is your duty to tell us anything you know about a murderer?" Detective Price asked him. The plea was unavailing, so Price decided to take the man before Coroner O'Gorman, put him under oath, and either make him tell what he knew or commit perjury.

The man weakened before Price got as far as the Coroner's office.

"The man who has been harboring Girard lives near the Mott Haven Canal," he told Price. That was sufficient to get his release.

At 1 o'clock this morning, a squad of the Bronx detectives was sitting watch over the Mott Haven Canal district, in the neighborhood of 138th Street and Third Avenue.

When Hugh McEnerey of Stamford, Conn., who was arrested after a chase through swamps for a supposed Girard yesterday morning, was arraigned in Morrisania Court, Magistrate Whitman asked Detective Dillon:

"Are you sure this isn't Girard?"

"Naw, it ain't," said Dillon. "He used to serve me with ice once, and I know him."

McEnerey was sent to the Workhouse.

"There ain't no Girard, I don't believe," remarked the court officer, as he led McEnerey out.

ERROR IN BIG MORTGAGE.

Rectified by Stockholders of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Sept. 30.—A special meeting of the stockholders of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton was held to-day for the purpose of correcting an error in the recorded mortgage given by the company as security for the $22,500,000 issue of consolidated mortgage bonds.

It was originally intended to make the bonds redeemable at par at any time within five years, and this condition was inserted in the recorded mortgage. It was decided, however, to omit this condition, and it was omitted in the bonds as actually engraved. It was not until after the bonds had been engraved that the error in the mortgage was discovered, and it was necessary to refer the matter to the stockholders for correction.

In order to concentrate the management of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton and the Ann Arbor in the hands of the same men, three members of the Board of Directors of the first-named road, F. A. Durhan, James E. Tolfree, and G. M. Cumming, have been chosen as the Executive Committee of the Ann Arbor. G. Casper Niles has been made Secretary of the Ann Arbor in place of D. C. Tate, who still retains his position as Director of the company.

FAMILY LIVES IN HENCOOP.

Neighbors Find Mother and Five Children Starving—Her Husband Gone.

Special to The New York Times.

VERONA, N. J., Sept. 30.—With a dilapidated chicken coop as a home, Mrs. Matilda Hogan and her five children, the eldest 10 years old, were found by neighbors this morning in the Cedar Grove section of the town. They were in great destitution. Hogan, the woman says, has left her.

The fact that the family had not died of starvation was due to some Italian families in the vicinity, who contributed eatables from their gardens. The Hogan family was dispossessed recently. The hen coop was rented to Mrs. Hogan, and to enable her to have a temporary shelter, one of the neighbors paid $1 to-day to the landlord for a month beginning tomorrow. The elder children sleep on the bare floor in a loft reached by climbing a cleated pole.

Overseer of the Poor Wehh Mitchell today explained that he had been unable to help the family, as the poor fund is exhausted.

MOB TACKLES MOTORMAN.

Child's Death Under Wheels Angered the Crowd—Police Intervene.

Confused in crossing the avenue, eight-year-old Martha Richardson of 672 Third Avenue, who had been sent on an errand, stepped in front of a Third Avenue car close to Forty-third Street last evening and was killed. It was about 7 o'clock and the streets were crowded. At once a mob surrounded the motorman, P. J. Malley, but he was protected by two policemen, who took him into a barber's shop to await the patrol wagon.

Before the wrecking car arrived the crowd lifted the car high enough to remove the body from under the forward trucks.

BERMEL RESIGNS.

Queens Public Works Commissioner Out in Earnest Against Cassidy.

Joseph Bermel, Commissioner of Public Works of the Borough of Queens, resigned yesterday to enter the political fight as the opponent of Borough President Cassidy. It was reported in Long Island City that the Republican leaders in the borough had decided to offer Mr. Bermel the nomination for Borough President and had indorsed Ira G. Darrin for District Attorney and Dr. Samuel D. Nutt of Woodhaven and William Connors of College Point for Coroners.

It is understood that the Bermel organization in Newtown will nominate all these candidates by petition.

Two May Die After Crap Game Fight.

As the wind-up of a crap game and free fight, George Reilley of 422 East One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, and Thomas Anderson, who lived at 420, both negroes, are in the Harlem Hospital, so seriously wounded that they may die. Reilley has bullet wounds in the right leg and abdomen. Anderson has three stab wounds in the back. Some one accused Charles Harris, who was playing with them, of cheating. Harris, it is said, drew a revolver and fired six shots. No policeman was near.

ANOTHER MILWAUKEE OFFICIAL INDICTED

President of Council Accused on Twenty Counts.

ORGANIZED VICE AND CRIME

Grand Jury Denounces Conditions in the City—Says Perjury Has Been Outrageous.

Special to The New York Times.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 30.—The final report of the Grand Jury which has been investigating municipal and county "graft" for the past four months, was made to-night, and it was the most sensational of the entire session, both because of the indictments returned and because of those not returned.

Cornelius Corcoran, President of the City Council, was indicted on twenty counts for such offenses as selling feed to the city; Frederick C. Schultz, a newspaper reporter, was indicted on one count for bribery in connection, it is believed, with a street railway franchise; Frederick K. Lode, manager of the biggest furniture store in the city, was indicted on one count for bribery, and ex-Alderman Murphy was indicted on two counts for perjury.

The men not indicted, but who, it had been expected, would be caught in the net, included Mayor Rose, who defied the Grand Jury to indict him when asked why he permitted gambling houses to run openly in defiance of the law, and who declared that the Grand Jury was not trying to catch boodlers, but to get campaign material for the La Follette branch of the Republican Party, and City Attorney Runge, who, it was thought, would be indicted on some minor count in order to force evidence relating to a street railway franchise granted six years ago.

It is rather the indictments which were not brought than those which were brought that surprise Milwaukee. The Grand Jury has been trying through the entire session to get evidence warranting an indictment against Mayor Rose, on political grounds alone, Rose asserts. Ex-Alderman Murphy, also alleging that the Grand Jury was in business to secure campaign material for the La Follette leaders, voluntarily went before the jury and confessed to receiving bribee from two La Follette men who were not indicted.

He declared publicly, after making the confession, that his object was to give the jury a chance to prove that it was trying to eradicate crime and not to help a political campaign. Instead of securing the indictment of the men who gave him money, he was himself indicted and the others went free.

As soon as the Grand Jury made its report, at 10:30 o'clock to-night, Deputy Sheriffs were sent out to bring in the indicted men, who were at once allowed to give bail. All were arrested before midnight.

The total number of indictments returned since the jury convened, including to-night's batch, will approximate nearly 150, and will affect about 40 individuals. In its report on the labors of the Summer the Grand Jury took occasion to say that its investigation had developed a most surprising state of affairs—"vice and crime regularly organized and fostered."

"We doubt," continues the report, "if one citizen in a thousand knows the corrupt ways in which the affairs of this community have been conducted. The effort fully to expose these conditions has been opposed by the systematic resistance of powerful influences, apparently syndicated to conceal the truth and encourage crime. We have been hampered by the efforts of witnesses to conceal the facts, and in many of these instances it has been apparent that the witness was testifying falsely. Our observations regarding the vice and crime of perjury is such that we must regard it as nothing short of outrageous."

SAY HE STOLE $2,700.

Printing House Manager, His Way Paid to Honolulu, Arrested.

On a charge of stealing $2,700, Henry L. Bullen, who said he had no home, was arrested by Pinkerton detectives last night and locked up in Police Headquarters. The complaint was made by James C. Kelly, general manager of the United Printing Machinery Company of Boston, with offices at 12 Spruce Street. Bullen was the manager of the New York office, and, it is alleged, disappeared on Sept. 18. When his accounts were gone over, it is alleged that $2,700 in money and checks was missing.

Bullen was seen last night by private detectives at Manhattan Crossing, East New York. When they arrested him he resisted, refusing to go with the detectives without a warrant. He was finally put in a cab, and taken to the Liberty Avenue Station, Brooklyn, where he was searched. In his hat, the police say, they found $173 and a receipt for $300 for transportation to Honolulu.

The detectives later took Bullen to Police Headquarters in Manhattan. He carried two suit cases and a small valise. He refused to make any statement.

Extreme Measures Taken to Stamp Out Diphtheria at Annapolis.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Sept. 30.—Extreme measures were taken to-day at the Naval Academy in the effort to stamp out the diphtheria among the new fourth class.

All the Midshipmen not affected were removed to the Hartford, lying in the Severn River, and, with new bedding served out to them, have taken up their quarters on that ship. Their clothing was fumigated.

As a further precaution the Academy authorities may postpone the opening of the Academy until Oct. 15.

MR. ALLIEN'S BODY HERE.

His Widow Arrives from Paris on the Lorraine with It.

The body of Laurent H. Allien of this city, who died in Paris on Aug. 9, arrived on the Lorraine yesterday. It was accompanied by his widow and Mr. Allien's sister.

Mr. Allien, who lived at 550 Park Avenue, was the son of an old New York merchant, and was born in Beaver Street in 1843. His grandfather was a Lieutenant in the French Navy under Louis XVI., and while stationed at Santo Domingo married a planter's daughter. He afterward settled in New York, having fled with his wife during a negro insurrection.

A brother of Mr. Allien's grandfather fought with Lord Byron for Grecian independence, and was captured with him at Missilonghi. Col. Rigall, an uncle of Mr. Allien, at one time commanded the arsenal which stood on the site of Madison Square in 1806.

SPLIT IN STATE BOARD ON CITY CIVIL SERVICE

Majority Censures Local Officers for Avoidance of Merit System.

SECRETARY BERLINGER CLEAR

Both Reports Dismiss Charges Against Him—Kraft, in Minority, Defends Present Regime.

The investigation by the State Civil Service Commission into the operation of the civil service rules under the New York City commission resulted in a split among the investigators and two reports were handed to Gov. Higgins yesterday. The majority report devotes twenty-eight pages to censure of the prevailing methods. A briefer minority doument upholds the municipal commission.

The investigation was made upon the complaint of the Civil Service Reform Association. The majority report was signed by Charlee F. Milliken and Roscoe C. E. Brown, while John E. Kraft signed the minority finding. The report would have been made public before, it is said, but that Mr. Kraft held out, declaring that the charges against Henry Berlinger, Secretary of the municipal commission, were for the most part "frivolous and unimportant."

The majority report deals with each specific matter eeparately. Numerous suggestione are made about the civil service regulations in New York City.

In the matter of the charges against Secretary Berlinger the majority says that, while it does not sustain the charges, it holds that he erred in many acte pertaining to his office. In part, it declares:

"While the State commission realizes thet it is beyond human ingenuity to freme rules that would meet every case or that would effectually bar the Municipal Civil Service Commission or other city officers from emasculating the merit system, if so disposed, and that the main reliance for its enforcement must be upon public sentiment and the character of the officers at the head of the City Government, the inquiry has directed attention to faults in rules whose correction would make for directness and efficiency of administration.

"Upon the municipal commission lies the duty of making such corrections. Upon it also lies the duty of inquiring into the fitness of its Secretary and other subordinates and into the efficiency of the organization of its examining department, with a view to replacing the incapable or unworthy public servants. It should find means for expediting the holding of examinations, rating papers, and establishing eligible lists, in order that there may be no occasion or excuse for extended provisional appointments. It should safeguard the examinations from political or other outside interference.

"To this end the classification of ten expert examiners should be abolished and sole reliance be had for this service upon appointees from the eligible lists. Further disregard of the civil services rules by the municipal commission itself, in the selection of monitors by favor rather than according to the plain provision of the rules, and in the arbitrary rerating of examination papers, would warrant the inference that opportunity is designedly given for exercise of political or personal favoritism.

"The municipal commission is called upon also to use its power to investigate and correct abuses in the matter of transfers, and in the appointment of laborers under titles not authorized; to discontinue the certification of accounts, such as that of foreman of laborers under titles not appropriate to the duties of the places held."

Commissioner Kraft in his minority report says that a comparison of the work of the previous and the present commissions redounds entirely to the credit of the latter. He contends that the present Municipal Service Commission is "deserving of commendation rather than blame."

SAND OBSTRUCTS DRY DOCK.

Will Cost Contractors at Charleston Navy Yard $25,000.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Sept. 30.—On account of the giving way of a portion of a temporary supporting structure on the south wall of the new dry dock at the Charleston Navy Yard, a great quantity of sand and mud drifted into the dock late Friday night, and it is estimated that the contractor will suffer to the extent of $25,000.

The Government, having a contract, will not lose anything, and the delay in getting the dirt out will amount to about two weeks.

COLUMBIA'S REGISTRATION.

Comparative Figures Show Decrease of 104 Over Last Year.

The registration of students at Columbia University to date shows a decrease of 104 over last year. The decrease is largest in the School of Medicine, although both the School of Law and the School of Applied Science have suffered.

The college department, the graduate schools, and the School of Fine Arts show increases.

The Columbia Spectator says the figures show little cause for congratulation. The falling off of medical students it attributes to the increase of the tuition fee. No explanation is attempted in regard to the falling off of the Law School.

HALTS COLUMBIA STUDENTS.

Faculty Warns Them Against Violating Their Own Hazing Rules.

The Faculty at Columbia University has decided that in future no violation of the rules adopted last Winter by the students regulating student affairs shall be tolerated. After the rope rush of Thursday, which came off two weeks before it was scheduled, Dean Van Amringe announced to his sophomore classes that any student violating the rules in future would be subjected to immediate discipline.

The rules are those adopted by the students soon after the suspension of four sophomores for the attempted hazing of Kingdon Gould.

THE CHARGE MUST BE ANSWERED.

A dispatch from Oyster Bay to The Herald declares that The Railroad Gazette's charge that the President has accepted free transportation from the railroads of the country "is obviously unanswerable by the Administration." We are not of that opinion. The charge is much too serious to be left unanswered. There must be an answer, and we have little doubt that it will satisfactorily exculpate the President. The public has not forgotten the semi-official statement made in Washington some weeks ago that the President would not accept free transportation from the railroads. That statement was understood to relate to past as well as future time. It has not been disclaimed—indeed, it was understood to have emanated from the White House. That announcement is altogether incompatible with the charge now made by The Railroad Gazette, which we here set forth:

> The major-domo of the President of the United States communicated by long-distance telephone to a trunk line President the following information and request: The President, with certain public officers and friends, desires to leave Washington on a date named for a trip through several States and stopping at specified cities. For this purpose he wants a special train, and suggests for his own use a certain private car which he has already used and which suits him. He would also like to have a certain porter, name given, who had served him before and whom he liked. A list of special supplies for the dining car, in addition to the ordinary commissary, was also submitted. The railroad President assured the President's representative that a plan would be immediately prepared in full detail and forwarded by mail.
> This was done without delay. The special private car asked for was at the time in far distant service, and therefore unavailable, but it happened that quite an exact duplicate could be put at the President's disposal. Neither was the particular porter to be had. Circumstances had led to a transfer of his racial volatilities to another sphere of service and entertainment. With these exceptions a schedule was made in full detail, giving arriving and leaving times and complying with all of the President's suggestions.
>
> The last sentence in the communication informed the major-domo that a nominal charge of $50 a day would be made for this special train, fully officered and provisioned. It was really a "nominal" charge, being less than cost. Nevertheless it produced an immediate reply and protest—by telephone: There was no authorized appropriation of public funds for such an expenditure, and the President could not possibly afford to pay it from his private purse. Unless the service could be furnished gratuitously it would not be acceptable.
> Railroad Presidents are not hard bargainers with powerful rulers, and in this case the reply was cordial and reassuring—no charge would be made for the service. But the itinerary covered many hundreds of miles of travel on other roads, and the officers of those other roads, not dealing with the Presidential party, found an easily understandable pleasure in sending to the trunk line President their several bills for hauling the Presidential train over their lines. The bills were paid, but some of the letters accompanying them were unanswered.

We regret that The Railroad Gazette has not felt called upon to be somewhat more specific. What President of the United States is referred to in its article? Doubtless Mr. ROOSEVELT is meant, for the article refers to speeches he has made upon certain topics which have come to be considered peculiarly his own. But the name of Mr. ROOSEVELT is not mentioned. What trip of the President was it for which payment was refused by his "major-domo"? What was the great railroad system whose President had to foot the bills? Was it the President's trip to the South and West last Spring, and was it Mr. CASSATT of the Pennsylvania Railroad who was called up by Mr. LOEB on the telephone?

The impropriety of the conduct attributed to the President in The Railroad Gazette's article is simply shocking, and for that reason we decline in default of proof and specifications to accept it as well-founded. In the first place, it would be a violation of the law for the railroads to extend or for the President to accept such "courtesies." Common carriers are forbidden to give special rates, rebates, drawbacks, or by any other device to discriminate between their patrons. Officers of one of the Beef Trust corporations have just paid a fine of $25,000 for demanding and accepting a lower rate than that given by their competitors. The President has been eager for the civil and criminal prosecution of violators of the law forbidding railroad discriminations. Moreover, he is engaged in an attempt to persuade or compel Congress to give him the power through a Commission to fix the charges which railroads shall be permitted to make for carrying freight. The railroads oppose this policy. The Pennsylvania Railroad, whatever may be said about it publicly, is opposed to the ratemaking legislation demanded by the President. It is incredible that the President would be willing to accept costly and uncompensated service from the very railroads whose hostility he has provoked through his Executive policy.

We should suppose that a denial would be promptly forthcoming. That is the only satisfactory answer. It is the answer the people will expect, for they have not been accustomed to look upon their President as a deadhead, in anything. They will be most reluctant to believe the charge. If through any blundering, any blunted sense of proprietv on the part of those who make arrangements for his frequent trips, the railroads have been asked to carry him and his parties over their lines for nothing, a check to the order of the railroad President who paid the bills would be a tardy answer, but reasonably satisfactory; at least, it would be the only answer now possible. Some answer to the charge will, of course, be made.

INTERFERING WITH INVESTIGATION.

Mr. BENDER, the Fiscal Supervisor of State Charities, has his own ideas of the terrors of investigation. He has been charged with a violation of the civil service law in the matter of securing political contributions from persons in the service of the State. The charges were taken up by the State Commission under what appears to be as plain a direction of the law as language can provide. The accused, instead of courting the fullest inquiry, which would seem to be the natural course for an innocent man charged with a peculiarly discreditable abuse of official power, appeared only by counsel before the commission, and his counsel objected to the authority of the commission. So far as we are capable of understanding the argument of the lawyers of Mr. BENDER, it was without reasonable foundation in the statute and could be regarded only as a means of preventing an investigation obviously required by the public interest. The question having been raised, however, the commission very properly referred it for an opinion of the Attorney General of the State. That authority, as we expected, reported that the objection could not be sustained, that the purpose of the law was clear, that it was adequately expressed, and that it was the duty of the commission to proceed with the investigation.

That, it would seem, ought to have satisfied Mr. BENDER and relieved him of any apprehension that the truth as to his conduct was to be brought out in an irregular manner. It seems that it did not satisfy him at all, and that his counsel proceeded to secure from a Judge in Troy an order requiring the State Commission and the Civil Service Reform Association, which had requested the investigation, to appear before a Judge in Hudson at a date fixed, and show cause why they should not be enjoined from any further attempt to throw light on the guilt or innocence of Mr. BENDER in the matter of prohibited political contributions. Far be it from us to say that the issue of such an order was not within the strict construction of the powers of the court. That point will be decided when the question is carried to the highest courts that may have to deal with it. Meanwhile we venture to express our sorrow that a politician of the reputed courage of Mr. BENDER should with such persistence and ingenuity dodge investigation.

JAPANESE EMIGRATION.

Probably there is no precedent for the communication which Mr. STEVENS, the American diplomatic adviser to the Emperor of Korea, has made to the agent of our Department of Commerce and Labor, apparently with leave to quote. In this matter the Government of Korea is the Government of Japan. By the treaty of peace Korea is become a dependency of Japan, and, after experience with the Russian exploiters of Korea, whose performances were the proximate cause of the war, is apparently satisfied with that position. Mr. STEVENS is not authorized to speak for Japan, and has the advantage, for Japan as well as for himself, of being disavowable. But there is reason to believe that he would not have spoken at all unless he had reason to believe that the sentiments he imputed to Japan were in fact the sentiments of the Japanese Government. And there is every reason why they should be so. What he has to say is that the Japanese Government would not at all object to an American prohibition of Japanese emigration, either to the United States or to any American dependency, such as the Hawaiian or the Philippine Islands, provided the prohibition were couched in terms not wounding to the dignity of Japan.

This is what we should expect from the sagacity which the statesmen of Japan have shown in forwarding the interests of their country. Japan is a crowded country, so crowded that its population cannot subsist comfortably within its borders. The expansion of Japan means a field for Japanese emigration as well as an outlet for the surplus product of Japanese industries. And it behooves Japan to send its surplus population where it will still be Japanese, still a source of national strength. It was with that view that Japan acquired Formosa ten years ago, and would have acquired Southern Manchuria if a European coalition had not intervened to prevent this latter acquisition. Now this latter acquisition has been obtained in spite of the European coalition, and is guaranteed by the first naval power in the world, while Korea is likewise abandoned to Japan. The object of Japanese policy must be to Japanize Korea and Southern Manchuria, among other methods by diverting to them all the emigration of the Empire. This country and the dependencies of this country offer rival fields of emigration which it is to the advantage of Japan to have closed, so that the only stream of emigration shall be diverted to countries under Japanese influence or control.

This same notion of restricting emigration to the possessions of the "metropolis" was at the bottom of BISMARCK'S project of German colonization. That policy has proved to be a fantastic failure for the reason that the German emigrant would not go whither the German Government desired him to go, but whither the best opportunities allured him. And he even counted escaping from the control of the German Government a distinct gain and one of his motives to emigration. If we had passed a law prohibiting German immigration, we should have been playing into BISMARCK'S hands.

We have no right to say that the Japanese emigrant desires to escape the control of his own Government in seeking to better himself. There is no evidence to that effect. But he may well consider that the United States and their dependencies offer him a better chance to better himself than the Japanese Empire and its dependencies. Wherefore an American prohibition against Japanese immigration, provided it was not couched in offensive terms, and did not involve the insulting of Japanese tourists, officials, or other exempt classes, would excellently serve the purposes of the Japanese Government.

JUSTICE INGRAHAM.

Now that it is reasonably plain to the Tammany leaders that they can have their own way in the general field at the coming election, the danger of the turning down of Justice INGRAHAM for re-election is obviously greater, and it is not likely to be avoided except by a strong expression of public sentiment in the matter.

The Justice is an exceptionally good judicial officer. He has ample knowledge of the law, he has a fair and open mind, he is efficient in the performance of work, he has courage and independence of judgment, and what is a large addition to his qualifications, he has experience and the confidence of the bar and of the public which sound experience wins. He is an excellent example of the kind of Judge who should be kept on the bench as long as the law allows, and his re-election would be in the line of the principle of independence of party considerations which has made solid progress in the last twenty years. It is all the more desirable because he has been a useful member of the Appellate Court, on which devolves more and more important duties with every year. The more this court is strengthened, the more certain its decisions are to be sustained, the process of administering justice becomes more trustworthy and prompt. The loss of a qualified Judge from that court is, on the other hand, a distinct set-back to expeditious and sure administration of justice. There can be no doubt that the true interests of the community, not merely of this city, but of the whole State, and in a measure of the country, would be served by maintaining a fit Judge on the Appellate bench. Under our system of jurisprudence, the decisions of the higher courts of each State, and especially of the State of New York, in which such large interests enter into litigation, go to make up the body of law. For such work Justice INGRAHAM is peculiarly competent.

It has been reported that Mr. MURPHY desires to withhold the nomination from Justice INGRAHAM because the latter declined to vote as Mr. MURPHY wished for Commissioner of Jurors. Mr. MURPHY has not thought best to deny this report, and it has generally been accepted as true. But it would be so obviously contrary to the permanent interests of the Democratic Party in the city and in the State to take action of this sort for such a motive that we do not like to believe Mr. MURPHY capable of it. And even if he were inclined to it, it should be possible for the more enlightened leaders in the party to restrain him. For some years past the conduct of the Democratic organization with reference to the judiciary has shown decided improvement. The sentiment of the better element has had more influence than formerly it had. This change has been in harmony with that denoted by the nominations of Mr. SHEPARD and Mr. MCCLELLAN. It is a recognition of the force of public opinion on matters of real importance. It ought to be possible for public opinion to make itself felt in the case of Justice INGRAHAM. If a movement of adequate strength and representative character were started in the bar, we are confident that it would meet with a prompt and hearty response from the general public, and we trust that it would be respected by the organization.

THE BENGALI BOYCOTT.

On the face of it, the Bengali boycott of British goods, like the Sepoy mutiny, is another affair of "greased cartridges." That is to say, it is a failure on the part of the conquerors to take account of the sentiments of the conquered. For it is quite inconceivable that if the sentiments of the Sepoys in the one case or of the Bengalis in the other, had been known, the British Government of India would have risked the results of ordering its native soldiers to bite hog's fat, or its native subjects to submit to an administrative division, for the convenience of the administrators, which is fiercely resented by the native population as a new and threatening denial of "nationality." Such a blunder as either of these might be excused to a newcomer. It might be excused, for example, to an American Government of the Philippines, in which the American Government is only seven years old, and is still busied with learning the sentimente and prejudices of the Filipinos. But with British rule in India something like a century and a half in duration, such things do not happen without very culpable negligence on the part of somebody.

Not that the boycott is likely to amount to much. We have lately seen a like boycott proclaimed against American goods in China, and proclaimed, we have regretfully to own, on very good grounds, as the only means the boycotters had of protesting against a series of scandalous national injustices. But we have already seen the end as well as the beginning of the Chinese boycott in its most important article. The chief American import into the ports where the boycott has prevailed is petroleum; and the exclusion of American petroleum from China would have been, commercially, a serious matter. Our only competitor in that market was Russia. Luckily for us (the pious Mr. ROCKEFELLER might say "Providentially") the Tartars and the Armenians began at the same time to engage in reciprocal rioting at Baku, and destroyed 5,000 oil towers, putting the Russian product for the time out of competition. As the Chinamen really had to have petroleum, they had to take it from us, boycott or no boycott, and they had to take it at the prices enhanced by reason of the misfortunes of our competitor.

The trade of the seventy-five millions of Bengali is an important object to Mancheeter and Birmingham and other British industrial centres. If it could be withdrawn from England and sent elsewhere, those towns would suffer. But the fact is that the Bengalis have no choice. They buy nothing but neceesaries, and those they must buy in the cheapest market. The cheapest market being British, they must continue, whatever fifty thousand of them at a time may swear, to buy them of Great Britain. If the Germans, "the cuckoos of commerce," as the indignant Britons call them, had been apprised beforehand of the stroke of unwisdom which Lord CURZON'S Government was about to inflict, and had had their industrial agencies ready, they might have drawn some profit out of the political conflict, and some thousands of Bengalis might have walked abroad in their might and majesty clad in cottons "made in Germany." But, since these conditions were not fulfilled, the Bengali boycotters are still shut up to the British market and, when their indignation subsides and their clothes wear out, will continue to supply themselves from the output of British looms. Which fact does not, of course, excuse or palliate the act of the British administrators who have stirred up this perfectly unnecessary disturbance by reason of their ignorance of the state of things respecting which they were charged with knowledge.

CIVIC ASSOCIATION.

The American Civic Association is an organization of comparatively recent date, but it deserves encouragement, and doubtless will receive it when its plans and purposes are better known. This year the annual meeting, the first one, by the way, will be held next Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday at Cleveland, Ohio, a city chosen partly owing to its central location, partly because in Cleveland there is being worked out the Group Plan for municipal buildings, which was adopted in the belief that it will make Cleveland a more comfortable and healthful as well as more beautiful city. The address of welcome to delegates from New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco, and other cities will be made by the Mayor, who is no other than that irrepressible Tribune of the People, the Hon. TOM L. JOHNSON. He will be answered for the Association by its President, J. HORACE MCFARLAND of Harrisburg. During the sessions of the conference the delegates will discuss such topics as improvement work among children, public libraries, factory betterment, the improvement of cities, home improvement, outdoor art and the arts and crafts in their relation to cities, park and city plans, railway and rural improvement, good roads, and other topics belonging to this movement, which seeks to lay down the least costly and most efficacious methods of making life in town and country more livable.

The delegates and speakers at this meeting include many well-known architects, landscape engineers, and experts in public matters who labor without remuneration for the betterment of civic life. Meeting in this way once a year in different States of the Union, they exchange notes and keep in touch with anything in the way of improvements going on. They help to create an intelligent public opinion concerning municipal problems.

Even if the Armstrong Committee had heard no testimony save that given by Mr. JACOB H. SCHIFF its inquiry would have yielded information proper to serve as the basis of legislation. Mr. SCHIFF'S testimony was in a high degree valuable and of special utility to the Legislature and to the people as well. He was entirely frank as a witness, he attempted no evasions, he was evidently disposed to assist the committee in its search for truth, and he condemned without reserve some of the practices which have brought the management of insurance companies in this city under censure.

We congratulate the Faculty of Columbia University upon the exclusion of Capt. THORPE from the football games until he has made up deficiencies in his studies. We hope that the Captain, who is very popular in the student world, and has the reputation of a bright fellow as well as that of an expert in football, will have no trouble in complying with the requirements of the authorities. Meanwhile it is decidedly a good thing that a university so large and influential as Columbia should indicate in so practical a manner that athletic competitions are second to the getting of a good education. Too many youngsters forget that relation, and too many college authorities, if they do not forget it, ignore it.

Mr. Justice HATCH retired yesterday from the Supreme Court to become a member of a prominent firm of lawyers in this city. For nineteen years he has served as a Judge, part of the time of the Supreme Court of Buffalo, and for nearly ten years of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. No Justice of that court has done more faithful work or made a better record. His learning, wisdom, legal acumen, and clearness in judgment have not been surpassed. His retirement is a loss to the judiciary, and his associates part from him with regret.

Would Suppress Smokers Entirely.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with interest the communicatione about prohibiting emoking on ferryboats.

The emoking nuisance on a ferryboat is not confined to rank cigars or pipes, but entails a thoroughly unsanitary and foul msn'e cabin. The question as originally put was, "Why should not smoking be prohibited so that 100 per cent. of the cabin epace may be available for your ordinary eelf-reepecting men instead of 50 per cent., which is now the limit."

To allow smoking in one cabin is to cater to the leaet essential comfort of the few at the sacrifice of the more eesential comfort, to say nothing of ths health of the many. All kinds and conditione are thrown together in close quartere for a short passage. Why ehould not people be as unobjectionable to each other as possible under these circumstancee, and ie it not the duty of the ferry companies by the prohibition of the smoking nuieance to provide wholesome conditione for their patrons? They enjoy a public franchise and are thereby the public's servante and ehould make rules for the best interests of the public. O. S. S.

If McClellan Should Be Elected Governor.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While it is true that Mayor McClellan has made a good official, the people should not let that view of the Mayoralty question overshadow the decidedly serious aspect of euch a vital matter when they consider that it is the intsntion of Tammany to nominate Mr. McClellan for Governor next year, and, as he would have to resign as Mayor to accept euch nomination, the city would have as its official head a Tammany President of the Board of Aldermen for three ycars, should a Tammany nominee be elected to that high office at the coming election.

If it was an assured fact that Mr. McClellan would servo the people for a straight four years as Mayor, that would be a different thing; but under the circumstances there should be a good man elected Mayor who will retain the office for the full term. The peopls should not enter into the Tammany plan with enthusiasm, but should stop and consider the uncertainty and insecurity which accompany the adoption of euch a plan. TAXPAYER.

Need for Free Discussion of Marriage

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Comstock, as reported in THE TIMES of Thureday, refers for justification of his prosecution of certain books to the common law and decisions under it. But in England and in practically all of our Statee statute after statute has modified and abrogated old common-law doctrines of marriage relations. Most of these statutes have dealt with property—indeed, all of them have had in some way to do with property rights by denying the theory that when a woman married, not only all she owned but her person, and afterward her children, came absolutely under the control of her husband.

It is time that the law, common or uncommon, recognized that as marriage is one of the most important of human relations, no obetacle should be thrown in the way of those who eesk by sober discussion to find the reaeons and ths remedy for married unhappinese and for ths eocial evil.

Why the Increased Cost of Coal?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Continual statements are made in the public press upon the unsettled condition of the coal miner and a possible prolongsd strike of such operatives. Allow me through the medium of THE TIMES to ask the gensral coal-consuming public what is going to be ths ultimate effect on the price of coal, and why are we now paying $6 per ton when a very short time ago ws were only paying $4.50 to $5 per ton?

How is it that when coal was brought to the New York market by canal boats, and the mining of it from small faulty veins, and hoisted out of the mines by hand windlasses and buckets, and mined with inferior explosives and hand methods we could then buy coal for $2.50 and $3 per ton delivered at the back gate of our residence, and also when such canal boats were loaded and unloaded by very slow and primitive methods? As a boy I used to house my father's coal in the shed that did not cost $3 per ton.

Bank Reserves in Times of Stringency

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It strikes me after reading Secretary Shaw'e speech that one way to relieve the temporary money stringency caused by crop-moving requirements, added to the legitimate wants of trade, is to release the 25 per cent. reserve kept by the New York banks. If this reserve cannot be used during temporary stringency part of its usefulnese is gone. It ie certain that the money sent will flow back to the centre whence it came, and that the encroachment on the reserve would be only temporary. If ths President were empowered to suspend the act relative to ths 25 per cent. reserve when called for, I believe the announcement would relieve the tension at once, and in the most extreme cases no more than 10 per cent. of the 25 per cent. reserve would ever be encroached upon, and that only for a short time.

RACING YACHTS SAFE.

Impossible to Founder a Cup Defender, Says a Correspondent.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with some astonishment ur editorial in THE TIMES of yesterday titled "The America's Cup," and as one ving some experience of boats I must phatically disagree with your statement that the contests for this cup have ly developed a monster "that could not ke the sea in a stiff breeze without putng the lives of all on board in jeopardy." While it may be that the particular ats built for the cup defense have, owg to their rig and size and lightness of nstruction, been found of little practical e afterward, it certainly is not true that ey endangered the lives of those aboard. rue, they were sparred and rigged with ll power more generously than the avage yacht, but they nevertheless were ovided with reefing points and tackle d every necessary in the way of reducg sail, and if these were not used then e fault was with the management and t with the boats themselves.

But even at that it is doubtful if the es of those aboard were ever placed in opardy, for with all sail and in a gale is doubtful if one of these boats of the nal type could be capsized or at least undered. Reducing sail under such conions would surely be advisable for the rpose of obtaining better speed, but so r as safety is concerned these boats are the absolutely self-righting class; that to say, they may be thrown on their am, but they will rise again to a surety. am sure that the majority of yachtsmen ill agree that if the boats constructed r these races have been useless for other rposes owing to their great size, the pe evolved is the generally accepted one -day for every quality that goes to ake yachting a comfortable and safe ort.

Yachtsmen are familiar with many naller boats built on the lines of these rge defenders that are numbered among e safest and speediest cruising boats of e day.

It is regrettable, of course, that such rge sums of money should be spent on ats for temporary use, but after all the ilders have been those to whom the oney spent is a bagatelle. It has made e lives of (at least some) boat builders ore worth living, and it certainly has dvanced the art of boat designing to a onderful degree. Who can say, then, at it has been spent in vain?

The Origin of the Earth.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In relation to your special from Portland, re., dated Sept. 22, I wish to remark that as rly as 1866 Max Cohen & Sohn, Bonn, Gerany, published a book entitled "Geecbichte r Erde," (History of the Earth,) written by riedrich Mohr. It was founded on a new thesy according to which Laplace's hypothesis as an erroneous doctrine.

Mohr's book embarrassed the geologists, for ey had stuffed all the libraries and books of struction with the Laplacean hypothesis, and a malicious manner had tried to suppress e new doctrine.

Notwithstanding, a second edition of Friedch Mohr's book was published in 1875, in hich the author resented the unjustified asults.

The late Friedrich Mohr was one of the oet prominent and significant of scientists. ealizing this and the fact that they were o weak to oppose his argumente, his antagnists endeavored to kill his theory by their lence over it.

In the Sunday edition of the New Yorker aats-Zeitung of June 17, 1877, and two succeding editions, the undersigned published a eatiee, "Wie entstand die Erde?" (How Did e Earth Originate?) after which, in the ource of time, followed a number of similar rticles explanatory of modern geology.

Let us hope that Prof. F. R. Moulton will e more successful than his predecessors.

The Use of Yellow Fever Serum.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You say truly that the discovery of a serum hat would confer immunity against or mitiate the severity of an attack of yellow fever ould be a grave misfortune, because it would duce people to neglect sanitation. Still greatwould be the misfortune if, as would probly be the case, the serum did not really proct or mitigate.

But why cannot THE TIMES see that the accination delusion causes people to neglect anitation, and to rely on maintaining health putting into their blood a virus concerning hose nature nothing definite can be ascertined? It is no answer to say that smallpox as decreased since vaccination was introduced. hat decease came through the abandonment inoculation, prohibited by law after thouands of persons had died as a result of the olish notion that every one would of necesty have smallpox some time, and therefore ne ought to get it artificially.

Similar mistaken ideas concerning disease nderlie all of ths serum follies.

Manchester, Too, Needs Shaw.

From The London Chronicle.

There is a commotion in Paris over the story hat a Manchester tribunal had ordered the estruction of 9,000 copies of Balzac's "Contes rolatiques," in a translation. Manchester eems to be under the impression that the work question is pornographic. Paris indignantly enies it. "There is no vice," says our critic; nothing culpable, either in sentiment or suggestion; only the genuine gayety, a little bit ulgar, of the joy of living. And these Manchester people condemn the joy of living and the gayety that is a little bit vulgar! What delicate minds they must have!" Well, perhaps that little bit of vulgarity in French takes rather formidable dimensions in English. Our language is so rude in its equivalents for the esprit Gauloie, which is uncommonly free in Balzac's droll stories. "And some people talk about the superiority of the Anglo-Saxons!" says the indignant Parisian. Not when it comes to translating the "genuine gayety" of a great French writer, who joked with diffionlty.

Where They Feared the Eclipse.

From The London Chronicle.

The effect on uneducated people of the recent eclipse is vividly described in the following letter which a correspondent has just received from a non-commissioned officer of the Royal Engineers stationed at Malta: "Did you see much of the eclipse on the 30th? We had a splendid view of it here. The Maltese nearly went mad with fright, thinking the world was coming to an end. All the people in the village where I am living ran into the church, while some rang the church bells, and some even fired off large squibbs, (something of the fireworks tribe, I mean,) but it was all over in about a quarter of an hour, and then the Maltese left the church and made their way back to their houses, looking very much scared."

RAM CHUNDER'S PRAYER.

Would It Have Been in Arabic and by Formula?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have been much interested in the correspondence of "Scholastic" on Mr. Guiterman's Indian proverb, and in the latter's reply. As one resident for many years in India and thoroughly conversant with several Indian languages, permit me to remark that the matter in controversy appears as a huge joke, because of a few simple facts, easily verified by consulting any authority on the habits and customs of the people of India.

Ram Chunder might be a Hindu converted to Mohammedanism, but if he were, and somebody dropped a noose over his head while he was praying under a tree, in fun or otherwise, it would probably have caused that somebody to lose his life, or at least to receive serious injury.

The Indians take their religion too seriously to permit of joking of this character, and Mohammedans would be especially sensitive about the treatment accorded to a member of their flock engaged in his devotions.

The most incongruous feature of the proverb, however, is that Ram Chunder—be he Hindu or Mohammedan—should pray to God (under the name Allah, or any one of the multitudinous names of the Hindu deities) to "take him."

Indians do not address the Deity in this fashion. The prayers of the Hindus are set according to a certain ritual, and are seldom or never extemporaneous.

The Mohammedan prays by rote after the fashion that he has learned in his mosque, and in Arabic, which neither he would understand nor his hearer up in the tree, so that the very last thing that an Indian of either religion would be likely to pray for would be the desire placed in the mouth of Ram Chunder.

As a matter of fact, many so-called Indian proverbs can easily be traced back to their origin in English literature, and if any one cared to follow the matter closely enough, I have no doubt this one could also, as it is absolutely anti-Oriental in its sense. SACH BAT.

P. S.—I use the word "Indian," and not "Hindu," as the latter is incorrectly applied to the inhabitants of the large Asiatic peninsula. There are over one hundred million people there who are not Hindus by race or religion. "Indian" is a comprehensive term and the correct one.

The Retort Courteous from Brooklyn.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noticed in your issue of yesterday, under the heading, "A Moan from Jersey," a paragraph in which, after paying your respects to that locality, you indulge in a few remarks about Brooklyn also. Similar remarks I have often noticed before, although I have never been able to even guess the reason therefor.

I have been a resident of Brooklyn for forty years and a reader of your esteemed paper for a very large proportion of that time, and as such I wish to protest most decidedly against the tone which you usually adopt when speaking of Brooklyn and Brooklynites. It certainly seems to me to be much beneath the dignity of so able a paper as THE TIMES and not calculated to increase the number of its friends.

Brooklyn may be "slow," as some people think, but when New York wanted a Rapid Transit Commission it took a Brooklynite, Alexander E. Orr, for its Chairman, having also had him for the Presidents of its Chamber of Commerce, two fairly responsible positions.

Brooklyn may not know much, but when New York wanted a President for Columbia University, it took Seth Low, a man born, raised, and largely educated in Brooklyn; and not satisfied with that, it afterward made him Mayor, and some people said he was the best Mayor New York ever had and tried to elect him for a second term.

Who Has the Better Time?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would be of great interest to me to have some views of your readers on this question: Do men or women, on the average, have a better time in this life? By better time I mean an easier time because of the fact that one is a woman or a man.

This I consider a rather deep question, and one that can be argued only in a general way to arrive at a conclusion irrespective of the various classes or stations in life. More fully, I mean on a general average of all womankind as compared to mankind, irrespective of individual taste, ambition, or character, therefore in the most general sense possible.

PROPHECY.

When I'm a multi-billionaire,
As I shall be some day,
I mean to let my victims hear
Some things I have to say.
The hatchet shall be buried then,
And hushed all sounds of strife,
While I instruct my fellow-men
About the Higher Life.

When all the streams are turned, that they
May swell my tide of gold,
I'll give my purest thoughts away—
If they cannot be sold.
I'll gather those who've learned through me
How fleet are riches' wings,
And preach the solemn verity
That there are higher things.

When I have crushed my latest foe—
Or quieted his claims—
I'll tell him everything I know
About the higher aims.
Yea, men shall gain much joy through me,
They surely shall be blessed;
They'll have the joys of poverty
And I shall have the rest.

Thus peacefully I'll spend my days,
Until I reach the end,
In teaching that religion pays
The biggest dividend.
So shall my debt to men be paid
In wisdom rich and rare—
When there is nothing to be made
And I'm a billionaire.

STATEN ISLAND VAMPS GET A FOND GOOD-BYE

6,000 Men in the Volunteer Firemen's Farewell Parade.

FLAGS AND FLOWERS GALORE

The Old Fighters March Six Miles in the Sun, But It Was the Proudest Day They Ever Saw.

The Staten Islanders mustered in strong force yesterday afternoon to cheer the farewell parade of the North Shore Volunteer Fire Department, which had served them faithfully since April 2, 1874. At the stroke of 12 last night the volunteers were disbanded, and at 8 o'clock this morning they will be replaced by seven companies of paid firemen from Manhattan.

The streets of Tompkinsville, Port Richmond, and the villages along the route of the parade, between Arrietta Street, Tompkinsville and Mariners' Harbor, fairly fluttered with flags, and were lined with evergreens and flowers. The majority of factories and business houses closed at noon, so that their employes might see the pageant.

It was scheduled to form in Arrietta Street, Tompkinsville, and leave at 2:30 o'clock. Long before that hour the streets were alive with firemen in various kinds of uniforms. Some wore crimson shirts, which were simply dazzling in the bright sunlight. Others affected blue shirts and white duck trousers, while some of the companies were content with blue suits adorned with bright buttons.

The most gorgeous uniforms were worn by the officers of a New Jersey volunteer corps who came to assist the State Island firemen to disband themselves. They had bright scarlet shirts, white duck trousers, sea boots, and white helmets with field marshal's plumes. The helmets were of the large type, resembling those ordered last year by Emperor William for the German Army. When unfolded each helmet was transformed into a tent big enough to accommodate three men. The officers also carried enormous megaphones and bouquets of roses, and battle axes in their belts.

The North Shore firemen had determined to make their last parade one that should be remembered and told of by their children's children. The archaic engines and trucks were polished until they shone like silver, and the horses, engines, and ladder trucks were all decorated with flowers and flags. There were 6,000 firemen and 23 companies in the procession.

The most important part of the procession was the section comprising the ex-Chiefs, who rode in carriages and were distinguished from the others by their whiskers. They were mostly fat men, and seemed to feel their dignity as they bowed on either side to the groups of pretty girls and swarms of children who had gathered on the balconies of the houses to give the old firemen a parting cheer and make them feel that they had not lived in vain.

A few minutes after 2:30 Chief William Fink gave the signal and started the parade on its march. Chief Croker, with Fire Commissioner Hayes, rode in the first carriage with Borough President Cromwell and Nicholas Muller. Other carriages followed containing Aldermen of the borough and their guests. Then came the fire laddies with their engines and hook and ladder trucks drawn by gaily decorated horses prancing to the music of sixteen brass bands.

Marching along at a steady swing the procession took twenty-five minutes to pass the corner from Brook Street to Jersey Street. The route was about six miles from Tompkinsville to Mariners' Harbor, and when the firemen reached that point they were glad to countermarch and disband. Their day's work was done. Clambakes, mixed ale parties at breweries were hailed with delight by the tired veterans after their dusty march. The members of No. 3 Company, who had hauled their old manual pumping engine all the way at the end of a long rope, had reserved ten street cars to take them to a farewell banquet at Semler's Park, Grant City.

Staten Islanders differed in opinion yesterday as to whether the paid men would be an improvement over the volunteers. Some said that the passing of the faithful volunteers would be regretted in years to come, and spoke in glowing terms of their heroic work at King's plaster works three years ago and the burning of a livery stable at Richmond, when the whole town was threatened. They were satisfied with their firemen, and expressed the opinion that the new men were being sent to Staten Island for political reasons, as the elections were near at hand. It was doubtful if the new comers would do as well for dollars what the old timers did through zeal and love of fighting flames.

The North Shore Volunteer Fire Department numbered more than 6,000 members a year ago, but recently that number has been swelled considerably by new recruits who joined directly the news was published that the volunteers were to be disbanded. The law provides that a veteran fireman shall have preference in the civil service lists, and this fact was what caused the rush of new members. The recruits have been most energetic in learning their duties and attending fires at all hours of the night.

In the last eight years each volunteer fire company has received an allowance of $1,000 to $1,200 a year for keeping up the station and machines. The men received no pay, but had to pay a fine of 50 cents for being absent from a fire when called upon for duty.

Staten Island had the largest Volunteer Fire Department in the world. One company—No. 4 of New Brighton—had 990 men on its roster yesterday.

Battalion Chief Guerin has been appointed to the command of the new Staten Island Fire Department. Two new engines have arrived, and the best of the volunteer engines have been retained as spare apparatus. Three more new engines are expected in a few days.

The old firemen have no ill-feeling against the newcomers and resent the report that they were going to attack the paid men and give them a good licking for taking away their only amusement. They laid aside their helmets, axes, trumpets, and their old machines, and are content to rest upon the laurels of many a battle with the flames.

TO WORSHIP BY TELEPHONE.

Brooklyn Woman, an Invalid, to Hear Sermons by Wire.

Although an invalid and unable to leave her home at 91 Pulaski Street, Brooklyn, Mrs. James Van Dyk, by means of telephone wires put up especially for the purpose, is to hear the singing of the choir and the sermons of her pastor, the Rev. Dr. L. L. Taylor, at the services in the Puritan Congregational Church, Lafayette and Marcy Avenues, to-day. Propped up in her bed, Mrs. Van Dyk will be able to follow the services as closely as if seated with the other members of the congregation in the church.

Mrs. Van Dyk has been ill for about three years. Before she became an invalid she was one of the foremost of the members of the Puritan Church, and since then she has attended no service. Moved by her frequently expressed wish that she might hear the sermon as of old, her husband made arrangements for her to hear the services by telephone. Yesterday a private wire was put up and a receiver installed at her bedside.

This afternoon Mrs. Van Dyk will hear the services in the Sunday school room, and this morning and evening the sermons and singing in the church proper. Dr. Taylor has installed in the church a number of telephones connecting the pulpit with the pews of those of his congregation who do not hear well.

A YONKERS MYSTERY SETTLED

Mulberry Street Calms the Coroner Who Scented Murder in a Trunk.

Sergt. Henry, in charge of the telegraph bureau at Police Headquarters, helped to solve a deep mystery twenty miles away, in Yonkers, yesterday. Early in the morning an excited man said over the telephone:

"This is Coroner Wiesendanger of Yonkers. We have a mystery up here. There is a trunk in the railroad station, and we think there is a body in it. It is addressed to Joe Mench, 169th Street and Park Avenue, the Bronx. Will you find out if Mench lives there?"

Sergt. Henry got the Morrisania Station, and a policeman was hustled out to find Joe Mench. Ten minutes later came another ring at the telephone.

"Have you found Joe Mench yet?" asked the Yonkers Coroner.

"Say," returned the Sergeant, "how far do you think it is from the nearest station to that address? It's a mile, if it's a toot, and the cops down here don't fly. What's the great hurry, anyway?"

"Well," said the Yonkers man, "we think there is a terrible mystery in this trunk. We've scented a murder like that one in Boston."

"Say, what's the matter with opening that trunk? It may be limburger," replied Henry.

"Well, if you think it's right, we'll open it," was the answer.

No Joe Mench was found. Only a few minutes passed before Coroner Wiesendanger was on the 'phone again.

"Sorry to have bothered you," he began. "There's nothing in that trunk but half a dozen very dead chickens."

DIARY CURE FOR BAD BOYS.

Brooklyn Magistrate Is Trying a New Experiment in Reform.

Magistrate Higginbotham has a new method to guide incorrigible boys into the straight and narrow path. The success of his experiment will be demonstrated two weeks hence when Eugene Coffey, 16 years old, of 142 Patchen Avenue, Brooklyn, reports in the Gates Avenue Court and gives an account of his daily life during that time.

The boy was brought to court yesterday by his parents, who said that he kept bad company and used profane language. When the Magistrate spoke of sending him away for the next five years, Eugene began to cry.

"Please give me another chance. I'll be good," he said.

"On this condition only," replied the court. "You report to me two weeks from now. I want you to keep a diary and make note of everything you do. If the diary doesn't come up to my expectations, you'll go away for five years."

Eugene vowed that he would do as the court directed.

RED FLAG HAULED DOWN.

Janitor Routs an Auctioneer Who Was Backed by a Court Order.

David L. Hardenbrook, appointed by the Supreme Court to sell nine plots of valuable land adjoining Calvary Cemetery in the settlement of the estate of the late Honora O'Brien, planted his auctioneer's flag upon the front of the Court House in Jamaica, L. I., yesterday, on the steps of which the sale was directed to be made. Janitor Henry Guptill promptly hauled the flag down. Hardenbrook replaced it, and there ensued a wordy war in consequence.

"Hitch your auctioneer's flag to a tree or a lamppost if you like," said the janitor. "This is no place for it."

"The Supreme Court's order—" began Hardenbrook.

"I don't care about the Supreme Court's order," said the other. "I have my orders. Down comes that flag."

"Oh, all right," said the auctioneer. "But just remember this: If the sidewalks in front of this building are allowed to remain covered with snow next Winter, there will be something doing."

EAST SIDE SHAKESPEARE.

Ben Greet to Give Performances at the Educational Alliance.

Arrangements have been made for the first appearance on the east side of Ben Greet and his English players in a series of Shakespearean performances. The University Settlement, the West Side Neighborhood House, the Warren Goddard House, the Chrystie Street House, the Recreation Rooms, the Alfred Corning Clark House, the Hartley House, the Nurses' Settlement, the College Settlement, the Jacob A. Riis Settlement, the East Side House Settlement, and Branch B of the Educational Alliance have combined their efforts to persuade Mr. Greet to give the east side a trial.

Beginning with "Henry V." on Nov. 4, a series of Shakespearean performances will be inaugurated at the Educational Alliance. On Nov. 11 "Twelfth Night" will be played; on Nov. 18 "The Merchant of Venice," and on Nov. 25 "Julius Caesar." The productions will be given exactly as they would be on a Broadway stage. The various settlements will each endeavor to dispose of tickets to the members of their clubs and classes.

It is hoped that before the performances systematic study of the plays will be attempted at each of these social centres, and that the actual performances will come as the vivid presentation of the object of the study.

The neighborhood schools will undoubtedly be interested, but it is hoped that people from all over the city will journey to the Alliance on the nights of the performances.

Most of the seats will be sold at 50 cents, many at 25 cents, and a few at $1. The sale of tickets has already been opened at the various settlements concerned, and it is hoped that the support and encouragement of the public at large will not be lacking.

THE GERMAN ACTORS.

Irving Place Theatre Opens with Bavarian Peasant Comedy.

As a preliminary to the season of operetta which is to begin at the Irving Place Theatre on Thursday next, the house was opened last night by Mr. Conried's stock dramatic company in Ganhofer and Neuert's five-act play, "The Crucifix Carver of Ammergau," a sort of chromo-lithographic study of Bavarian peasant life which has long enjoyed prosperity in the German theatre.

It has had frequent revials, and there was plenty of evidence last night that it still has the power to please.

Especial interest attached to the occasion in the appearance of Franz Herterich, the new juvenile man of the company. In the present cast he has the rôle of Pauli, the young wood carver, whose love for Loni, foster daughter of Anton Hoeflmaier, the inn keeper, provides the sentimental theme of the play. Mr. Herterich has an agreeable presence. He played in a nautral and unaffected vein that harmonized admirably with the general method of the company. In Miss Von Osterman, who appeared as Loni, he had last night a sympathetic associate.

A conspicuous success was achieved by Gustav von Seyfferitz. Gerogine Neuendorff and Marie Von Wegern also contributed excellent bits of character.

The theatre has been redecorated and the interior is bright and attractive, the general color scheme being of cream and gold.

New York Theatre Concert To-night.

The first Sunday night concert of the season is to be given at the New York Theatre to-night. The programme includes the Great Lafayette, Truly Shattuck, the Girl from the Clouds, Fifteen Polly Girls, May Boley, Rooney Sistere, and the Grand Opera Trio.

AND NOT A CROSS WORD

Bidders All on Friendly Terms and a Model Auctioneer—Some of the Prizes.

No gavel was employed to accentuate the decision.

"Oh, wait a little," spoke up one of the dozen persons seated in the main room of the Collectors' Club, in West Twenty-seventh Street. "I may bid a little more on that coin."

"All right," answered the auctioneer, who was seated on top of a table at one end of the rectangular room, with a smiling woman stenographer flanking him on either side. After a brief pause he resumed unmoved:

"Are you ready?"

"In a moment," rejoined the bidder, continuing to search through his notes without the least attempt at haste. Finally he found what he looked for and spoke up:

"I bid eight."

And this was spirited bidding. For the Collectors' Club, where the public auctions of rare coins, unmatchable bills, and stamps out of date are held, is the one spot where competition, though of the keenest, has been deprived of its sting and bitterness. It is a sort of arena for numismatists, philatelists, archaeologists, and other possessors of costly and full-blooded hobbyhorses.

The great men—the men who can afford to pay for abstract values—rarely appear in person. They all have their representatives employed for this particular service, and these representatives are on familiar terms with each other, meeting week after week, now on this and now again on the other side of the ocean—wherever the coveted rarities are put under the hammer or offered for sale privately. They are eager on behalf of their patrons, but, not being hobbyhorse riders themselves, they practice their rivalry without ever growing hostile over victories or defeats.

Yesterday afternoon they were gathered where Thomas L. Elder was putting up several collections of coins, medals, and paper money at auction. There were 852 lots in all and they went at prices ranging from 12 cents up to $60. Sometimes the bids advanced a cent at a time, and then again somebody would coolly say:

"Fifteen dollars isn't too much for that."

"Then good bye," some other bidder would say with a laugh, and from the jovial auctioneer's lips dropped the perennial:

"Fifteen, fifteen—sold at fifteen."

One man represented more than a score of customers, some of whom wanted some one coin while others were anxious to get anything rare, whether coin or stamp or bill. All were designated by pseudonyms invented to mask their identity, lest rival agents discover them and supplant the services of the acting representative. There was "Texas," who gobbled up anything and everything, paying fancy prices without a protest.

"Sold at three," the auctioneer would announce.

"Put it at four-fifty on Texas," the agent would request. "I save him 50 cents at that."

Half a dozen times the bidders and the auctioneer fell to joking until they lost track of where they were. Then it might happen that they would go back a few numbers and sell them over again to make sure that no one was forgotten.

They had got to the section headed "Hard times tokens," &c., and an agent generally referred to as "New York" had secured at a fabulously cheap price—$1.70 or something like that—a token catalogue as "Low 163, Howell Works Garden, a rose. Rev. Token. Very rare. Good." He was so eager and elated that he insisted on having the piece delivered at once. Just as he got it another agent, "New Jersey," broke in:

"Why, I made a mistake. I would have bid more for that coin. It was just an oversight on my part. It's worth $5."

"Oh, say, give him a chance," pleaded the auctioneer with "New York." "Put it up again—be a sport."

"It's all right as far as I'm concerned," replied "New York," scratching his head. "But how about the other man—the man I bought it for? I guess I'll have to stick to it."

"And to think that it was just an oversight," grumbled "New Jersey" regretfully.

Among the rare pieces that caused the bids to leap upward dollars at a time was a New Hampshire cent of 1776—a tiny bit of old copper honored in the catalogue with the epithets "priceless" and "unique." It was knocked down at $60.50, and the buyer of it looked as if he had won a free pass to Paradise.

A United States silver dollar minted in 1794 brought $62.50, although defective, and the catalogue said that but for its defect it would have been cheap at $175.

In comparison it seemed to the outsider that a good thing was almost given away when an Egyptian "octodrachm," from 260 B. C. went at $58.50. Thirteen dollars and fifty cents was all that anybody cared to pay for a Roman gold coin that was seventeen cycles old and was adorned with a "splendid bust" of Antonius. One of Uncle Sam's one-dollar pieces of gold but forty years old brought $21, and $25 was paid for a half-cent piece of 1841 that was dented on the edge, which the catalogue said was "extra rare."

All, in all, the sale realized about $2,500.

EARLY CALL ON THE MONKEYS

A Hippodrome Story Involving a Ballet That Is to be.

Twenty sad-eyed young women stalked into the Central Park monkey house yesterday morning, followed by a tall and a short man. Few visitors go there on week day mornings, so the little Brazilian marmoset, who has to occupy the look-out cage all to himself, screamed the secret signal:

"Strangers in sight! Get busy!"

The forty monkeys all came out of their drowse. King Stefano, the big yellow baboon from Nubia, acknowledged ruler of the monkey house, whose stage name is Cyanocephalus Anubia, surveyed the visitors with a cool and calculating eye. There wasn't a sound from either side, except that the tall man kept whispering:

The ring-tail miko resented the stare. He leaped screaming from the front bars to a swing, and back again, dancing up and down in a pure passion of peevishness. The moment he had moved the twenty young women simultaneously tried to execute his movements, while the tall man yelled alternately:

"Rotten!" "Fair!" Fine!" "Bully!"

After that the monkeys did things just to see the young women try to copy their movements, and the monkeys laughed over the imitations till they screeched again. The short man was Marcelline, the clown from the Hippodrome. The tall man was Vincenzo Romeo, and the twenty young women were members of the "monkey ballet" to be put on at the Hippodrome.

"Those beautiful young women will be dressed just like the simian denizens of the forest," said the press agent last night. "The music will be appropriate, and we are trying to train the members of the ballet to copy exactly the movements of their prototypes. This morning's visit to the monkey house will be followed by others. The girls are so enthusiastic over the monkey ballet work that many of them are going to purchase monkeys of their own, so that they can study the movements at first hand and constantly."

Marcelline was taken up to act as a sort of go-between.

IN WINTER TOGS TOO SOON.

The Siberian Tiger in Central Park Upset by the Heat.

For those who jump into furs and flannels at the first touch of frost such days as yesterday are trying. Dick, the big Siberian tiger at the Central Park Zoo, found it so. He had celebrated the recent cool days by getting out his Winter linings and fitting up in anticipation of an early Fall. Yesterday's heat hit him hard.

All the morning he tried lying on his back with paws in the air to keep cool. At 2 o'clock he rose and lunched languidly on some seventeen rare ribs of beef. Then he went back to his lounging position.

At 3 o'clock the thermometer in the lion house registered 84½ degrees, which is warm for those apartments even in midsummer. All the lions were lolling around with half-shut eyes and dripping tongues. The big Saturday crowds of sightseers found the menagerie rather tame.

Suddenly the big tiger sprang up with blazing eyes and hurled himself against the front bars of his cage, to the consternation of two women and a nervous young man with spectacles, who beat a retreat toward the hyena cages.

With growls and snarls Dick threw himself about his cage, while persons behind tried to get nearer, and those in front preferred to hang back. Children in arms screamed and older children showed sudden interest in the pelicans outside.

Keeper Hoey hurried to the cage, gave one look at the beast, and ran for the hose. Directly he saw what the keeper was at the big tiger bounded through the low door into the outer cage and stood waiting with lifted head just in range of the opening. As the heavy stream of water struck him he purred with relief, turning slowly from side to side, and stretching his shaggy neck to catch the full force of the water.

After five minutes of cold bath he seemed much soothed. All later visitors saw was a bunch of damp tigerskin in a dark corner of the cage.

"He'll be all right by to-night," said Keeper Hoey. "He finds the heat a little unseasonable. They're not much on Indian Summers in Siberia."

"OLD IRONSIDES" TO STAY.

Famous Vessel Could Not Stand a Voyage to Brooklyn.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—The historic frigate Constitution, "Old Ironsides," which Brooklyn is seeking to have removed from Boston and used as a memorial, will not leave Charlestown Navy Yard for the present, at least, according to advices received from Washington to-day.

Congressman John F. Fitzgerald, who obtained in 1897 an appropriation of $10,000 to repair the Constitution in order to make it possible to remove the old vessel from Portsmouth to Boston, wrote to the Navy Department at Washington a few days ago protesting against the Brooklyn plan. He received a communication to-day stating that the unseaworthy condition of the vessel would not permit its removal.

MYSTERY OF HOTEL SOON CLEARED UP

Alarm Sent Out by Police for Mrs. Farnsworth.

HER HUSBAND WAS EXCITED

But When Sleuths Were all Looking for the Woman the Couple Came Back All Smiles.

The management of the Manhattan Hotel and the police of the East Fifty-first Street Station nursed a mystery all yesterday, only to have it slip out of their hands last evening. But it went away as a mystery. There has been no explanation yet.

It was not recognized as a mystery when it started with the appearance at the Manhattan Hotel last Friday morning of a middle-aged couple who announced their desire to get a room. The man seemed to be in the forties. She must have been his junior by ten years. He registered, writing in the big book only, "Mrs. George Farnsworth, N. Y." Then both went to the room assigned to them. A few minutes later the man walked out of the hotel, having told the clerk that he would be back that night.

About 6 o'clock Friday evening he reappeared and went up stairs at once. Shortly afterward he came down and began to make excited inquiries at the desk for "Mrs. Farnsworth."

"She is in her room," replied the clerk calmly. "She has not left the key here."

A squad of bellboys was sent to search. Chambermaids were cross-examined. When all had been done that could be done, "Mrs. Farnsworth" was still not to be found. Then the hotel management sent an alarm to the police.

Nobody would have known anything about it had not a man who said he was H. H. Bowen and that he represented the Bowen-Post Detective Agency visited the East Fifty-first Street Station yesterday morning. There he left the following description, asking that a general alarm for the person described be sent out by the police:

"Mrs. George Farnsworth; 34 years old; height, 5 feet 8 inches; weight, 160 pounds; brown hair; slight cast in one eye; wears three-cornered, dark straw hat, light gray skirt, white waist, dark Oxford shoes. On her left hand she wears one ring with two small diamonds, one ring with a single small diamond, and a gold seal ring."

Capt. Lantry communicated with Police Headquarters, and the description was posted on the bulletin board. Then the description was telephoned to eighty-four precincts in the five boroughs.

A score of reporters, all trained in hunting down missing persons, started yesterday afternoon to track this one. They had barely worked themselves into the proper mood for the work when word came of the sudden and complete collapse of the mystery. Inquiries at the Manhattan Hotel brought out this information:

Just after 8 o'clock last night the couple that had called themselves Mr. and Mrs. George Farnsworth walked into the hotel, cool and unconcerned. They went up to the desk, asked for their bill, paid it, and walked out.

GIRLS WARNED NOT TO SPIT.

Somebody Blundered and Sent a Circular to the Wrong School.

Some 1,500 pupils of the Girls' High School, in Brooklyn, each received on Friday a nicely printed Board of Health circular pointing out that the habit of spitting on the floor is both unhealthy and unclean, and should be stopped at once. Each girl was urged to paste the circular in the back of one of her school books and to show it to her parents. The girls were not pleased.

"So far as I know, none of us chews tobacco," said one sarcastic young woman.

Dr. Felton is President of the Girls' High School. He was in no way responsible for the mistake which sent the circulars to the girls.

ATTACKS A YALE CUSTOM.

College Paper Says Shore Dinners Are a Menace to Students.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 30.—Under the caption, "A Dangerous Custom," the Yale News says editorially to-day concerning the annual shore dinner:

"There is a custom existing in Yale which seems to be dangerous in its tendency and totally at variance with all established tenets of undergraduate life. For some time it has been allowed to exist in hope that it would die a natural death, but each year the shore dinner seems to come with great regularity.

"College sentiment is now rigidly opposed to these dinners for several reasons. Freshmen will not refuse invitations because they are fearful of offending the Sophomores who invite them, and because in many cases they are totally ignorant of the character of the dinners.

"Disorderly dinners of this kind give freshmen an absolutely erroneous opinion of what is expected of an undergraduate. It seems to show that the road to success in Yale is through fast living; that men are prominent in their classes according to their sporting proclivities. These ideas seem to be too absurd to upper classmen to be even contradicted, but freshmen who are new to all college scenes might be given a wrong impression that might last them through several years of their college course."

The News begs all connected with dinners, to accept a timely warning and do their utmost to put a stop to this menace to college life.

TEN BRONX FLATS LOOTED BY A THIEF

Thousands of Dollars Worth of Plunder Taken.

WORKS BOTH DAY AND NIGHT

Wedding Anniversary Gifts Taken from Mrs. Donath—Jewelry and Silverware Missing.

Ten apartments in the flathouses at 684 East One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street and 763 Elton Avenue, the Bronx, have been robbed by a burglar—supposedly by the same man—in the last few weeks, and he has got away with several thousand dollars' worth of plunder. Strange to say, the thief hasn't been seen once, although he has worked at all hours of the day and night. The police haven't the slightest trace of him, and not one cent's worth of the booty have they recovered.

Yesterday Mrs. W. H. Donath of 684 East 157th Street reported to the police of the Morrisania Station that her apartments had been entered and several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and silverware, wedding anniversary gifts from friends and relatives, had been stolen.

Mr. and Mrs. Donath had planned to celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage yesterday. The wife went out to do some shopping in preparation for the affair, and when she returned she found that the door leading to her apartments had been "jimmied" and the presents were missing. When she reported the robbery to the police of the Morrisania Station they informed her that detectives were already doing their utmost to apprehend the burglar.

Joseph Jacobs, who lives on the third floor, one flight below the Donaths, had also been robbed. His front door had been "jimmied," too, a few days ago and silverware and jewelry stolen.

Around the corner, at 763 Elton Avenue, seven families are mourning the loss of jewelry and silverware. Here is a list of victims, with their losses:

Jessie McNulty—$16 in cash and jewelry.

Mrs. M. E. Bock—$15 in cash, silverware, and jewelry.

W. H. Gale—Silverware and jewelry.

Joseph Schwartz—Jewelry and trinkets.

Mrs. Alfred Millard—Jewelry and silverware.

The detectives of the Bronx and those detailed at the Morrisania Station are completely baffled. Pawnshops throughout the city have been visited by them and descriptions of the plunder sent broadcast, but nothing has been recovered.

The robberies have been so systematic that the police are inclined to believe that the thief first became an occupant of the house in which he operated, and then learned the lay of the land and kept a strict vigil on the movements of the tenants, thereby learning when they were in and out. All of the persons who have been robbed declare that their apartments were entered while they were out. Some of the people say that they were absent from their rooms but a short time, and upon returning found that the thief had "jimmied" the door and escaped with his plunder.

HIS BURGLAR DAY.

Bolotin's Flat Robbed—He Catches a Man Near His Office Safe.

M. Bolotin, a jewelry manufacturer, reported yesterday to the police that his flat at 63 East 118th Street had been entered by burglars who took $100 worth of silverware and that about the same time a man had tampered with the safe in his office, 41 Maiden Lane.

Mr. Bolotin caused the arrest of William Reardon, who was arraigned yesterday in the Tombs Court and held in $500 bail. The jeweler says that at noon Thursday while he was alone and busy at his work bench, he heard the clicking of the knob of his safe in the outer office. He says he rushed out and found a man in front of the safe.

"I am a polisher looking for work," the visitor said, and he was invited to go outside the inclosure, after which he was arrested by Detective Nugent.

No arrest was made for the robbery of Mr. Bolotin's flat.

WHEELED BOOTY PAST POLICE.

Negro Thieves Showed Little Fear of Capt. Dooley's Men.

Some time during Wednesday night burglars entered Daniel S. Dreyer's harness store at 149-153 West Twenty-ninth Street by way of the skylight on the roof, hoisted $300 worth of harness up to the roof and dropped the loot down to the blind alley that opens into West Thirtieth Street, in front of the Tenderloin Station. They loaded their booty on a wheelbarrow and carted it past the station windows to 214 West Twenty-eighth Street, where it was found yesterday by Detectives Hawkins and Finn in the home of Frank Holmes, a negro. Holmes was arrested, as were two other negroes, Thomas Harvey and Victor Herbert.

Harvey was arraigned yesterday afternoon in the Jefferson Market Court on the double charge of burglary and forgery. Holmes was arraigned on a charge of receiving stolen goods. Both were held for examination. Herbert was sent to the House of Detention as a witness.

The forgery charge against Harvey gave the clue which led the detectives to the homes of Holmes.

While in the store on the night of the burglary, Harvey secured a canceled check and a blank check on the New York County National Bank. He forged Mr. Dreyer's signature on the blank, after he had filled it out for $200.50, as he thought. Then he presented it at the bank, where the teller discovered that the body of the check called for $250, while the figures only called for $200.50. This led to a refusal to cash the check as well as inquiries that helped Mr. Dreyer guess who was responsible for the burglary.

JUMPED FROM THIRD STORY.

Aged Sisters, Fire Driven, Take a Long Chance.

Two aged women were slightly injured by jumping from a third-story window at a fire which occurred yesterday afternoon in the brick tenement at 230 Bond Street, Brooklyn. The blaze started in a vacant store on the ground floor of the building.

Katharine Hart, 71 years old, and her sister, Cecelia, 69 years old, found their escape by way of the stairway cut off and retreated to a rear window. Hearing their cries for help, some of the neighbors and two policemen ran into the yard. They found a big straw mattress, and, holding it as a cushion, bade the two women to drop into it. Both women obeyed and landed on the mattress, rolling off to the ground. Katharine received a severe scalp wound, while Cecelia was badly bruised on the left shoulder. They were attended by an ambulance surgeon from the Long Island College Hospital.

Ex-Police Capt. Bedell Dead.

Word was received at Brooklyn Police Headquarters last night of the death at Alexandria Bay, N. Y., of ex-Police Capt. Charles H. Bedell of Brooklyn. Capt. Bedell died of pneumonia. Mrs. Bedell has also been ill, and her condition is said to be low. Capt. Bedell was a native of Long Island. He had been a member of the police force in Brooklyn for more than twenty-five years when he retired about a year ago.

NEW TO BROOKLYN POLICE.

A Raid Reveals Some Sort of a Game They Never Heard of.

The Brooklyn police have stumbled across some sort of confidence game that they are quite unable to fathom. The new game was unearthed yesterday afternoon, and close investigation shows that it is of a genus yet unrevealed. The discovery followed a much-tipped poolroom raid that was made in Room 9 of the house at 200 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn.

Tips came to Police Captain Shaw of the Adams Street Station, Inspector Wiegand, and Capt. Harkins, the head of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau, and simultaneously all three men had raiders on the spot. The police broke in and found thirteen men therein. They arrested James Powers as the manager.

Upon investigating the premises the police found two telephones, one genuine and the other a fraud. The false telephone had no wire connection. On a table in the middle of the room was also a fraud telegraph instrument which had wires running to the floor, but no further. Near the table was a suit case containing three tin boxes full of sheets of paper about the size of currency notes, with an ink representation upon one side bearing a faint resemblance to that on a genuine bill. The outfit puzzled the police. Every authority in Brooklyn on confidence games was consulted regarding the probable nature of the game. No one could fathom it.

The room is on the same floor with the Kings County Republican headquarters. A few weeks ago the Brooklyn police raided a poolroom located in the Thomas Jefferson Building, where the Democratic headquarters are situated.

THREATENED TO SHOOT A GIRL

William Murch, an ironworker, 21 years old, of 507 West Forty-seventh Street, was arrested last night after threatening to shoot Annie Worth, a nineteen-year-old girl, at her home, at 2,153 Second Avenue.

The couple have known each other since childhood, but latterly the girl had refused Murch's attentions. She is employed in a ribbon factory. Murch had threatened that if she did not marry him he would shoot her and himself.

A day or two ago Murch's sister called upon Miss Worth and informed her that her brother was acting queerly and had bought a revolver. Murch made an engagement to call upon Miss Worth last evening. When he reached her home Detectives Ross and Schmitt of the East 104th Street Station were there, hidden behind the portieres.

"Well, I have come for your final answer," Murch said.

Miss Worth started to walk away. Murch sprang from his chair and began fumbling at his hip pocket. The detectives grabbed him before he got the revolver out of his pocket.

RUNAWAY TEAM DROWNS.

Horses Dash Along a Crowded Pier and Plunge Into the River.

Two horses hitched to a truck owned by Hardman, Peck & Co., Nineteenth Street and Fifth Avenue, ran away about 8 o'clock last evening from Fifty-first Street and Eleventh Avenue. They made straight for the recreation pier, at the foot of Fiftieth Street, on which about 500 children were playing.

The horses burst through the crowd without hurting any one and ran for the water. When they reached the edge of the pier the truck's king bolt broke, the horses went overboard, and were drowned. The wagon remained on the edge of the pier.

OLD FURNITURE MAN DEAD.

By Accident, the Police Say, but Arrest Two Friends.

Patrick Crogan, the old second-hand furniture dealer, who was found unconscious in the cellar of his home, 99 Hamilton Avenue, Brooklyn, on Friday afternoon, died in the Long Island College Hospital last night. The police are satisfied that his injuries were accidental. Capt. Formosa, however, arrested yesterday Joseph Orsig and Patrick Sullivan, two friends of the old man. Both declared that they had no idea how the old man came by his injuries.

DOVER A BIG NAVAL BASE.

To be Fully Equipped in Two Years—Bases to be Abandoned.

LONDON, Sunday, Oct. 1.—The Observer, following up its article of last Sunday on Great Britain's naval plans, says the scheme is to establish bases at Gibraltar, Dover, and Singapore, replacing Wei-hai-Wei, Trinkomali, (in Ceylon,) Halifax, and Esquimault.

The paper adds that Dover two years hence will be fully equipped as a first-class base and fortress.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Almond Meal Properly Dutiable at 50 Per Cent.—Other Decisions.

In a decision written by C. P. McClelland, the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled a claim filed by George Lueders & Co. of New York, it being held that almond meal is properly dutiable at the rate of 50 per cent. ad valorem and not at lower rates claimed by the firm.

The board, in an opinion by General Appraiser McClelland, sustained a claim by the Northern Maine Seaport Railroad Company. It appears that the company imported timber invoiced as round unmanufactured spruce upon which the Collector of Customs at Belfast, Me., levied duty at the rate of 1 cent per cubic foot. The merchandise was claimed to be free of duty under the provision in the Dingley tariff for round unmanufactured timber not specially provided for. The timber was said to be imported for use in building wharves for the railroad at Stockton Springs, Me. The Collector is directed to make a reliquidation in accordance with the finding of the board.

Other importers' claims sustained were filed by B. Illfelder & Co., P. R. Dreyer & Co., Emil M. Guaidi, Salvador Messina, and James McCutcheon & Co., New York; C. C. Hilderly, Tampa, Fla.; Danker & Marston and B. Illfelder & Co., Boston; A. Lynn e Hijos de Perez Moris, San Juan, P. R.; Moses Noris, Baltimore; Harry Hawley, Galveston, Texas; E. Illfelder & Co., Newport News, Va.

The board overruled claims made by Pitt & Scott, P. H. Petry & Co., American Express Company, Einstein, Wolff & Co., G. W. Sheldon & Co., L. Erstein & Brother, Van Blankensteyn & Hennings, Passavant & Co., Trefousse, Coguenheim & Co., Worthington, Smith & Co., A. & H. Veith, New York.

Claims partially sustained were filed by George Lueders & Co. and L. Erstein & Brother, New York, and the Asiatic Export and Import Company, Port Townsend, Wash.

One Hundred Trapped in a Poolroom.

Inspector Walsh, Capt. Cruise of the East 104th Street Station, and a squad of policemen caught about 100 habitués of a poolroom in a trap yesterday afternoon at 207 East 103th Street. The poolroom was over a cigar store. The police paseed through the store, broke in a door leading to a hallway from the rear, and arrested twelve men. They held Henry Jacobs of 15 East Tenth Street, and Fred McManus of 302 East 108th Street. The paraphernalia found in the place was confiscated

PARTY LINES DISAPPEAR IN JERSEY CAMPAIGN

Long Branch Reform and Anti-Corporation Issue to the Front.

PUBLIC OWNERSHIP IN FAVOR

Trend of Opinion Bothers Leaders—Francis Asked to Withdraw—Fagan's Re-election Expected.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Sept. 30.—The effort of patrons of the clubhouses at Long Branch to get control of the Monmouth County Sheriff's office, as a means of protecting their mid-summer revelries from the interference of the County Courts, is sharing public interest with the anti-corporation and anti-boss upheavals that are making the campaigns in other counties the most remarkable in the recent history of New Jersey. The gaming places at Long Branch are a large source of profit to the sea-side section, and an idea is prevalent in some political circles that the voters may be disposed to deal tolerantly with them.

Presuming upon the forbearance of public sentiment, the managers of the clubhouses threw open their doors two or three Summers ago. Supreme Court Justice Fort went after them and directed the first subsequent Grand Jury to indict the managers. He made his home for the Summer at the shore and harassed the clubs with raids under authority of his bench warrants. Several indictments were found, and many well-known men were punished in the courts at Freehold. The Grand Juries that helped Justice Fort in this affair were selected by the Democratic Sheriff, Bogardus, and most of the raids were planned and executed by Charles E. Close, his Chief Deputy.

The Sheriff more recently had made numerous raids at Long Branch over the head of Mayor C. Asa Francis, a former State Senator. Last Tuesday the Republican County Convention nominated Francis for Sheriff. The cry went up at once that the gambling element had participated in his selection in the hope that his Grand Juries would be lenient. The Democrats at their convention last Thursday made opposition to reopening the resorts the only plank in their platform, and emphasized the declaration by naming Under Sheriff Close, the leader in the raids, as their candidate against Francis.

The Republican leaders of the State, aroused by the situation, have advised Francis to withdraw, it is said. They say that their hands are full with the troubles in Hudson and Essex Counties.

Francis so far has said not a word in defense of himself. Close, however, in a letter of acceptance issued yesterday, pledged himself "to draw Grand Juries which will indict, and petit jurors who, with proper evidence, will convict gamblers and all other criminal classes. With this pledge made over my own signature," he declares, "there can be no doubt as to the character of my administration of the Sheriff's office, if elected; and I earnestly appeal to the law-loving people of Monmouth County, without regard to past party ties, to give me their votes and active support."

All the prearranged slates have been smashed by the State-wide popularity of the stand Colby and Fagan have taken against domination by the corporations. The growth of popular feeling on the question of railroad aggression is finding expression in demands for legislation that will make the management of public utilities a municipal function. The Essex Democrats, having concluded to put up a candidate against Colby, in face of the advice of the shrewdest of their leaders, named Julian A. Gregory on a public ownership platform. And a gathering of representative Germans from all parts of the State at Hoboken, a day or two ago, declared adherence to that policy. Meanwhile every Republican convention in the State has indorsed Colby in self-defense, and the Democrats ratify his platform of principles, but say he does not go far enough to suit them. The agitation has spread to the most remote rural districts.

Meanwhile the managers of the successful campaigns in Hudson and Essex are daily making the situation more acute for their defeated rivals. Colby has refused to accept Major Lentz as his campaign manager, and has even demanded that the Major retire from the canvass. The Major insists upon his prerogative as Chairman of the County Committee, and there may be two County Campaign Committees as a result.

The sentiment for Mayor Fagan in Jersey City is so irresistible that party lines have disappeared. Even the Democratic organ of the county admits that he will be re-elected and says that he ought to be. This in spite of the fact that within a week he and Col. Dickinson, the Republican machine manager, have openly declared war upon each other. Two campaign funds have been started—one for the aid of the Colonel's Shrievalty candidate, the other a popular fund to aid the Mayor's anti-corporation battle.

GIANTS AID INJURED BOY.

New York Ball Players Convert 'Bus Into an Ambulance.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The New York Giants, returning from the ball game after defeating the Cardinals twice yesterday afternoon, converted their 'bus into an ambulance to take an injured boy to the City Dispensary.

While driving downtown on Chestnut Street they saw Benjamin Morell knocked down by a bicycle. Mathewson sprang out and ran to the lad's assistance. The pitcher picked him up and carried him to the 'bus, and, aided by Mertes, held him during the run to the dispensary.

AUTO SMASHED; MEN SAFE.

G. H. Malcolm and Friend Jump in Time to Escape Train.

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 30.—A ten horse power touring car belonging to George H. Malcolm of Summit was wrecked by an Erie train at the Schuyler Avenue crossing in Kearny early to-day. Parts of the car were found in a shallow lake some distance away.

Malcolm and a friend, who were in the car, jumped in time to escape injury and hurried away. They had been seen riding about the town in the car last night. A policeman came across the wrecked car some time later and reported it.

Among the hotels not heretofore mentioned that will remain open throughout the Winter are the Jackson, the Belmont, the St. Claire, the Abbey, and the Avoca.

Earl Mar Hall, at Oriental Avenue and the beach, has been purchased by Mrs. L. J. Brown. The hotel will be kept open throughout the Winter.

Proprietor W. F. Shaw will close the Iroquois on Oct. 1 until early in January. Meantime he will make extensive improvements and siterations to the hotel.

The Seaside House has been selected as headquarters for the National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, and the State Grange will make its headquartere at the Wiltehire during their annual meetings here in November. There will be between 5,000 and 10,000 Grangers here from all parts of the country.

Before the opening next season the Hotel Dennis is to be improved to the amount of $100,000.

Proprietor John P. Goberson has under consideration extensive alterations and improvements for the Hotel Deville.

FOOTBALL SEASON OPEN FORBIG COLLEGE TEAMS

Summer Sun Makes Play Fatiguing and Changes Frequent.

COLUMBIA DEFEATS UNION

Princeton, Harvard, Pennsylvania, and Cornell Among Victors—Army Line Weak—Other Games.

It is doubtful if the football season was ever begun as it was yesterday by the leading collegiate evens under such peculiar weather conditions. Clad in padded sweaters and moleskins, the teams literally earned their touch-downs by the sweat of their brows. In no section of the country was the mercury in harmony with the sport. Because of this fact, the players soon suffered from exhaustion, necessitating frequent changes in the line-ups before the matches were completed. As is usual with the first matches of the football year, the contests savored more of try-outs than fiercely waged gridiron battles, and with one exception the scores display one-sided results. The exception was the Cornell-Colgate game, in which the Ithacans only saved themselves from defeat by a point, a goal kicked from touch-down, the score being 12 to 11.

The first of the Columbia University matches brought a victory to the men of Morningside Heights. They rolled up a score of 23 to 0 against Union College, simply because they could not help it. Possibly the score might have been bigger, but the game was played almost under the broiling noonday sun at American League Park, and the Columbia line, pounds heavier than Union, refused to move faster to establish an overtoppling total. It fell to Pennsylvania and the Carlisle Indians to build up the biggest Eastern scores of the day. Pennsylvania defeated Lehigh 35 to 0 upon Franklin Field, while the Indians made the same score against Villa Nova College. Princeton was victorious over Washington and Jefferson on the home field by 23 to 0 without really being put to the test of strength. The Army line at West Point proved provokingly weak under the leadership of Capt. Gillespie. Harvard defeated Williams 12 to 0, while Capt. Hurley looked on from the side lines, where he was forced to remain because of an injured ankle.

All in all, so many changes were made in the lines because of the torrid weather that but little was really learned as to the strength and formation of the foremost teams.

COLUMBIA'S EASY VICTORY.

Overwhelms Union by 23 to 0 in Season's First Game.

Columbia's football team opened the season yesterday at the American League Park, defeating Union College by the score of 23 to 0. The victory carried little credit or satisfaction, as only on two occasions did the Morningside eleven show any real football form. Fisher in the first half made a splendid 65-yard run through the Union line, and Armstrong circled his opponents' end, carrying the ball 50 yards by clever dodging. Both runs resulted in touch-downs, and proved the only redeeming features of an otherwise poorly played game.

Union's line averaged thirty pounds lighter than that of Columbia. This made effective defense impossible for Union, and the visiting team depended upon punting. In this department Moore showed to advantage and kept the score down for his side. The contest was witnessed by a small crowd.

Columbia won the toss and kicked off, Wright running the ball back to the 25-yard line. Moore kicked to Columbia's 35-yard line. Helmrich attempted to return the kick, but the Union line blocked the ball. The visitors advanced the ball by short stages until Columbia secured the leather. After a series of line plunges Fisher was sent over the line for a touch-down, but failed at the kick for goal. Mulrooney ran the ball back 35 yards on the kick-off, and Moore punted into Columbia's territory. Columbia was penalized for a forward pass, but soon after kicked the ball over the Union line. Helmrich caught the ball on the kick-out, and running straight through the Union line for 65 yards, aided by good interference, scored the second touch-down, the try for the goal again failing. The light blue players tore up the Union line for the remainder of the first half. The safety, which was Columbia's last score of the half, was made on a poor pass over the Union's line, Helmrich and Fisher falling on the ball. The playing was rough, but Columbia was in better condition than Union, the score at the end of the first half being: Columbia, 12; Union, 0.

In the second half Merrill replaced Lent at left half for Union and Starbuck gave way to McKenzie for Columbia. Union played a miserable game in the second half, fumbling continually. They again failed to make gains against the Columbia line. Columbia, on the contrary, showed a slight improvement. The blue and white team used their backs to better advantage and gradually, but surely, forced the ball toward the Union goal. After five minutes' play Fisher secured the leather and went over the line for a touch-down. Donovan made a poor attempt at kicking the goal and missed. Union was unable to hold Columbia, and the latter again forced the ball down the gridiron, but Union rallied and prevented touch-downs. Three minutes before the close of the game, Armstrong got the ball in midfield and skirting the end made a brilliant dash down the field, landing the ball behind the goal posts. Echeeveria kicked the goal. The score: Columbia, 23; Union, 0. The line-up:

PRINCETON, 23; W. AND J., 0.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 30.—Washington and Jefferson put up a hard fight against Princeton this afternoon, and during the first half held the "Tigers" to one touch-down, but was finally defeated by a score of 23 to 0. Fumbling was frequent, and both sides suffered costly penalties, due principally to off-side plays. The players were so exhausted by heat during the second half that a kicking game was resorted to that the overworked men might have a little rest.

The feature of the game was a 50-yard sprint by Dillon, the freshman quarterback, who took Tenney's place in running the eleven. Dillon caught the ball on a punt, and started down the field with a good interference, covering nearly half the gridiron length before he was finally downed.

Washington and Jefferson started the game by kicking off to Moscrip, who was filling McCormick's place at full back. He came back 20 yards, and the Tigers commenced their battering while they were fresh. Daub made two long end gains, and Cooney crossed the line for the first score after six minutes of actual play.

Princeton fell back on a punting game in the second half, and gained steadily, due to several fumbles by the visitors. Simons was the star of this period, when he took Bard's place, making several brilliant end runs and scoring two touch-downs. The line-up:

Princeton, 23. Position. Washington and Jefferson, 0.

HARVARD, 12; WILLIAMS, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 30.—Harvard opened her football season this afternoon by defeating Williams by the score of 12 to 0 on Soldiers' Field. Both touch-downs were made in the first half and were the result of short but effective plunges through the right of Williams's line. In the second half Harvard put in a number of substitutes, who played a fumbling game.

Harvard's playing in the first half was sharp and snappy. Foster and Wendell in the back field were consistent gainers, especially through holes opened up for them by Brill and McFadden. The right side of the Crimson line was not so strong. Pierce at right guard played too high and was the particular weak spot. Squires at right tackle lost much of his effectiveness in consequence, although he showed lots of life and was particularly effective in pulling the runner through on the offense. Line-up:

Harvard, 12. Position. Williams, 0.
O'Brien, Grant..... Left end ....Elder

PENNSYLVANIA, 35; LEHIGH, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Sept. 30.—Pennsylvania opened her campaign of football by defeating Lehigh on Franklin Field this afternoon by the score of 35 to 0. Pennsylvania was much heavier than Lehigh, Dr. Newton's proteges being so much lighter in weight that they only made one first down during the game.

Pennsylvania played a strong defensive game because Lehigh practically displayed no concerted attack. Draper, Bennis, Ziegler, Folwell, and Lamson were the best ground gainers for Pennsylvania, although Scarlett made the longest advance of the game, a run of nearly thirty yards.

The touch-downs of the second half were made by Folwell and Hobson. Corson kicked one goal while Bankhart missed the other. Hobson gave a good exhibition of hurdling in the second half, and he seldom failed to gain against the opposing line. The line-up:

Pennsylvania, 35. Position. Lehigh Univ., 0.

RUTGERS, 6; STEVENS, 0.

The Stevens Institute football team traveled to New Brunswick yesterday to play their first game of the season with Rutgers and lost by the score of 6 to 0. Both teams played ragged ball, due to the extreme heat and want of sufficient practice. The scoring was done in the first half by a series of line rushes and end runs. The superior weight of the Rutgers team was more than Stevens could overcome. The line up:

Rutgers, 6. Position. Stevens, 0.
Green.......... Right end ....Thayer
Watson......... Right tackle ....Leonhard
Morris......... Right guard ....Mudge
Toeblein........... Centre ....Lewis
Steinke.......... Left guard ....Cowenhoven

CORNELL, 12; COLGATE, 11.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Colgate scored two touch-downs against Cornell to-day and came within one of playing a tie game with the Ithacans. The final score was 12 to 11 in Cornell's favor, Halliday having saved the day with two certain goals, while the Colgate man missed one of his.

The sun seemed as hot as on any day this Summer, but in spite of this the game was fiercely fought. Cornell started off in fine style with a new 'Varsity eleven, half of whom were playing their first game. A touch-down was soon scored and the goal kicked. Colgate kept in her regular eleven, which was playing in good style, and soon began to find holes in the Cornell line.

Colgate slowly advanced the ball, and after a long fight pushed it over Cornell's goal line; she failed to kick her goal, and the first half ended: Cornell, 6; Colgate, 5.

In the second half Cornell started out fiercely with more fresh players, and in three minutes had her second touch-down and kicked a goal. Colgate soon began another attack upon the Cornell line. The Ithacans, however, played pluckily and held their opponents for a long time in midfield. Finally, just before the end of the game, Castleman, the Colgate half-back, got his chance. With the ball under his arm he broke away from the mass of players and ran seventy yards for a touch-down. Line-up:

Cornell, 12. Position. Colgate, 11.
Schildmiller,
Roadhouse........ Left end ....Anderson
Costello, Carter,
McNamara....... Left tackle ....Boardman
Oderkirk,

INDIANS, 35; VILLA NOVA, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Sept. 30.—The Carlisle Indian football eleven defeated Villa Nova here to-day by a score of 35 to 0. The Indians played a fine offensive game, but were only fair on the defensive. The visitors played roughly, and had two players disqualified, who were later reinstated. Mt. Pleasant and Joseph Libby made two runs, each of forty-five yards. O'Connor and Slavin did first-rate tackling for Villa Nova. Among the injured redskins were Albanoz, Charles, and Wahoo, who hurt his arm in a sensational tackle through interference. The line-up:

WEST POINT, 18; TUFTS, 0.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, Sept. 30.—West Point defeated Tufts to-day by a score of 18 to 0. The three touch-downs were made by Garey, Weeks, and R. H. Smith. The punting of Beavers was good, but he was slow in getting off his kick. He missed two trials for goal from the field, but kicked three goals after touch-downs. At the beginning of the game Garey caught a punt, and ran sixty yards for the first touch-down. The second touch-down was scored at the end of the first half by Weeks, after a series of short-line bucks.

Tufts showed up stronger in the second half, and the army scored only once. About the middle of the half Smith went around left end sixty yards for a touch-down. The remainder of the game was spent in short-line plunges. West Point's line was weaker than in previous years. Erwin and Christy, however, did good work, as well as Capt. Gillespie. Hiller and Wilhelm came out of the game with sprained ankles. Line-up:

Football Practice at N. Y. U.

With the thermometer registering 92 degrees on Ohio Field yesterday Head Coach Marshall Mills of the New York University football team lined his 'Varsity players up against the "scrubs" for three seven-minute periods. The 'Varsity scored once in each period, Capt. "Pat" Cragin, W. Maus, and P. M. Hulsalt doing the scoring. Three of New York's old football Captains were on the field helping Mills coach the men. They were: "Ed" Rorke, Captain of the 1900 team; Harry Connelly, Captain of the 1902 team, and J. L. Tuthill, Captain of the 1903 team.

TRAVERS BEATS TRAVIS FOR NASSAU GOLF CUP

Veteran Loses Final Round by 4 Up and 2 to Play.

FOOT GETS SECOND TROPHY

Big Field in Handicap Which Results in Quintuple Tie—Hicks Makes Best Gross Score.

Jerome D. Travers, the ex-interscholastic champion, yesterday repeated his performance of a year ago in the final round of the Nassau Country Club's golf tournament at Glen Cove, L. I., by defeating Walter J. Travis and thereby winning the chief trophy. The young golfer won with apparent ease, for he beat the ex-National champion by the good score of 4 up and 2 to play. Travis, to the surprise of his friends, failed lamentably to maintain his customary machine-like accuracy. His approaching, usually so deadly, was quite erratic. Travers was very steady in both his long and short game. He got a lead of three on the fifth green. Four holes were then halved. Travis won the twelfth hole in a grand three. It was the only hole won by Travis in the match. On the sixteenth green, when Travers won the hole in 4 to 5, the match ended. Ten holes were halved, and Travers won five. The cards:

Travers, out.....4 5 4 4 4 5 3 4 5—38
Travis, out.....4 6 4 5 5 5 3 4 5—41
Travers, in......4 3 5 4 5 5 4 —30—68
Travis, in.........5 3 3 4 5 5 5 —30—71

The club links were crowded with players all day, a host of local golfers being attracted to the course for the eighteen-hole handicap. Besides this and the chief cup, the finals of four other cups were played. The second trophy in importance was taken by J. D. Foot of Apawamis. The third cup went to E. S. Parmelee of New Haven.

The handicap brought out over fifty starters. Five players tied for the net score prize at 75 strokes. The gross score prize was won by W. L. Hicks of the home club, with a card of 80. The results:

Nassau Cup.—Semi-final—J. D. Travers, Nassau, beat Douglas Laird, Princeton, by 4 up and 3 to play; W. J. Travis, Garden City, beat Allan Lord, Washington, by 5 up and 4 to play.

Final.—Travers beat Travis by 4 up and 2 to play.

North Country Cup.—Semi-final—J. D. Foot, Apawamis, beat C. A. Dunning, Nassau, by 3 up and 2 to play; H. F. Whitney, Nassau, beat C. H. Kirk, Fox Hills, by 5 up and 4 to play.

Final.—Foot beat Whitney by 4 up and 2 to play.

Open Handicap, F. C. Jennings Cup.—W. L. Hicks, Nassau, 80, 5—75; M. Ballou, Apawamis, 85, 10—75; E. S. Parmelee, New Haven, 87, 12—75; H. F. Whitney, Nassau, 81, 6—75; W. L. Local Men Play to Choose a Team.

Two picked teams of the Metropolitan Association Football League played a scrub game on the grounds of the New York Thistles at Eighth Avenue and 149th Street yesterday afternoon for the purpose of choosing the men who are to meet the visiting English team of Pilgrims in the international match on Oct. 21. The team captained by Ovens of Hollywood Inn was victorious after seventy minutes' play by a score of 4 goals to 1.

O'Gorman of the West Hudson Club opened the scoring with a splendid shot for goal for Ovens's team. Smith of Hollywood Inn followed with another, and McNeill of Brooklyn added a third before Murray of the Paterson Rangers tallied with a pretty shot for the losing team. Inglis of Hollywood Inn scored the fourth goal for the victors.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT—A withdrawal of bull support on Saturday encouraged very active selling of wheat, under which prices broke a cent a bushel, making about 2⅝c decline for the week. After the regular close further weakness was noted in the New York market. At 1 o'clock December was quoted 88⅝c and May 88⅝c. The selling was for both long and short account, with the latter unusually aggressive in view of the interior receipts of 1,701,000 bushels, compared with 1,064,000 bushels last year. Foreign markets were irregular, Liverpool closing ⅝@½d lower and Paris 10@30 points higher. Broomhall estimated that world's shipments would be around 10,000,000 bushels on Monday and predicted a fair decrease in the amount on passage. Other statistics for Monday were generally expected to be bearish. Outside markets were all weak under liquidation and the absence of any notable supporting orders. Cash wheat in New York at the close was 87⅝c, elevator, for No. 2 red and 88⅝c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 90⅝c, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, 90⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—The corn market was irregular and rather weak all day in sympathy with wheat, although it only lost about ¼c on late months. Under manipulation September at Chicago showed a good deal of weakness, closing 1½c under the previous night. The weather and crop influences were bearish, as were the receipts of 501,000 bushels at interior points, compared with 333,000 bushels last year. Liverpool closed ⅜@½d net lower, and the only export business reported was 6 loads. Chicago announced the arrival of a car of new corn from Central Illinois, which was said to be in poor condition and entirely unmerchantable. At 1 o'clock December corn in New York was quoted 52c and May 49c. No. 2 corn closed 58¼c, elevator, and 59c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 60c, and No. 2 yellow, 60c, free on board afloat.

COTTON.—It was a small day in the cotton market, with fluctuations narrow and sales estimated at only 100,000 bales. There was an undercurrent of nervousness apparent, and fluctuations were irregular. The opening was 2 points lower on October, which was influenced by somewhat lower cables, to an advance of 3 points on the late months, which received support on the ground that rains in the belt were injuring open cotton, and also on the bullish week-end statistics. After working up to a net advance of about 5@6 points offerings became heavier, and with some of the large local interests selling, while New Orleans bull support was not aggressive, prices eased off, closing within a point or two of the lowest, at a net loss of 2@4 points.

A private condition report published early in the day proved somewhat of a disappointment to local longs, as it showed a condition of 69.4 per cent. compared with 72.4 per cent. last month and 69.9 per cent. by the same authority last year. The Government report last year was 75.8 per cent. So far three private condition reports have been issued, showing a deterioration for the month ranging from only 3 to 4 per cent., which is an unusually good showing for the month of September. The Government's September condition was 72.1 per cent., and should the report show the deterioration indicated by private reports the October figures will be around 68 to 69 per cent., or some 6 or 7 points below that of last year, which, allowing for the decrease of 15 per cent. in acreage, estimated by the department in its corrected report, would seem to suggest a crop some 21 to 22 per cent. under that of last season. The Government's report will be issued on Tuesday, while probably on Monday there will be a report by the Census Bureau showing the amount of cotton ginned to Sept. 25.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 30.—Spot cotton quiet; sales, 6,000 bales; speculation and export, 500 bales; American, 5,000 bales; receipts, 5,000 bales; middling upland, 5.71d. Futures opened easy, at 6 points decline; closed barely steady, net 7 points lower. COFFEE.—The coffee market opened steady at a decline of 5@10 points under liquidation and selling by trade interests said to be against purchases in Brazil. There was a moderately fair demand at the decline, and with no aggressive pressure prices ruled generally steady, closing net unchanged to 10 points lower. Sales were reported of about 38,000 bags. European cables were slightly lower, and the Brazilian markets were said to be easier, with Rio 75 reis lower, although Santos was unchanged. Receipts, too, seemed somewhat heavier than the recent average, and this in connection with a decline of 7-16d in the rate of Brazilian exchange served to discourage fresh demand. The fact appears to be that the recent reports of favorable new crop prospects are undermining bull confidence to some extent, without, however, impairing bearish operations on anything like a general scale. Local authorities contend that it is too early to form any opinion as to the coming crop, and in some quarters it is claimed that the more bearish reports recently received have been inspired by European shorts. If so, however, it would seem that American bulls might easily receive cables to the opposite effect, and it seems a more or less general impression that present conditions favor a large yield of Santos next season. Popular estimates of the current crop continue to place it around the figures of last season, and trade interests profess to look for a marked reduction in the world's surplus during the season, some estimating it as high as 2,000,000 bags.

The spot market was quiet with quotations on the basis of 8 11-16c for Rio No. 7.

CAIRNGORM EASILY WON BRIGHTON CUP RACE

CAUGHNAWAGA NEVER IN IT

Big Crowd Saw Long Distance Contest, Closing Feature of the Brighton Fall Meeting.

With the race for the Brighton Cup, over an old-fashioned two-mile-and-a-quarter course, as the big feature of the day, the Brighton Beach Fall meeting was closed yesterday before a crowd that was large enough to rescue the meeting from comparative failure and make it a financial success.

The cup race was the attraction that was responsible for the attendance, and though the contest fell little short of the ridiculous, so one-sided was the race, the crowd that filled the stands and packed the lawns refused to be disappointed and cheered the winner, Cairngorm, when he cantered home, with almost as much warmth as if he had achieved something.

It was not Cairngorm's fault that the race was so poor, for he was willing and ready to run, and through the entire two miles and a quarter was out in front with his mouth open and his ears pricked, eager to go on, but because there was no necessity for haste he was restrained through the full distance, as his only competitor, Caughnawaga, was not able to do much more than raise a gallop at any part of the journey. Three horses originally were named on the card to run for the race, which has a gross value of $11,000, but early in the afternoon the filly Outcome was withdrawn by her owner, Woodford Clay.

Through all the betting Cairngorm was started at 5 to 2 on, while 2 to 1 was laid started at 5 to 2, while 2 to 1 was laid against the older horse. O'Neill had the mount on Cairngorm and Burns rode Caughnawaga. Though the race was about the tamest spectacle of the turf season, every part of the contest was watched with eager interest. Cairngorm, with the rail position at the start, led off, and, though he was pulled back at once in the hope that Caughnawaga would go out to make the running, Caughnawaga refused to move faster than a slow gallop, and Cairngorm, fighting against restraint, had to take the lead and go on, his rider pulling him back to a very slow pace.

At hardly more than a two-minute pace the horses passed the stand the first time. The pace never improved perceptibly, though once on the turn into the back stretch in the last mile Caughnawaga did make an effort to go to the three-year-old, but promptly was shaken off, Cairngorm then rating along at much the same pace to the far turn, where he brushed away a trifle further from the old horse and caused Burns to go to the whip on Caughnawaga. The whipping was futile, for Caughnawaga never made up an inch of ground, though Cairngorm then was only cantering, Cairngorm romping home winner in the easiest possible style by eight lengths from the wretched old Caughnawaga, which finished under the whip so tired that he was stumbling as he was pulled up. The crowd cheered the winner, but horsemen generally wondered at the policy which permitted so gallant a horse as Caughnawaga has been to be so badly used.

The time, 4:08 3-5, was remarkable only for being the slowest for a Brighton Cup contest nearly twenty seconds behind the track record.

In the Mercury Handicap, Big Ben, running in the name and colors of Jerry Wernberg, and one of the high weights, started a lukewarm favorite in a field of six horses, every one of which was backed to beat him on the supposition that something was wrong with the Western sprinter. In the race Diamond and Handzarra went out at the lifting of the barrier and raced each other almost to a standstill in the effort to take the track, while Big Ben waited in third place until they began to stop at the turn into the stretch, where the favorite went on to the front and won cleverly by a length from Oxford, which also came from the rear and beat Diamond a length and a half for the place.

In the steeplechase five horses ran, with Hylas the favorite at odds on, and Nitrate the second choice. Dick Roberts went out at the start and led to the last jump, where Hylas went up to him, and through the indifference of the rider of Dick Roberts took the lead. The two then raced through the flat to the winning post, with Hylas ridden out, first by a length, and Dick Roberts four lengths before Ruth's Rattler, the only other horse to finish, as Nitrate fell and King Fox II. refused.

In the sixth race the favorite, Brother Frank, was beaten by the 15-to-1 chance Aviston, while in the last race of the day and meeting another 15-to-1 chance, Pantoufle, well up all the way, won cleverly, while the favorite, Leonora W., after being almost left at the post, closed a lot of ground and was third. DAN PATCH IN FAST TRIAL.

Paces a Mile Handily in 2:01½ Against Stiff Breeze.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 30.—Dan Patch, king of all the harness horses, paced a mile on the West Twelfth Street track in 2:01½ to-day, the fractional time being 0:30¼, 1:01¼, 1:31½, 2:01½.

The performance was especially creditable from the fact that a stiff southwest breeze was blowing late in the afternoon when the trial took place. In addition to this a drizzle of rain came on just before the pacer took the word, which did not help the condition of the track. Otherwise the conditions were favorable, the air being of the proper temperature and the footing admirable.

Earlier in the afternoon the pacer was sent three warming-up miles, the time of these being 2:30, 2:22½, 2:14¾, and the stallion gave evidence of being in prime condition for a great effort. Had the day been an ideal one for the task, a mile close to two minutes would undoubtedly have been registered, as Dan Patch did not follow the pacemaker drawing the windshield closely, and finished strong and full of pace, the final quarter being done in 0:30.

The crowd was large and applauded the performance, having been previously entertained by four races for cups, the fields being composed of local horses. The best of these events was won by the pacer Dacy, the pony stepping his miles in 2:14¼ and 2:15.

FAMOUS PACERS MAY MEET.

Talk of a Match Race Between Dan Patch and Audubon Boy.

The rather wonderful exhibitions of speed shown by Dan Patch and Audubon Boy this season indicate that both of these famous pacers will, if it is possible, break all records at their style of going. This means an astonishing rate of speed, for Dan Patch holds the premier mark, 1:56, with the assistence of a pacemaker, while Audubon Boy only recently, at Readville, Mass., equaled Star Pointer's best record, without the aid of a wind shield, of 1:59¼. Both horses are scheduled to give numerous exhibitions before the campaign closes, and there is a movement on foot to bring the "Black Whirlwind" and his strongest rival, Audubon Boy, together in a match race, to be decided at Cleveland or at the Charter Oak Park, Hartford.

GRAND CIRCUIT TROTTING.

Jubilee Won Pacing Class in Split Heats at Oakley Park.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 30.—The six-day meeting of the Grand Circuit races at Oakley Park closed to-day. It took five heats to decide the 2:13 pace, the first event on the card. Star Patch won the first and second heats from Peachie Jubilee, the favorite, who finished sixth in the first and fourth in the second heat. Jubilee easily won the next three heats and the race.

Norrie won the 2:10 trot in straight heats. Only in the final heat was he extended, when Brown Wilton came with a rush at the end, and was only beaten a nose. Jim Ferry finished third, a head behind.

The 2:16 class pace went to Harold Brooks in straight heats in easy fashion. Dan P., the favorite, finished second in the first and second heats; in the final heat Black Patchen, after getting away badly, came strong and took the place from Fred Miller. Dan P., the favorite, finished sixth in this heat. Track fast. Summary:

EMPIRE CITY'S MATINEE.

Susie G. Again Takes the Pacing Honors from Star Pugh.

With the Saturday matinees of the New York Driving Club at the Empire City track fast drawing to a close interest is somewhat waning, and less than 1,000 persons were on hand yesterday. An interesting card was marred by the absence of several of the best horses, which are racing at the country fairs, while the principal event of the afternoon, the championship class, in which Invader and Swago were scheduled to meet, was declared off. Notwithstanding these defections a good afternoon's sport was witnessed. In nearly every event split heats resulted, which with few exceptions were closely contested. Summary:

FIRST ATHLETIC MEET AT M'COMB'S DAM PARK

Twenty Thousand People See Contests on New Field.

SCHOOLBOYS OUT IN FORCE

Local Cracks Compete in Long Programme, and Provide Good Sport and Fast Time.

With perfect weather, an enormous crowd, well-contested games, and efficient management, the new McComb's Dam Park athletic field was opened yesterday afternoon. This is the first big field that has been laid out by the city which is absolutely free for all who wish to use it for track and field athletics, football, baseball games, and kindred sports. It is laid out on broad lines, affording ample room for thousands to see the games and hundreds to compete.

The control of the field will be vested in the Department of Parks in the Borough of the Bronx. Commissioner Henry C. Schrader and ex-Commissioner Eustis were both present. Commissioner Schrader opened the grounds by starting the first race down the track in the elementary school seventy-five-yard run, for boys under 13 years of age. The officials had all they could do to finish the events before twilight set in.

At the conclusion of the last contest Frederick J. Rubien, Chairman of the meet, was called in front of the grand stand to listen to a eulogistic speech by James E. Sullivan on the success achieved in laying out the track. A gold medal was then presented to him.

Fully twenty thousand persons witnessed the sports. The quarter-mile track that borders the field was surrounded with park benches so closely placed together that it was impossible to force one's way through. Back of these men, women, and children stood in rows from three to ten deep. The bridge viaduct, from which a superb bird's-eye view of the field could be had, was packed.

The games were held under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, and practically all of the star local athletes were out. In addition, there was a big delegation of schoolboys.

Eighteen events were run off. Four firsts went to the Irish-American Athletic Club. Harry Hillman, the New York Athletic Club runner, and L. Robertson established a new record in the 100-yard three-legged race. They finished in 0:11 2-5, clipping 3-5 second off the old mark. In the quarter mile Hillman, starting from scratch, won by two yards in the fast time of 0:49 4-5.

Flanagan threw the fifty-pound weight 40 feet, but fouled. He won the event with a throw of 37 feet 11 inches. Joseph Bromilow of the Irish-Americans ran a fast half mile, 1:57 4-5, from the fourteen-yard mark. H. W. Cohn and James P. Sullivan ran first and second in the two-mile contest, Cohn winning by over one hundred yards in 9:59 1-5.

The De Witt Clinton School athletes did well in the field sports and won the football game with the Mount Auburn High School eleven by a 16-to-0 score. The summary:

JOCKEY SHAW ACCUSED.

Complaint by Trainer Wimmer Goes to Jockey Club Stewards.

On complaint of Peter Wimmer, owner and trainer of the mare Ocean Tide, against Jockey William Shaw for the manner in which Shaw rode Ocean Tide in a race at Brighton Beach on Friday, the Stewards of the Brighton Beach meeting conducted an investigation yesterday, and finally reported the case to the Stewards of The Jockey Club for action.

Ocean Tide was the post favorite in the race in question, which was won by the horse The Southerner. Trainer Wimmer in his complaint stated that Shaw had acted in direct opposition to his orders in his riding of the mare, the trainer alleging that he had told Shaw to wait.

When questioned by the Stewards, Shaw denied that Trainer Wimmer had instructed him specifically, and said that as he had ridden Ocean Tide in a number of her winning races the trainer had left it to him to use his own judgment.

There were insinuations also that as the race was run the winner was favored, and the case promises to bring to the surface more or less turf scandal.

Fordham Loses Smith as Coach.

Fred Smith, the ex-Princeton football player, has resigned as head coach of the Fordham University football eleven, a position which he has held for two years. Smith's place will be filled by Eugene McGee, who played tackle for several seasons at Fordham and was graduated in 1902. The squad that McGee will take in hand now numbers thirty players. McGee is busy getting out more men, and he believes that the squad can be effectively increased to fifty.

McGee had all of the men out yesterday and put them through the most rudimentary sort of practice of tackling the dummy and punting, so as to see just what material he had to work upon. Capt. Gargan showed well in booting the ball. There was also a short period of practice as the probable 'Varsity team lined up against a second eleven. Among those who have shown good work are Coffey, full back; Murphy and McKalb, as half backs; Glennon, Coveney, and Barry, as guards; Walpole and Conlon, as tackles; White at centre, and Connolly, Coogan, O'Reilly, and Cornwall at ends. Capt. Gargan is the strongest player for the position of quarter back, although Daly and Frank Gargan are striving for the honor of being substitutes. The line weighs about 170 pounds and the back field 160 pounds.

FRENCH RACERS ARRIVE FOR VANDERBILT CUP

Hemery, Wagner, Duray, and Szisz Here with Their Cars.

EXCESSIVE SPEED PREDICTED

Four of the most famous and successful French racing automobilists arrived here from Europe yesterday. Louis Wagner and M. Hemery, who are to drive the eighty-five-horse power Darracq cars in the Vanderbilt Cup race on Oct. 14, came on the steamer New York, bringing their powerful racing cars with them. On the French steamer La Lorraine were G. Duray, who will drive the 120-horse-power De Dietrich car, and Francois Szisz, who will drive the Renault racer. With the arrival of George Heath, the present holder of the Vanderbilt Cup, who is on the Kaiser Wilhelm II., and which is due Thursday, the entire French automobile team will be here. The four drivers or their representatives will be at the Automobile Club of America to-morrow night, when the draw for positions in the Vanderbilt race will be made under the auspices of the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association.

Other French automobilists to arrive were Baron Adrian de Turckheim, a member of the Racing Board of the Automobile Club of France, and who will be that club's official representative at the coming race, and André Massenat of the Panhard Levassoir Company. The latter has been making arrangements for the shipment of the Panhard racer which Heath will drive in defending his title to the cup. The car came over on the steamer, and as soon as Mr. Heath arrives it will be ready for his use on the Long Island course. M. Massenat said that while Heath had not been very prominent in foreign races this year, he was driving in splendid form and was confident of victory. The Panhard car will be the same machine that he used last year with the exception of a few changes calculated to give the car higher speed.

"I have not seen the Long Island course," said M. Massenat, "but from what I have heard of it and judging from the high speed records made by the best foreign cars in the long-distance races abroad, the average speed for the Vanderbilt Cup race ought to be over sixty miles an hour, probably about sixty-three to sixty-five miles."

Hemery and Wagner are regarded as two of the most formidable men in the event, with the chances favoring Hemery, but very slightly. Hemery's greatest victory this year was in the Ardennes Circuit, when he led a big field and won the 373-mile race at an average of over 62 miles an hour. He also made the best time for light cars in the recent Florio Cup race in Italy. Wagner has been prominent in all of the recent foreign races, and while he did not win the Ardennes Circuit contest he established a new world's record for one of the rounds of 100 kilometers, covering the distance in 55:18, an average speed of over 67 miles an hour. Their racing cars will be taken to Long Island this week and quarters have been engaged at the Glenwood Hotel, near the Bull's Head turn.

Duray, accompanied by Baron de Turckheim, went to the Long Island course immediately after leaving the ship. Duray made a circuit of the course in a touring car and pronounced it admirably adapted to high speed. Duray won the Florio Cup contest in Italy and has competed with success in many big events for several years.

Szisz brought with him his new Renault car of 70-90 horse power. It is the first racing automobile built by the Renault firm since the fatal accident to Marcel Renault in the Paris-Madrid race of 1903. The car just missed getting a place on the Gordon Bennett team, due to tire troubles. Szisz brought his French mechanician, George Dimitrievitch, with him, and they will take up permanent quarters near the Vanderbilt Cup course just as soon as they get their car from the steamer.

The absent members of the German team are expected this week, and by Saturday all of the twenty contestants will be practicing for the big event.

The Crescent lacrosse twelve easily defeated a team representing the New York Lacrosse Club by the score of 6 goals to 2 at Bay Ridges yesterday. Disqualified Athlete in Football.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., Sept. 30.—Frank R. Castleman, the disqualified runner of the Irish-American Athletic Club, whose case was recently taken to the Supreme Court and an injunction obtained, made a sensational run to-day in the Cornell-Colgate football game. Castleman holds the intercollegiate championship for the 220-yard hurdles. He is a student of Colgate and plays the position of halfback on the football eleven. When his opportunity came to-day Castleman got the ball, and hurdling the opposing players, he made a run of seventy yards that resulted in a touch-down for his college. It was due to Castleman's good work that the final score was so close, Cornell only winning by one point—12 to 11. Colgate investigated the charges of professionalism, that of playing "Summer" baseball for money, and exonerated Castleman of all blame. He will be allowed to compete for Colgate in the intercollegiates.

Yale's Scrub Holds the 'Varsity.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Sept. 30.—The Yale first eleven and first substitute eleven played a practice game this afternoon, in which neither side was able to score in the two halves of fifteen and ten minutes, respectively. The play was loose on both sides, and there were many fumbles. Several times the substitute team held for downs, the 'Varsity seeming weak on the offensive.

SIR MORTIMER'S STAR PLAY.

British Ambassador Makes Spectacular Catch in Cricket Game.

LENOX, Mass., Sept. 30.—The All-Berkshire Cricket team, captained by Sir Mortimer Durand, the British Ambassador to the United States, was defeated to-day at Elm Court by the team from Schenectady, N. Y., by the score of 91 to 78 runs. The feature of the match was a spectacular running catch by Sir Mortimer. The game was evenly played throughout.

The Schenectady team was entertained by the Ambassador and Lady Durand at luncheon. The All-Berkshire team was composed of players from Pittsfield, Adams, North Adams, and Lenox. The All-Berkshires were entertained at the residence of William D. Sloane.

DAUNTLESS CREWS RACE.

Kuehne Rows in Three Victorious Crews in Ladies' Day Regatta.

The annual Ladies' Day regatta of the Dauntless Rowing Club was held yesterday afternoon on the Harlem River. The match race which had been arranged between an octuple sculls crew from the Union Boat Club and a Dauntless boat was not rowed, the men from the Union Boat Club not putting in an appearance.

H. M. Kuehne took the individual honors, getting second in the single gig event and also rowing in the victorious double gig, four-oared gig, and eight-oared shell.

Wheelmen in Novelty Run.

A novelty "lobster" run by the Century Road Club (Eastern Division) riders was held last night from Columbus Circle over a forty-mile stretch leading back to Eighth Avenue and 110th Street. Over a hundred wheelmen participated, headed by J. W. Johnson, L. Ruch, M. Walters, and H. F. Dwyer as pacemakers. The cyclists were restricted to a speed of ten miles an hour, with the penalty of disqualification for those exceeding the limit.

From each handlebar was hung a Japanese lantern, and the long string of double lights gave a picturesque appearance to the ensemble. Nearly every one of the starters completed the distance, finishing in close ranks.

To-day the Long Island Division of the Century Road Club will hold its annual races at Valley Stream.

CUP RACE IS OPPOSED BY YACHTSMEN HERE

INTEREST IN SMALL BOATS

The Ocean Race Proposition Is Popular on This Side—The New Sixty-Foot Class.

With the talk of challenges for the America's Cup from England and from Germany, with the promise of cups offered by King Edward and Kaiser Wilhelm for transatlantic races, definite arrangement made for international thirty-footer races between German and American boats, and the certainty of races for the Seawanhaka and Canada Cups, there promises to be a busy year in yachting circles next season. While there are few that expect that there will be an America's Cup race, it is well within the bounds of possibility, though the nearest approach to a challenge that has appeared is the statement made by Wilson Marshall on his return from England, that a challenge will be sent by R. P. M. Houston, M. P. There still remains a month for the formal request for a race to be sent, though there is no certainty that the invitation will be accepted if received.

America's Cup races may not be run off every year, and it is well they may not. They cost to defend in the neighborhood of half a million dollars when all the incidentals are figured up, and that is a pot of money to spend upon from three to five contests between boats that are useless once the question of their relative speed is settled. Of all the cup defenders we have built, only two have been in commission in the past two years, and most of them have been consigned to the scrap heap, or what virtually amounts to that.

Then, too, frequent racing makes the cup contest too common and robs its defense of some of the sentiment that should attach to it. If a challenge should be received from either Hon. R. P. M. Houston, or Sir Thomas Lipton, or from a German source, it is highly likely that the effort would be made at least to postpone the contest to 1907.

Neither does there appear to be any probability that there will be a transatlantic race next year. This idea has gained very general favor both on this side of the water and on the other, and either King Edward or Emperor William is likely to offer another trophy. It is certain that there will be an even more enthusiastic response to the call in the United States than there was in the last race, and it is probable that Germany and England will both have a larger representation than before.

There are five men on this side who are ready to build schooners to compete for another royal cup if they have a year in which to do so. More might readily be induced to follow their example. Three, and maybe four, of the American boats in the last race will again compete, so that a dozen American competitors are not too many to expect.

The project of an American-German thirty-footer series has met with general favor. It will not entail a tremendous outlay on the part of either country, and the races would benefit yacht building in each. To select three representatives from each would mean the building here of at least nine boats that would contest among themselves for the right to race, affording excellent sport prior to the actual contests themselves.

What will be done in the matter of the Seawanhaka and Canada Cups is not yet certain. The Canadians are eager to regain both trophies. New rules must be devised to govern the Seawanhaka contests, and these will tend to do away with the old type that has caused so much unfavorable comment.

The success of the races in the New York thirty-footer and the Atlantic twenty-two-footer classes has given rise to high hopes for the new sixty-footers. The sixties, midway in size between the Mineola and Mira would furnish a mean type that will be most acceptable.

LIGHT WIND FOR FINAL RACE.

Mimosa III. Heads Fleet, While Cara Mia Beats Thirties.

The final regatta of the year was held yesterday afternoon on Long Island Sound off Port Washington by the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, and attracted all the yachts of the smaller classes still in commission. Trenor L. Park's Mimosa III. and Stuyvesant Wainwright's Cara Mia took first honors of the larger boats, winning in their respective classes. George M. Pyncheon's Neola II. and Harry L. Maxwell's Phryne pushed Cara Mia hard until the final leg of the 11¾-mile course was covered by the New York thirty.

The wind was light from the southwest, and slow time was made by all the boats. Firefly and Thelema divided honors in the 27-foot class, while Tartan headed the raceabouts and Houri the Larchmont boats. Paumonak led the twenty-twos and Sweetheart the special cats. The summary follows:

Gravesend Fleet's Final Contest.

The Gravesend Bay fleet of racers turned out only seven boats for the final race of the year under Bensonhurst Yacht Club auspices yesterday afternoon. The light wind enabled the yachts to cover only six miles. The contestants were divided into two classes, above and below twenty-foot rating measurement, and Vivian II. proved the winner of the larger boats and Cockatoo II. of the smaller.

Vivian II. beat Lizana over twenty minutes, actual time, and won handily all the way, nothing touching the Vernon boat. Hendon Chubb's racer also had an easy time, leading by nearly eight minutes at the finish. Neither Anona or Ogeemah could cover the course. The summary:

Greater New Yorks and Cleveland Even in a Double-Header.

With their team severely handicapped by the injuring of Fultz and Elberfeld in a collision in the fourth inning, the Greater New Yorks yesterday, in the presence of a crowd estimated at 14,000 persons, defeated the Clevelands in the first game of their double-header by a score of 7 to 5, but the visitors reversed the verdict in the second trial by a score of 1 to 0, play being stopped at the close of the fifth inning on account of darkness.

The local men's victory came as a great surprise, for the accident to Fultz and Elberfeld made a disarrangement of the nine necessary, and three Eastern League players were placed in the infield besides the transferring of Chase from first base to shortstop. Connor was put on first, Laporte covered second, and Cockman played at third. Hahn took Fultz's place in centre field, and "Pat" Dougherty went to left. At that time the score stood 3 to 1 in favor of Griffith's men, and Leroy and his associates had the visitors at their mercy. They had not made a base hit in three innings, and Leroy had struck out three men. Then the Clevelanders began to hit a little lively, and when they had finished their seventh inning the score stood 5 to 3 in their favor.

The Clevelands' second run was due to the collision of the players, and two singles and a wild pitch gave them another in the sixth. In the seventh, however, Leroy let down and four hits and three runs were the result. Then Hogg succeeded Leroy, and while somewhat wild, he controlled his delivery at critical moments and shut out the visitors without a run.

With two out in the seventh, Hahn hit safely to centre field, and Keeler followed by placing the ball to the centre field fence for three bases. The game was tied by Dougherty also making a safe hit. In the eighth inning, after two were out, Kleinow and Cockman scored on force hits and a stout single by Hahn.

In the second game, West was opposed to Puttmann, and, while the local man pitched well as a rule, a three-base hit by Bradley, followed by Turner's single, tallied the run which won the game. Puttmann made a triple in the fifth inning and Hahn was hit by a pitched ball, with no one out. The next three men, however, were put out.

CHICAGO, 4; PHILADELPHIA, 3.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—The record crowd of the season to-day saw Chicago defeat Philadelphia in the third game of the series. More than 25,000 spectators were jammed in the pavilion and the field seats and the crowd overflowed to the outfield, handicapping the players. Plank and Owen were the opposing pitchers and both were hit freely. The score remained a tie from the second to the seventh inning, when Green's single scored Isbell and G. Davis, giving Chicago a lead of two runs. The locals scored one in the eighth, but Owen's good pitching prevented them from winning. Score:

HONORS EVEN AT BOSTON.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Honors were even to-day, Detroit taking the first game, 3 to 2, and Boston the second, 4 to 1. The visitors won by bunching hits. Wiggs's lack of control was responsible for Boston's runs. Harris held Detroit in the second game without a hit until the seventh, when three successive hits gave the visitors their only run. NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York Winds Up at St. Louis with a Victory by 9 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 30.—The champions just played with the St. Louis team to-day and beat it 9 to 2. Had the visitors not grown tired of hitting Brown's delivery and stealing bases almost at will, the score would have been more out of proportion. After Bresnahan was hit by a pitched ball in the third, Browne singled, reached second on Donlin's out, rested on third when Bresnahan went out at the plate on McGann's grounder to McBride, and stole home when McGann dashed safely to second. The fireworks thus started continued to pop merrily, and five more tallies were gathered in before the New Yorks grew weary.

After the game had been safely won in the third McGraw sent Neal and Strang to cover third and second, and in the sixth put Elliott and Clarke on for the heavy work. A temporary let-up by Ames in the fourth inning allowed the local men four safeties, which were responsible for the two tallies. Beckley singled, and scored on Himes's hit after Arndt had advanced him to second. Leahey's double sent Himes over the plate with the other tally.

Squadron A Polo This Week.

Great Neck is the only polo team thus far entered for the Squadron A tournament this week at Van Cortlandt Park. Many of the local clubs have practically abandoned the sport for the year, and it is becoming more difficult to get teams together for Fall tournaments. The Squadron A committee will arrange several troop matches for special prizes, which will have the effect of bringing out many of the new players among the troopers besides furnishing very excellent sport. The squadron continues to practice on the Van Cortlandt fields two or three times a week, and impromptu Saturday matches will be held through the month of October.

WORLD'S SERIES PLANS EXCITING "ROOTERS"

NINES OF EQUAL STRENGTH

Everything Planned by National Commission to Begin Series When Winners Are Known.

The strenuous and successful baseball campaign of the National and American Leagues will end in the East on Saturday next, and in the West on Sunday. The honors in the National League were captured last week, when the New Yorks won three games from their nearest rivals, for if McGraw's aggregation should lose the remaining six games to be played, three with Cincinnati and three with Philadelphia, they would still retain their hold on the championship, which they won so handily last year.

In the American League, however, the situation is different. In a campaign which has broken all records for the closeness of the struggle and in a finish equaling in intensity the wind-up between the Boston and New York Clubs last year, the championship has dwindled down to a contest between the Philadelphia Athletics, champions of 1903, and the Chicagos, winners of the first pennant of the league. The figures at present indicate the success of the Philadelphians, but the form which the two teams have been showing of late will probably leave the championship in doubt until the last day of the season. Each team has six games to play, the Athletics meeting St. Louis at Philadelphia on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of this week, and then go to Washington to wind up with the "Senators" on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The Chicagos wil finish the season in the East at Washington on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, and then go home to play St. Louis on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

With the two major league campaigns at an end the interest in the sport will undoubtedly be intensified with the starting of the series of the best of seven games for the world's championship between the leaders of the National and American Leagues. With the chances promising that the New Yorks of the National League and the Athletics will be the contending teams, the question of superiority is now agitating the patrons of the game throughout the country. Both nines will, it is thought, be in good form when the series begins, and among well-posted critics the teams stand on an equal plane for the possession of the world's trophy. The players who are likely to take part in the contest are:

New York.	Position.	Athletics.
Mathewson, McGinnity, Ames, Tayler, Wiltse	Pitchers.	Waddell, Plank, Coakley, Bender
Bowerman, Bresnahan	Catchers	Schreckengost, Powers
McGann	First base	Davis
Gilbert, Strang	Second base	Murphy
Devlin	Third base	L. Cross
Dahlen	Short stop	M. Cross, Knight
Mertes	Left field	Hartsel
Donlin	Centre field	Lord
Browne	Right field	Seybold

On the pitchers will depend for the most part the chances of victory. Mathewson and Coakley lead in their respective leagues, but Philadelphians pin their faith on "Rube" Waddell, the great left-hander, whose wonderful feats during the season have astonished the baseball world. Around the bases and in the field there is little to choose between the two teams as a whole. Both nines are managed by skilled baseball men, and Messrs. McGraw and "Mack" will bring all their wits into play to gain the coveted honor.

A comparison of past performances is an unsatisfactory means of forecasting the work of the two teams, particularly as they are in different leagues and have different pitchers and opponents to meet throughout the season. Average figures are valuable only as showing what the teams will do if they play up to their highest form.

The contest for the world's championship will be under the exclusive supervision of the National Commission, and that body has made all plans for the series. As soon as the successful clubs of the respective leagues are known, the dates of play, upon what grounds they will be decided, and the names of the umpires will be announced. No player who was not under contract before Aug. 20 will be allowed to participate in the games, and the owners of each club will be required to post $10,000 with the National Commission as a forfeit for a faithful carrying out of the rules and provisions of the series.

The commission has provided a set of field rules for the contest, which will be strictly enforced. No spectator will be allowed nearer than 235 feet from the home base in right and left fields, or 275 feet in centre field, nor within less than 25 feet of the foul lines in any portion of the field.

BASEBALL PLAYERS COLLIDE.

Fultz and Elberfeld Badly Cut Up and Carried Off Grounds.

At an exciting moment of play in the fourth inning of the first game with the Cleveland team at American League Park yesterday, when the New York players were striving hard to keep the visitors from tying the score, a collision occurred between David Fultz, centre fielder, and Norman Elberfeld, short stop of the Greater New Yorks, which for a time looked serious for both of the players. They were trying to catch a high fly hit by Third Baseman Bradley midway between centre field and short stop, and both were running at their topmost speed.

Fultz was carried off the field to the clubhouse unconscious, and finally taken to the hospital. Elberfeld, with the aid of two New York players, was able to walk to the headquarters in a dazed condition, and from there he was taken to his home.

It was at least two hours before Fultz regained consciousness. He was badly cut on the face and body, and before a thorough examination as to his injuries could be made it was believed that his jaw had been fractured. At the hospital last night, however, the surgeon in charge said that Fultz, while somewhat disfigured, was suffering more from shock than anything else. It will probably be three or four days before he will be able to leave the institution, but his ball-playing days are over for this season.

Elberfeld received a bad cut over his right eye, where the impact with Fultz was the greatest, and had three stitches taken in it, besides being cut on the nose, face, and ear. He was also bruised on the body.

In an hour Larned walked 8 miles 539 yards, also breaking the world's record for the time.

At Brighton, England, Aug. 19 Larned walked four miles in 27 minutes 11 seconds, making a new world's record.

TO TRACE INSURANCE LEGISLATIVE PAYMENTS

Committee Also Wants to Know More About Realty Deals,

AND ABOUT "JUDGE" HAMILTON

President Morton Says the Equitable Has Money It Desires to Invest in Good Securities.

Two lines of inquiry are now marked out for the insurance investigating committee when it begins its sessions again on Wednesday for the fourth week of the inquiry. One concerns the payments for legislative and kindred purposes, and the second has to do with the real estate operations of the New York Life which were touched upon at the hearing on Friday, with some surprising results bearing upon the cost of the Paris office building of that company. It is pointed out that the Paris office building of the company, purchased at an original cost of $1,100,000 has had spent on it to the present time sums bringing the total cost up to $2,533,104. Yet it was put down in the sworn report of the company made last December at $1,300,000. The building earned something like 14½ per cent. on its actual value that year.

Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the investigating committee had made hardly more than a start on the New York Life's real estate operations Friday when the committee adjourned. He will probably have E. J. Devlin, the company's Superintendent of Real Estate in the United States and Canada, for his witness at one or more of the sessions this week. Mr. Devlin will be asked, among other things, about the rents from buildings of the New York Life in this city which are occupied wholly or in large part by relatives of officers or high officials of the company.

Payments to Judge Hamilton.

Linked with the real estate operations will be further inquiry concerning payments by the New York Life to Judge Andrew Hamilton. President McCall and other officers of the company have insisted that the Hamilton payments, of which $235,000 is still unaccounted for, have been invariably for the acquisition of real estate in connection with the home office annex, behind the main building at 346 Broadway. Mr. Hughes has elicited some interesting information by approaching the Hamilton payments through the Equitable Life, finding on Friday that the Equitable, at least, had paid the Judge for legal services connected with matters of legislation "west of the Ohio," and in this had been joined by the Mutual and the New York Life. It is expected that Mr. Hughes will go at the matter from the other end and find out just what the real estate transactions of the New York Life have been, and whether any of them could have been carried on through Judge Hamilton and his bank account in the State National Bank of Albany.

Counsel for the committee, it is said, are by no means done with the Equitable's payment for legislative purposes, as it is not understood how the appearance of counsel before committees of Legislatures in States west of Ohio could possibly have consumed any such sums as the Equitable was paying to Judge Hamilton in the years from 1895 to 1903. It is predicted that before the committee is done links will be found to complete the chain that will explain how the legislative funds were handled in New York State and in other States not involved in the testimony thus far.

Want to Know About Albany.

It is not considered likely that a system that included a division of expenses between the three great companies, and the apportioning of the territory not so efficially covered (otherwise between Judge Hamilton of the New York Life and Solicitor Thummell of the Mutual, should have omitted provision for affairs at Albany, particularly in view of the fact that many of the checks to Judge Hamilton were banked through the institutions there in which he had accounts and of the common knowledge that an insurance lobby has been maintained in the State capital for years. Within the last few days there has been talk in well informed quarters that a certain distinguished politician of more than local fame has been active in the executive management of the insurance lobby for years, and this may account for the fact that the part played by Judge Hamilton in such affairs at Albany has been well guarded by the witnesses examined thus far.

That Mr. Hughes is determined to get to the bottom of this particular phase of the insurance situation is indicated by his demand upon the Equitable Life for a transcript of all payments to Judge Hamilton, former Solicitor Knott of the Mutual, or W. L. Thummell, the present solicitor for that company, in any legislative matters. It is also certain that officials of the Mutual will be put on the stand to explain how that company happened to go into the triple alliance, and when Mr. Thummell, who is present out of the State gets back he will be asked a lot of questions also, among other things whether the Mr. Hamilton who occupies his lodgings at 2,350 Broadway during his absence and takes care of his mail is in any way connected with Judge Andrew Hamilton.

Equitable Has Money to Lend.

President Paul Morton of the Equitable Life issued a statement yesterday concerning the society's need of opportunities for high grade of investment. He said:

"First-class securities are difficult to get. The society is not receiving applications for loans on high class New York real estate as rapidly as it would like to get them. It has money to invest and is anxious to take it out of the banks and put it in mortgages. The policy of the society hereafter will be to make it easy for good people to borrow money on high class securities."

Mr. Morton made no comment on the testimony of Jacob H. Schiff at the hearing Friday that the Equitable Society had been asked to divest itself of the Union Pacific preferred stock which came to it through James H. Hyde's participation in the much-discussed holding syndicate. It appeared from the securities register of the Equitable, introduced in evidence at a previous session of the committee, that authority had been given to President Morton to dispose of this stock shortly after Mr. Hyde assigned his participation to the society. Mr. Morton had no comment to make on the testimony of Assistant Auditor Maine regarding the Equitable's payments to Judge Hamilton and Solicitor Thummell other than to say that in the last five years the Equitable had paid but $16,000 for legislative purposes.

Insurance Commissioners Folk of Tennessee, Prewett of Kentucky, Host of Wisconsin, Clay of Texas, and O'Brien of Minnesota arrived here yesterday to talk about investigating the New York Life and some of the other companies. It was announced after they had held a session that their actuaries were going to work on the books of the New York Life at once. The last time the Commissioners from the other States were here a similar announcement was made, but after they had had a talk with President McCall they went back home, pleased, apparently, with the condition of the company. They left one Actuary behind to investigate the condition of the New York Life.

POLICY HOLDERS TO ACT.

Movement in Minnesota for Change in New York Life's Officers.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 30.—A group of large policy holders of the New York Life Insurance Company in Minneapolis and St. Paul got together to-day and decided to call a meeting of all policy holders of that company in Minnesota and perhaps other Northwestern States to take steps to guard their interests.

It was declared by one who attended to-day's conference that it was the consensus of opinion that too little attention had been paid to the welfare of policy holders, and that some action was necessary in order to protect themselves in view of revelations during the investigation.

It is understood that an effort will be made at a general meeting to induce holders of many millions of dollars' worth of policies to demand the resignation of certain officers whose management of the company's funds has been severely criticised.

HIS RESOLUTION SUPPRESSED.

Supt. Vandiver Wanted Penalty for Political Contributions by Insurance Men.

W. H. Vandiver, Superintendent of Insurance of Missouri, was at the Hoffman House last night on his way back to Missouri, after having attended the meeting of insurance men held last week in Bretton Woods, N. H. Mr. Vandiver managed the campaign of Joseph W. Folk when he ran for Governor.

It was commonly reported during the campaign in Missouri, Mr. Vandiver said last night, that the Republicans had received a fund of $25,000 from the National Committee to assist them in carrying the State. In view of that report Mr. Vandiver was very much interested in the admission made by John A. McCall, President of the New York Life, before the Armstrong Committee that he had contributed $50,000 on behalf of his company to the Republican campaign fund. Supt. Vandiver endeavored to get a resolution passed by the insurance men condemning campaign contributions by insuranee companies. The resolution, which was suppressed, follows:

Resolved, That any officer of a mutual life insurance company who diverts the funds of the policy holders to political purposes or to any other use not consistent with the object for which the company was organized, grossly violates a sacred trust and should be compelled to replace said funds and resign his office.

The substitute resolution merely condemned "reprehensible practices by insurance companies." Mr. Vandiver yesterday made arrangements with Hamilton Dawes to represent Missouri in the investigation of the insurance companies, to be made by the Superintendents of a number of Western and Southern States.

Mr. Vandiver said Gov. Folk was almost certain to be a leading candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1908.

"Mr. Jerome's platform of non-enforcement may do all right for New York, but it would not do for Missouri," was his closing remark.

HOYT QUITS EQUITABLE.

Western Superintendent Made Vice President of Chicago Company.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Howard H. Hoyt, Western Superintendent of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, with headquarters in Chicago, has resigned, and was to-day elected Vice President of the Chicago Life Insurance Company.

At the annual meeting of the National Association of Life Underwriters last week Mr. Hoyt won the Ben Williams Vase in the prize essay contest.

INSURANCE AGENTS DISBAND.

Combination Broken Up by Ohio State Prosecutor.

JEFFERSON, Ohio, Sept. 30.—The fire insurance agents of Ashtabula County, twenty-eight of whom were recently indicted on the charge of violating the anti-trust laws by maintaining an association to regulate rates, have decided to disband.

Prosecutor Taylor informed the insurance men that they would be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, and the announcement of the disbandment of the organization followed.

LAST OF A QUEEN'S LANDMARK

House 200 Years Old Seemed Able to Defy Another Century.

An old farmhouse standing just off Hill Street, in the Blissville section of Long Island City, which was erected in 1700 by Bernadus Van Zandt, one of the first settlers of the Dutch possessions on Long Island, was yesterday razed.

Van Zandt owned eighty acres of land, which he tilled for years prior to 1743, when he sold the farm to John De Beauvois. The frame of the dwelling, which went with the farm, was of solid oak timbers which had been hewn out of logs with an axe. The timbers were put together with oak pins. Some nails were found in the woodwork, and they proved to be handmade. The floor boards were very wide and two inches thick, while the laths were of hickory. Between the plaster and the outer wall was yellow clay, mixed with cut straw, forming a firm and solid mixture. The house was covered with red cedar shingles, and the men who demolished it said that the building would have stood for another century.

In one of the rooms on the second floor of the old dwelling was a closet, and when it was torn out some papers were found back of it. The workmen threw the papers out and a resident of the neighborhood gathered them up. Among the papers was a time-worn pamphlet which proved to be a copy of a sermon delivered before the Legislature of the State of New York by the Rev. John B. Johnson, one of the chaplains of the Assembly. It was a eulogy upon Gen. Washington, delivered at the North Dutch Church, Albany, N. Y., upon the first anniversary of his death.

LINEMAN SHOCKED TO DEATH.

Fell Across Wires in Front of Edwin Fiske's House at Mount Vernon.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, Sept. 30.—Ernest Haustler, a lineman employed by the Westchester Lighting Company, was shocked to death to-night in front of ex-Mayor Edwin Fiske's home in Second Street. Several persons sitting on their verandas saw Haustler slip and fall across the live wires.

There were some crossed wires in the neighborhood of South Ninth Avenue and Second Street, and Haustler climbed a pole to straighten them out. While descending he slipped and fell across the wires. His feet rested on a wire carrying 2,200 volts, while his heed was against one containing 700 volts. He died without making any outcry.

P. A. Valentine to Live Here.

P. A. Valentine of Chicago, a member of the firm of Armour & Co., has taken a lease of the Prescott Hell Butler house, at the northwest corner of Park Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street. The lease covers a term of years and is understood to mean that Mr. Valentine will maintain a permanent residence in this city.

Redmond to Speak at the Garden.

William Redmond, M. P., will be the guest of honor at the Irish Industrial Exposition at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday night. He will make a speech on "English Rule in Ireland."

Yerkes Wants His Taxes Reduced.

Charles T. Yerkes has brought an action in the Supreme Court to have his tax assessment reduced from $1,150,000 to $900,000. He alleges that the city has made a mistake in assessing his property at Sixty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue.

NEW INDICTMENT IN THE WEISELL CASE

Charges Against a Fifth Man Said to Await the Grand Jury.

MATHEWS TRIAL OCTOBER 6

Criminal Courts Building to be a Busy Place To-morrow—Early Hearing for Lawyer Wickes.

Beginning to-morrow, the Criminal Courts Building will be busy again after having been almost deserted all Summer. For two months the Grand Jury has considered no cases except those forwarded from the courts of exemination.

The new Grand Jury, which will convene to-morrow, will be prepared to stert investigations on its own hook or on the suggestion of the District Attorney. It is generally expected that this body will be asked to find an additional indictment in connection with the robbing of the Weisell estate, for which offense indictments have already been returned against Armitage Mathews and three other persons. The trial of Mathews has been set for Oct. 6, when the special panel called for by the District Attorney will meet. It is understood that no efforts will be made by the counsel for Mathews to delay the trial, their client having repeatedly expressed anxiety for a speedy trial.

Mathews is not the only one who is eager to have the matter disposed of before election. Whether the new indictment, or indictments, expected in the case will involve persons concerned in local politics could not be learned yesterday, but it is not impossible that this may be the cess. The indictments now against Mathews are for conspiracy and grand larceny. He will be defended by ex-Gov. Bleck and Mr. Olcott. Mr. Rand will prosecute.

The other names eppearing in the indictments are those of Devid Rothschild, now serving a nine-year term in prison, John W. Wooten, convicted of stealing a $1,000 check from the Federal Bank and reported to have mede some kind of a confession to Mr. Jerome, and, finally, Lawyer Samuel I. Ferguson, who also had a number of conferences with the District Attorney before the hot season brought business to a standstill. Both are expected to eppear on the stand, as is May Trimble, the young stenographer formerly in the employ of Rothschild, who came near being indicted for perjury becausc of her testimony at the trial of Wooten. She has since, it is seid, made a full statement to the District Attorney in regard to the circumstances that caused her to deny the truth of previous affidavits made by her.

Thomas Wickes, the lawyer, indicted for blackmail because of letters which he is said to have written to Commodore Weston of Newark over the signature of Lewis Jarvis, will also have a speedy trial. The disposition of his case depends mainly on how soon Assistant District Attorney Rand can get through with the Mathews case.

Bertha Claiche, the young Frenchwoman who shot and killed Emile Gerdron, is still in the Tombs awaiting trial, and several persons of influence are interested in getting an early trial for her.

The case of Abraham Hummel, indicted for conspiracy and subornation of perjury in connection with the Dodge-Morse divorce case, will in all likelihood go over till after election. It has been openly charged that the counsel for Hummel are concentrating all their efforts on the task of postponing the trial until a new District Attorney is elected. A motion for a change of venue, on the ground that a fair trial cannot be had in this county, is pending in the Supreme Court.

HE FOUND THE POOLROOMS.

But the Captain's New Sleuth Spotted the Harmless Kind.

It isn't all plain sailing for a Police Captain in the Tenderloin, as witness this story, over which they chuckle in the police station to this dey.

One day when the Mazet committee was stirring things up in the Police Department, Capt. Price, who had been accused of permitting poolrooms to thrive in his precinct, called Policeman John Mahony into his office, in the Tendsrloin station, and ordered him to don plain clothes.

"Mahony," said the Captain, "I am going to put you out on special duty, and, having every confidence in you and your ability to find out what I want to know and to keep your mouth shut, I hope you will not throw me down."

"All right, Sor," said Mahoney; "I'll do me duty."

"I know you will," said the Captain. "Now, Mahony, I want to know how many poolrooms there are in my precinct. I want you to find every one of them, make a list giving the addresses, names of proprietors, and what kind of business they are doing. This Mazet committee is hounding me, and I want to know all these places, so they can be closed up. I will give you five deys to do the job."

"All right, Sor," seid Mahony; "it's me that'll foind ivery divil av thim," and with another salute he was gone.

This policemen had been less then e year on the force, and set out for a record. The very next night he appeared before Capt. Price and said he was ready to report.

"Well, Mahony," said the Ceptain, when they were closeted in his office, "what heve you to report?"

"Well, Ceptein, Oi found a great meny poolrooms in the precinct. Oi've been all over it, and divil a man Oi didn't get next to. You gev me folve deys, and Oi done it in wan."

"How many poolrooms did you find?" asked Price.

"There's fifty-eight, Captain."

"Good gracious, Mahony, do you want to ruin me? Fifty-eight poolrooms in this precinct? Did you take a list of them?"

"Oi did, Sor, and out av the whole lot, Sor, only wan should be closed up. His place is in Seventh Avenue, neer Thirty-fourth Street. All the others only charge two and a half cents a cue, but this men in Seventh Avenue charges folve."

Mahony was put back on patrol.

ANOTHER SHIPBUILDING SUIT.

Belmont, Nixon, and Fish Especially Named in $500,000 Case.

On behelf of himself and other creditors of the Commonwealth Trust Company, which succeeded the defunct Trust Compeny of the Republic, Harry T. Gause has begun suit in the Supreme Court against the 221 stockholdsre of the trust company end other individuals. He specially names as defendants August Belmont, Lewis Nixon, and Stuyvesent Fish.

This is another of the suits arising out of the collapse of the United Statee Shipbuilding Company, and is brought under Section 162 of ths Banking law, which makes every stockholder of a trust company or bank liable for the full amount of his stock. The plaintiff alleges that the Trust Company of the Republic incurred liabilities in connection with the part it took in financing the Shipbuilding Company, which liabilities have never been met. Gause places the liabilitiee at $500,000, and brings suit to recover that sum.

The Treasurer of the Comomnwealth Trust Company, Charles H. Wenman, declares that the suit is eimply brought to harrass and annoy him and the other defendants, and that if ths plaintiff really had a cause of action he would have applied to the court for leave to examine one or more of the defedants before the trial.

MAIL CARRIER KILLED.

Light Pole, Broken in a Collision, Also Injured a Girl.

Jacob Schweitzer, en Austrian, employed as a substitute mail carrier, walked out of the Post Office and down Park Row ebout 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon on his final trip of the day. Schweitzer was married only two months ago, and as he left the Post Office he hurried his gait to get to his home, at 725 East Ninth Street, for the evening.

When he reached the corner of Mail Street he stopped to shift his load of mail. As he did so a south-bound Madison Avenue car, with William Wagner of 1,873 Second Avenue as motorman, came sweeping down Park Row. Just as the car got to Meil Street en express wagon being driven by John Flannelly of 219 Broedway came through Meil Street and got in front of the rapidly moving car. The two collided and the express wagon wes pushed into an electric light pole on the corner. The pole snapped and fell on Schweitzer's head, crushing his skull and killing him instantly.

At the same time fourteen-year-old Gussie Scheps of 1,112 Broome Street and Mary Comono of 139 Mulherry Street were pessing. Miss Scheps was knocked down and her leg broken. Miss Comono sew the dead letter carrier and the prostrete Miss Scheps and feil to the pavement in a faint. Miss Scheps was removed to the Hudson Street Hospital in an ambulance.

Wagner and James Hopper of 306 West 128th Street, the latter the conductor of the cer, were arrested by the police of the City Hall Stetion.

CUSTOMS MEN OVERPAID.

Inspectors Have Been Drawing $1 a Day Too Much Since Last December.

The 387 Customs Inspectors, whose principal duty it is to seerch the trunks and hend baggage of ocean voyagers for contreband and to open end inspect all packages, freight and express, that come to New York by sea, were yesterday informed that for ths past ten months they had been overpaid at ths rate of $1 a day cash.

Instead of the $5 they have been drewing for every day's work since Dec. 1, 1904, they have only been entitled, under a law which was supposed to become effective then, to a deily wags of $4.

The information wes handed out to the inspectors shortly after noon yesterdey when they wers summoned befors Deputy Surveyor Clowes to appear at his office hetween I and 5 o'clock to-morrow efternon and be sworn in as $4 a day men.

The Deputy Collector told them thet it was possible that a demand might be made upon them for the return of the money drawn by them over the amount to which they were entitled. The suggestion threw the inspectors into a panic, as its fulfillment would necessitate the return of about $200 a piece, or $75,000 between them.

No explanation was given regarding the non-enforcement of the law reducing the pey of the inspectors.

Most of the Customs Inspectors et this port work overtime for at least three months in the year, and in that way get double pay. They all say, however, that they ere poor men.

ROCKS BLOWN INTO GARAGE.

Six Tons Crash Through Wall from Blast Next Door—No One Hurt.

Two employes of the De Witt-Allen Automohile Company, at 250 West Eightieth Street, were engaged in cleening motor cars in the garage ahout 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when they were interrupted by the entrance of about six tons of rock. The mass came through the walls of the garage with a crash, impelled by a substantiel charge of dynamite used hy a gang in excevating for a new huilding next door.

Half of the stone went into the cellar and the other half landed on the ground floor. The garage workmen didn't move till it landed. When the rock hed settled to stay they ran for the street.

The neise of the explosion eroused the neighhorhood; and the police took cherge. Edwerd Dwyer of 217 West Sixty-seventh Street, foreman of the blasting work, was locked up at the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, after Building Inspector Jerome had examined the premises. The garage was condemned.

WOMEN IN POLITICS MAKE ROCHESTER HUM

Two Are Rivals for Office of School Commissioner

ALL HUSBANDS KNOW IT

Republican and Democratic Managers Have to Reckon with Formidable Influence of Wives and Mothers.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, Sept. 30.—A generous dash of variety hes been injected into the municipal campeign here hy a contest between women for a nomination as School Commissioner on the Republican city ticket. Mrs. William A. Montgomery and Mrs. William W. Armstrong are the opposing fectors. The latter is the wife of Senator Armstrong. Nothing like it has ever heen known in any of the first, second, or third class cities of the State. Politics emong the women has the city hy the ears, and if the present ardor end bitterness are meintained more than one house may be divided against itself.

Rochester is the credle of woman suffrege. Susen B. Anthony, who lives on Madison Street, has preached it from neerly every pulpit in the city. Of recent years the women have exerted their influence so well thet they heve heen able to mold politicel eentiment to a formidable degree A candidate displeasing to the wives and mothers has generally been defeated without regerd to which ticket he was on.

As a result of the lining up of the woman, the Republican and Democratic managers have had their anxieties and caree increased. The prinoipal trouble, however, has fellen to the organization controlled by Railroad Commissioner Aldridge, which has been accustomed to dominate and elect its city ticket generally in its entirsty.

The movement for representation of the School Board hy a woman was started a long time ago. It helped to drive from power the old hoard, consisting of a Commissioner for each werd. There were twenty such Commissioners and it was the hope that by their retirement the schools would he taken out of politics. A board of five was urged aa being the best thing to take the place of the seven-ty Commissioners, the five to be elected on a general city ticket. At the first election, in 1899, ths Republicans dominated Mrs. Montgomery as one of the candidatea. She was elected as a Republican. The reform element so far as the schools are concerned has been able to win since, being "recognized" by the Republican organization.

Commissioner Montgomery started out with the political hacking of Joseph T. Ailing, founder of the Good Government Club in this city, and the Rev. Clarence A. Barbour, pastor of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church. She met with great success. Andrew J. Townson, active in one of the largest department stores, came into the board end the influence of Commissioners Townson and Montgomery has always been potent. Principals who were appointed because they were good G. A. R. politicians have been dropped and young collegiete material introduced.

Supt. Noyes wes also dropped efter having been put in to succeed Sylvanus A. Ellis. He had been a Commissioner for years from the old Seventh Ward.

The rsport is ehout that certain influences will he brought to heer upon Senetor Armstrong to induce Mrs. Armstrong to withdraw.

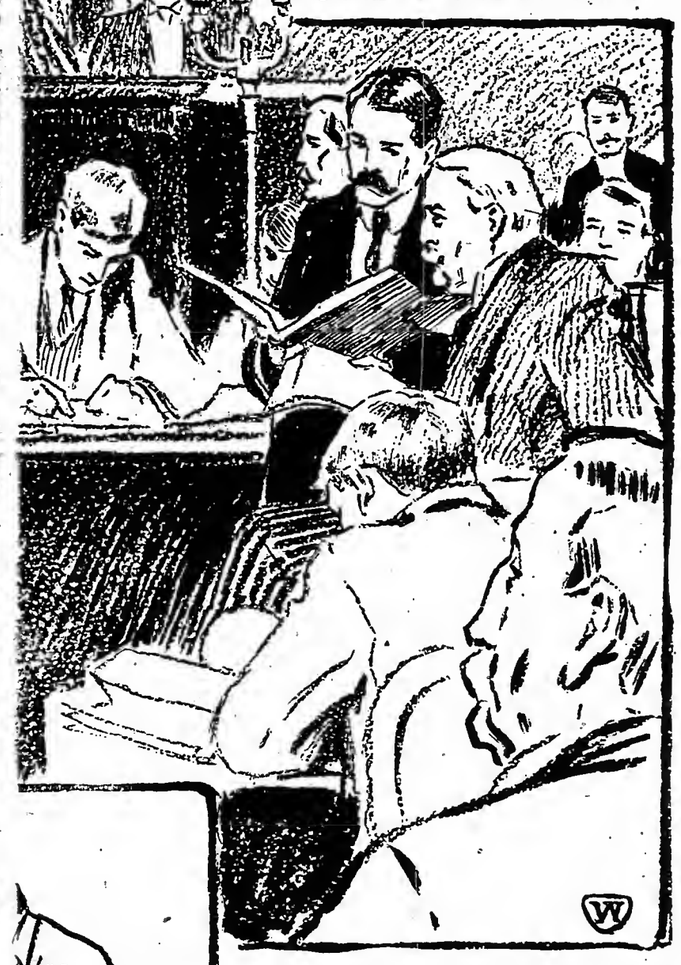
Probing the Insurance Companies

How the Investigation Is Conducted---A Pen Picture for Those Who Cannot Attend a Meeting.

COMMITTEEMEN—
PRENTICE—ARMSTRONG—ROGERS

CHARLES E. HUGHES
THE COMMITTEE'S CHIEF INQUISITOR

SOME OF THE EVIDENCE



MR. HUGHES COMPARING NOTES

Facts About Methods and Men That Do Not Appear in the Daily News Reports of the Proceedings--The Chief Inquisitor and His Associates--Personnel of the Committee---Handling Witnesses.

THOSE relations were confidential, Sir; I must decline to answer," said the witness.

"There is nothing confidential about the insurance business now," the inquisitor rejoined. And the witness answered.

Who the particular witness was and what the question that drew out this colloquy doesn't matter greatly for the purposes of the illustration. The important thing is that the refusal to answer, testily given by a conservative old Wall Street financier last week in the insurance investigation, and the reply of Counsel Charles E. Hughes of the committee, got right into the heart of the inquiry that the Armstrong committee is now holding down at City Hall.

It is worth a trip downtown to look in on a session of the committee, if one cares anything for the study of people. The big Aldermanic chamber of the City Hall is filled to overflowing. At the far end, on an improvised platform whose bare boards contrast strangely with the rich mahogany fittings of the room, sit eight men charged with perhaps the most important task that has come to any body of legislators in this State for a generation. They are called to pass upon the management of a billion and a quarter of trust funds belonging to the people of the whole Nation, but placed under the control of a few score of men composing the Boards of Directors or Trusteees of the great life insurance companies having headquarters in the lower half of Manhattan Island.

A diverse lot are the committee. At their head, Armstrong of Rochester, one of the veterans of the State Senate, a hard-headed, clear-figuring, practical politician, known as "Aldridge's man" in Albany. If he is any men's "man" but his own in New York for the purposes of the investigation it has not become apparent as yet. Beside Senator Armstrong sits most of the time Assemblyman Rogers of Binghamton, the majority leader of the lower house, and like his colleague the Chairman, a veteran of many campaigns and many sessions. Both are lawyers of the abler up-State type, and share with such men as Brackett of Saratoga a fine contempt for the pretension of Wall Street and its creatures that a magic circle surrounds that portion of Manhattan below Fulton Street, over which the inquisitive one must pass at his peril.

As you look over the committee you come to the conclusion that these two men are going to be the backbone of the whole proposition; not that the others are less intent upon getting to the bottom of things, or less anxious that the insurance business shall receive a shaking up such as it has never experienced before, but when you have looked down along the line, past Senator Tully of Corning to Assemblyman Cox of Buffalo, then from Assemblyman Wemple of Schenectady to Senator Riordan of "Big Tom" Foley's east side district, and finally have come to young Assemblyman Prentice, a few years out of Princeton, sitting on the end and peering over the room through huge shell-rimmed glasses, you instinctively turn back to Armstrong and Rogers as the men fitted by training and disposition to "investigate the business of insurance as conducted in the State of New York."

Down in front of the committee platform is the busiest group of folks in the whole company. Pacing around the few square feet of clear space directly in the centre is a tall, spare man. The first thing one notices about him is an aggressive reddish-brown beard, behind which show teeth that rival the famous Roosevelt collection in size, prominence, and regularity. A big, sharp-pointed nose and deep-set eyes that light up now and then with the gleam that shows the spirit of the fighter within, are the other features of prominence, and they go with the broad forehead to give the impression of a man of great power, a keen thinker, a man who knows the joy of battle, and enjoys thoroughly the consciousness that he is in the midst of the fighting. He talks with a nasal drawl that often crystallizes into a positive snarl when a witness has given an evasive answer, and a new question, more sharply pointed, is in the process of framing.

Yet this is a very different type of man from the one commonly conceived as the ideal cross-examiner. Samuel Untermyer comes much nearer to the measure of the latter. His habit is to bait a witness to the point of anger and then drag his victim into a mass of confused and perhaps conflicting statements until reduced to the point of confession. Charles E. Hughes does none of this. He allows the witness to tell his own story—within certain limitations—and then proceeds to weigh one by one the several assertions in the balance of known facts and obvious probabilities. Charles E. Hughes never lays himself open to the charge of unfairness, and he is just as good friends with the lawyers on the other side as with his own colleagues. Usually also he is fraternizing with his witness between questions, making sure that there is no misunderstanding of the theory upon which his examination is based, careful to see to it that the man on the stand appreciates, however unwillingly, the pertinence and importance of the facts that are to be elicited. So he remarks in kindly explanation, rather than by way of taunt:

"There is nothing confidentiel about the insurance business now."

Some people say that the committee's counsel isn't brutal enough. They recall the crucifixion of Charles M. Schwab in the United States Shipbuilding Company case; they remember Max Pem sitting back at the counsel table making a picture of a spider in his web as the story of the Bethlehem mortgage conspiracy was drawn from D. Leroy Dresser, the spider's victim; they conjure up a vision of W. D. Guthrie driven to frequent use of his green bottle of smelling salts, and in the midst of everything a man who had them all by the ears, a little man who prodded them until they were all mad to the boiling point, so mad that they had to tell the rape of the poor old shipbuilding trust in spite of themselves. That was Untermyer. With Hughes it is different. If a witness evades him he is willing to go around the irresponsive answer with infinite patience and to elicit a whole lot of collateral facts, taking a keen delight all the time in knowing that when they are brought out a like reply to the original question will look too ridiculous to be made. Perhaps the second reply is evasive, too. In that case the Armstrong committee's counsel will start again, or perhaps even let the witness leave the stand in temporary triumph until other witnesses have been called and other collateral facts elicited that make anything but a straightforward answer impossible.

It was this way when George W. Perkins of the Morgan firm and the New York Life Insurance Company finally told about the $48,000 check that represented the contribution of New York Life policy holders' money to the last Republican campaign. Treasurer Randolph, who had drawn the check in favor of J. P. Morgan & Co., had been asked about it the day before, when it appeared as an unexplained debit item in the mysterious "Hanover Bank Office Account" that Mr. Hughes had brought to light. But Treasurer Randolph didn't really know anything about it. It was drawn by executive order of President McCall, and nobody ever questioned such executive orders.

Now, Mr. Hughes did not for a minute impugn the sincerity of Mr. Randolph in making this answer. He merely inquired how extensive the practice was of paying out large amounts of New York Life money on the executive order of the President, a matter that Mr. Randolph, as Treasurer, was perfectly familiar with. Incidentally Mr. Hughes found the trail of the "A. Hemilton checks," which are other matters of executive order, and he isn't through with that yet. But to return to the $48,000 check to Morgen & Co. Mr. Hughes said he wanted it, and also the account in the First National Bank against which it was drawn. The next morning he had George Perkins on the stand and asked what the entry in the account stood for. Mr. Perkins didn't know. He didn't attend to such bookkeeping details. Did Mr. Perkins have the check? No, Mr. Perkins did not understend that the check was wanted. Well, will Mr. Perkins heve the check produced at the afternoon session?

+ + +

So, when the afternoon session began, Mr. Hughes, who knew what the check wes for all the time, turned to Mr. Perkins on the stand end said: "I reed in evidence this check, dated Dec. 30, 1904, 'Pay to the order of J. P. Morgan & Co. $48,702.50,' (signed,) F. H. Shipman, Assistant Treasurer; E. B. Randolph, Treasurer."

"Whet wes that payment for?" Mr. Hughes demanded.

And then came the answer that has echoed the continent over:

"That was money paid to Mr. Cornelius N. Bliss on account of the Republican National Committee campaign fund of lest yeer."

This secret out, Mr. Hughes, beaming, went on to ask Mr. Perkins for the details of the payment and of similar payments in pest compaigns. Always he stood by his fundementel proposition that "there is nothing confidential about the insurance business now," and as a tale came out that has stirred the country as few politico-financial stories have stirred the country for years, Mr. Hughes and the witness proceeded in perfect apparent harmony, as if having mutual pleasure in the conversetion. Finally Mr. Hughes led Mr. Perkins up to the "A. Hamilton checks," given also on the executive order of President McCall, for the "acquisition of real estate," but cashed through the State National Bank of Albany and charged through the "Hanover Bank Office Account" into the "Home Office Annex Account," there to disappear in an item of $235,000 "sundries." Mr. Perkins really didn't known anything about them. Very well, did Mr. Perkins know whether they had the authorization of the Finance Committee? They had not. And was it customery for checks for $50,000 or $100,000 to be drawn on executive order without this authorization? Why, certainly. Very well—and Mr. Perkins was allowed to pass on to something else. But material had been obtained for a lot of interesting questions to be asked of President McCall when he came to the etand.

Meantime the disclosure had been received with varying emotions by the busy people in front of the platform. The reporters for the afternoon papers on the left of the committee and behind the witness stand had no time to emotionize over it at all. They were pushing out the copy. On the other side the morning men, planning to get the stenographic report of the proceedings, nudged each other in delight as they drank in the words, and then turned from the witness to the audience, looking for "color."

Nor was "color" wanting, for at that stage of the investigation the Trustees, Directors, officers, and employes of insurance companies who had been obliged to attend the hearings had not come to appreciate the force of Mr. Hughes's remark. George F. Baker, President of the First National Bank, and one of the best-known and most respected men in Wall Street, was in the back of the room, hanging over the rear rail with the standees. Intently he listened to the account of the political payments by the New York Life, and as Mr. Perkins rambled off into one of the "stump speeches" that have now made his testimony famous, there came across Mr. Baker's face a look half of wonder and half of disgust that such matters should be talked about on the witness stand in anything but the briefest monosyllables required to answer questions.

In the faces of the junior officers of the New York Life the look of disgust gave place to one of utter amazement that such sacred secrets should be pried into by any one. Secrets they were which always had been cloaked by that inscrutable mantle "The executive order of the President," and who was this mere counsel for a mere legislative committee that he should dare to pull the cloak aside and bare them to the world and the newspapers? To be sure, the New York Life was ready to have everything told about its business; but these things were of the "non-ledger asset" order, and that made it different. As for the rest of the audience, the officers of other insurance companies, their counsel—a distinguished company—and a multitude of clerks, it was quite apparent that a single question was in every mind. That was:

"Whet will he esk us when it is our turn to go on the stand?"

There has been a sort of cameraderie develop between the various insurance men during the hearings. The bond appears to be the common knowledge that all will have to go under fire in turn, and that the fire will not spare "non-ledger assets" and kindred subjects. This does not mean necessarily that the inquisition is feered as a thing that must always disclose secrets of evil odor, rather it is the beginning of the appreciation that Mr. Hughes spoke es one under authority when he seid:

"There is nothing confidential about the insurance business now."

Yet the process of realization is a slow one, for the indications are that many insurance secrets are also Wall Street secrets, and Wall Street secrets are deeply buried and bear no headstones announcing names and dates. Counsel Hughes in his unexceptionable way is helping the realization along with every witness by the very atmosphere that he diffuses as he prods through endless figures in numberless accounts, or turns to dig into Nyiics and syndicates with equal ardor. There is something infectious about the way he comes over to the teble where his associate counsel are sitting and says in a whisper that is almost audible, "Now I guess we ARE making progress."

It was this way at one hearing when the New York Life's joint accounts had been the subject under discussion. All the afternoon Mr. Hughes had been at work on them, going over and over the various points that he was interested in establishing until the voluble Mr. Perkins on the stand was ready to answer in bulk for the remeinder of the lot. Mr. Hughes was satisfied to let him, for the admission bore out his theory that these joint accounts were maintained in most instances for the resale of all the securities which had been purchased under them, et a profit if possible—In other words, as Mr. Hughes contended, they did not differ in their essential elements from a joint speculation on the part of the life insurance company end the broker in the transaction. Again he walked over to the counsel table, and said exultantly:

"Did you ever see anything work out better than that?"

But it must not seem that he is alone in running the investigation. With him are two men, James McKeen and Mathew Fleming, who by nature and circumstance are calculated to be of the utmost assistence. James McKeen most people in Wall Street know. A lawyer of the old school, well read, keen, able, a searching investigator whose ripe experience applies to the results of his delving a sane judgment. He is not the kind of men to go off on a tengent; he is just the sort of man for the enormous task of figuring out on a comperative basis the different methods of conducting the insurance business in thie country, and of applying the meritorioue features of one system to correct the defects of another. And this is what he is engaged in doing just now. It doesn't show during the sessions devoted to syndicates and joint accounts, nor yet during the more sensational passages at arms when political contributions are being talked about, but it is bound to tell in the long run, when it comes to be discussed whether the efforts mede by the great companies to enlarge their business and enlarge it again are et the expense of the policy holders. Of course an insurance investigation cennot all be sensational, however many individual sensations are sprung during its course, but it does not follow for a moment that the unsensational stuff, if poorer "copy," is any the less important to the questions at issue.

The junior associate counsel of the committee is Mathew Fielding, a Princeton man of the middle nineties, and he is engaged most of the time in digging up syndicates and things with Chief Counsel Hughes. This task in itself involves an enormous amount of work that does not show in the public hearings. Nobody knows but the lawyers in the battle whether a brilliant attack on a well-constructed intrenchment behind which some witness is standing defiant, or a rangy fight through a thicket of irresponsive answers is won by the wit of the moment or by hard study in the small hours of the night before. There is where a junior associate counsel can make himself useful, and incidentally be laying up a store of information as to the methods of his chief that will be of the utmost service in days to come.

Other lawyers, except the two on the committee, do not cut a very large figure at the sessions of the insurance inquiry. There is, to be sure, a notable array—Frenk Black for the Equitable, James M. Beck for the Mutual, Richard V. Lindabury for the Metropolitan, Paul D. Crevath of Thomas F. Ryan's counsel, and so on down the line, and et some future stage no doubt opportunity will be given to them to present such evidence as they may desire. But just at present counsel for the defense—if such they may be called—are at a discount and spend most of their time in looking wise and advising witnesses about to take the stend. That is because a legislative committee is one of the most unconventional bodies imaginable in the scope of its questioning, and objections that might be made the basis of many appeals and demurrers in the courts of law may just as well stay unmade if one cares to economize his breath.

This fact perhaps explains why Counsel Hughes and some of the members of the committee take such evident pleasure in enforcing the observance of the maxim, "There is nothing confidential about the insurance business now."

A case in point came in the course of George W. Perkins's explanation of the transaction whereby Mr. Perkins of the New York Life "sold" to Mr. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. $800,000 of the Navigation syndicate underwriting on Dec. 21, 1903, and bought it back on Jan. 2 following. Mr. Perkins had accounted for the "sale" to his own apparent satisfaction by saying thet it was to prevent the sacrifice of the underwriting at an unduly low price, and Senator Armstrong, when Mr. Hughes had finished with the witness, led him through a detailed description of the acts involved.

Then Assemblyman Rogers took up the thread and eventually got down to the question when the witness ceased being Mr. Perkins of the New York Life and began to be Mr. Perkins of J. P. Morgan & Co. Mr. Perkins's reply was that he was for the New York Life all the time, and this Mr. Rogers turned on him again by asking if such were the case, why he did not leave the Navigation syndicate underwriting on the hands of the Morgan firm when, according to his own testimony, he had actually "sold" it for cash at about 25 points in excess of its market value. It remained for Counsel Hughes at the next session to bring out that the New York Life had paid the Morgan firm 6 per cent. interest on the $800,000 purchase money for the two days that the sale was in effect.

The investigation is still young, and it is too early to prophesy, even if that occupation were legitimately within the range of newspaper reporting, of its ultimate results. But it is fair to bank on it that nobody will be allowed to get very far away from the proposition laid down by Counsel Hughes at the start, that "There is nothing confidential about the insurance business now."

The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst as a Mountain Climber

He Tells of His Vacation Experiences in the Alps---Americans Not Good Mountaineers---They Are Too Cocksure and Too Short-winded.

BRONZED and brimful of reminiscences of his mountain climbing days in Switzerland and Scotland, the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, reformer, pastor, and seasoned Alpinist, humorously declares that four months of wrestling with the giant Matterhorn, the stubborn Weisshorn, burly Ben Nevis, and some minor peaks of Europe have put him in perfect condition to assist vigorously in holding down the Manhattan lid this Winter. Severe as the training has been, he believes it will aid him materially in keeping the lid down on the anonymous Jack-in-the-box.

This is the sixteenth season, said the doctor, that he has spent among the peaks, and he volunteered that the weather and general conditions have never before been so favorable to the exhilarating sport of mountain scaling. Ideal weather, plenty of enthusiasts, and a dearth of serious accidents have made it a red letter season for Switzerland and its more daring visitors.

When shown the cable report of a young Englishman who, in the words of the report, ascended the Dome, 14,941 feet above the sea level, in one day, a feat declared never to have been performed before in less than fifty hours, Dr. Parkhurst put his tongue in his cheek. "Absurd, absurd," he repeated. "Why, I have climbed the Dome myself in some twelve hours, and I have no doubt but it can be done in less time than that. Besides, the Dome is not a very difficult nut to crack in mountain climbing. The Weisshorn is tenfold harder; is, indeed, the most obstinate peak of my acquaintance," he laughed.

"Would you mind reviewing some of your mountain climbing experiences, doctor?"

+ + +

"Ah!" as he settled himself complacently in his chair, "it would be hazardous to get me started on that topic—the peaks are my hobbies, you know. I never tire climbing or discussing them—noble fellows, every one, proud, stern, uncompromising, the very antithesis of Tammany and confusion. It fairly makes one homesick to think of the gray old Matterhorn over yonder, standing firmly for everything that is worthy in mountain ethics. A thousand sermons could be preached with him as the text," mused the doctor, before continuing: "I suppose most people have an idea that the Matterhorn is the summit of effort in mountain scaling, and it certainly is the most famous member of the great Swiss family. But for sheer expenditure of effort I found Ben Nevis, in Scotland, more difficult of ascent this Summer than the Matterhorn. Were there no alleged road up Ben Nevis it would be easy of ascent, but as the road was recommended and followed it was the most wearing experience of my Summer collection."

"But, the Matterhorn?"

"Well, to begin, if there is any cranny of Switzerland that can be termed the heart of the Alps it is the region about Zermatt—my habitat for a fortnight or more. There is no other place where one gains so deep a sense of Switzerland or such an appreciation of mountain grandeur, and cold, white, icy sublimity. Unfortunately the very penetralia of this splendor and aloofness are now being marred by a plethora of tourists. Since the advent of the new mountain railway and other modern conveniences and inconveniences, the whole character and complexion of the region has been undergoing a change, until your genuine Alpinist is shying around Switzerland altogether en route to the Himalayas.

"But for one of my age, the Alps still possess a few knotty problems in mountain climbing, and not the least among them is the old Matterhorn," he continued. "No one ascended it, you know, until 1865, when Whymper went up and poor Lord Francis Douglas went down to a fearful death 4,000 feet below. His body, which undoubtedly lodged in a glacier crevasse, is due in the valley—was, in fact, being diligently searched for when I started home. Geologists have figured out that that part of the glacier in which the body of Lord Douglas lodged should be within searching distance this year.

"But of the Matterhorn itself, unlike most mountains in its neighborhood, it carries on its upper slopes very little snow, because of its precipitant character. Briefly, it is a colossal, ragged, perpendicular rock, towering nearly 15,000 grim and sullen feet into the air. A gigantic defiance and challenge is what the Matterhorn is, about as sociable as a scholar in politics. Most Swiss mountains, you know, fairly spread themselves in gracious hospitality. The Matterhorn, on the contrary, cherishes a sort of mayoral dignity, a sense of imperialism, preferring not to have its aloofness cheapened by small contracts and intrusions. Do you read it aright—the fable?" with a chuckle.

"It was one August morning that we started from Zermatt, myself and two experienced guides," added the doctor presently. "Our first stop was at the Black Sea Hotel, 3,000 feet above Zermatt, where we remained till the latter part of the day. Our second stage was made between 3 and 5 P. M. from the Black Sea House to the Club-hut, 2,000 feet above. There we halted for rest and for refreshments to fortify ourselves for the zigzag journey toward the tantalizing summit. While the menu was Spartan in its simplicity, anything short of fried quartz and boiled gravel would have been relished under the circumstances.

"Well, we turned in about 7 P. M., three other parties having in the meantime joined us, stretching ourselves on a slightly inclined platform in such a way as to suggest six bodies awaiting identification in the Morgue. It was intensely cold and windy, and might easily have proved a morgue. However, shortly after midnight we were sufficiently alive to bestir ourselves, and found to our delight that the sky was almost cloudless, although there had been a frugal rainfall in the evening. The stars pointed like diamonds through the thin, crisp air, the effect being heightened by a burning track of August meteors in the adjacent heavens. Actually the whole sky appeared to be a blaze of stars, and their pale light shed a fairylike veil over the far regions at the foot of the mountain. Not a sound disturbed the profound tranquillity of the scene, except the distant roar of streams rushing from the high plateau of the St. Theodule glacier and losing themselves in the mazes of the Gorner glacier.

"The wind increased so in velocity that our guides advised a delay, fearing that it would be impossible to live at the top, until the middle of the day. Over 2,000 feet of rock, slightly flecked with snow and ice, we mounted after leaving the hut, one guide in advance, myself in the middle, and another guide in the rear—the three of us being securely roped together. Incidentally I might add that there is comparatively little danger in mountain climbing if the tourist follows the orders of his or her guide explicitly. Americans do not make good mountain climbers, because the average American, who has done a bit of roving around the moraines and lower slopes, thinks he knows it all.

"But to resume, in the course of this stage we gloried in a wonderful sunrise. Words cannot describe it. We were up among the immense, white, silent places of the earth. There was nothing tame, cheap, or trivial, nothing reminiscent of political plunder and pelf—it was all magnificent, a gallery in which the Creator had hung nothing but masterpieces.

"Sheltered near what is known as the old hut, we rested and lunched preparatory to negotiating the final 2,000 feet to the summit. And there wasn't much play up there. For a considerable part of the distance ropes and chains were stretched over the sheer declivity of the cliffs, to afford the climber points of attachment, and unless human beings again develop claws and caudal appendages it is difficult to fancy how one can climb anything more dangerous than such spots. Of course, the Aiguille de Grépon and the Weisshorn are more systematically perilous, as is Mont Blanc, where one of my guides was lost four years ago, but it is enough like being a fly to round some few corners of the Matterhorn.

The Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst in Mountain Climbing Attire.

"All the more danger attaches to it because of its very popularity among inexperienced climbers. Nobody has ever been killed, for instance, on the Aiguille de Grépon, for the simple reason that only the most adroit mountaineers dare attempt it, and then only after careful preparation and a due appreciation of what they are undertaking.

+ + +

"But, as we struck upward that day toward the beckoning peak of the old Matterhorn, it seemed as though the ropes were suspended perpendicularly out of the sky. It was there that Lord Douglas and his companions slipped and fell to death. Passing the tragic spot as hurriedly as possible, and creeping on all fours along the arrete, we were soon standing at the very apex of the Matterhorn.

+ + +

"Was it worth the struggle and risk? I am often asked that, and it is trite to reply in the affirmative. The sense of exhilaration is almost overpowering.

"For to be at the top of the Matterhorn is to be all over Switzerland at once, so it is useless to attempt a worthy description of the panorama. Away off to the south, our party being above the clouds, extended a white sea of fleece over what appeared to be the whole of Italy. It was, of course, the upper side of the clouds, and it resembled in smoothness a stretch of ocean very gently ruffled by a light wind. France, Germany, and Austria also lay below. To claim, as do some of our artist friends, that art is an improvement on nature is pitiable folly and arrant blasphemy from the viewpoint of the Matterhorn peak."

"And you find that Americans do not excel in mountain climbing?" was ventured.

"No," he replied, "and for the reason stated—they are too cocksure of themselves to act upon the advice of the guides. Never contradict or disobey a guide is my decalogue of mountaineering."

Speaking of diffsrent feats that had come under his observation or to his attention, Dr. Parkhurst mentioned a Londoner, Ryan by name, who, though barely of age, has for several seasons been a particularly daring mountain acrobat. Accompanied by the guide Lockmatter of Zermatt, young Ryan started a few weeks ago from Chamounix and by a new route ascended the Aiguille Verte, 13,540 feet up, a peak considered by many as the most difficult and dangerous in the Mont Blanc region.

In the same week he climber the aforementioned Aiguille de Grépon and also the Charmoz and Blaitiere, all upward of 11,000 feet, and in each case he chose a pioneer route.

But of the daring feats of recent performance that came to the attention of the distinguished divine he is disposed to give the palm to Georgs D. Abraham, a member of the English and also the Swiss and German Alpine Clubs. This intrepid adventurer recounted his experiences on the Aiguille de Grépon to a group at the hotel in Zermatt where Dr. Parkhurst was staying. Abraham and his guide were the first human beings to straddle the Grépon pinnacle. Given second-handed, the thrilling recital is as follows:

Abraham and his guide, Simond, and a porter named Armand, gained the Nantillon glacier, which descends from the base of the towering peak, without mishap, and gradually mounted until they reached an island of overhanging rock jutting from the glacier. It was impossible tu reach the island directly because of the icy pinnacles looming weirdly above them. So it was only by chopping a circuitous staircase in the ice that the landing could be reached. Thence the huge bastion of the North Peak looked absolutely impossible, declared the raconteur, to direct assault, but across the couloir to the right an almost vertical crack, some seventy feet high, led upward. Several sections of this were actually more than perpendicular where they overhung the valley 5,000 feet below.

To make the matter more difficult the rocks were coated with particles of ice, which necessitated continual chopping and scraping to secure finger and foot holds.

Reaching a ledge overhanging what is known as the Great Gap it was found, to the dismay of the climbers, that it terminated abruptly over a ridge several hundred feet deep. By tying one end of their 200 feet of rope to an immense bolder the guide lowered his two companions down into the ridge. Thence, by a roundabout course, the ascent was continued via a series of narrow chimneys, where the handholds were just sufficient to make one feel the desperate nature of the position. Scaling the last of these chimneys, the raconteur and his guide were soon standing on the extreme peak, where no human being had ever been before. A large stone, being dislodged by one of the party, started an avalanche of stone and débris thundering down the slopes, to the acute discomfiture of another party of mountaineers crossing a glacier 3,000 feet below. It was possible to hear their warning cries wafted faintly upward to the airy perch.

As the hardy mountaineer told the story in the storm-whipped hostelry on the following day he expressed a paradoxical longing for the peace and calm of the towering peaks.

Besides partially scaling the Aiguille, Dr. Parkhurst has done the Weisshorn, in the Riffel Alps, the Gorner Grat, Monte Rosa, the Gramont Peak, and the Rothorn. By scaling the peak of Monte Rosa he was 15,200 feet above the sea, or 500 feet above the Matterhorn, and the descent was accomplished part of the way by tobogganing at the rats of thirty miles an hour, with shoes for runners and alpenstocks for rudders.

+ + +

"Some of the crevices," said the doctor, "we jumped and others we avoided by a series of detours, stopping occasionally to notch icy staircases of descent. This brought us into close touch with the freezing heart of the glacier, and gave one an indescribable sense of desolation, in vivid contrast to the hospitable little chalet at Ferfecle, which we reached eleven hours after leaving the hut on the Staffel Alp."

One great obstacle in the way of Americans as mountaineers, concluded Dr. Parkhurst, is their general inability to cope with atmospheric conditions. The strain and stress of life in New York has a tendency, in his experience and in the opinion of the Swiss guides, to so weaken the heart that serious complications frequently arise when an American seeks the great white silences on the roof of Europe.

COLLEGE TOWN REVISITED AFTER TWO DECADES

Here's to Oughty-nine, drink her down, drink her down.

Down, down, down.

THE song comes with the sweep and vigor of challenge to battle from out the darkness of a wide avenue where the fine trees shade the sidewalk from the electric lights, throwing their rays where they should be, into the roadway.

Oh, we'll whoop her up for Oughty-nine,
We'll whoop her up again,
We'll whoop her up for Oughty-nine,
A mighty set of men.

Cries of "Fresh" and of the sound of men coming together in conflict. Freshmen and sophomores have met on the way to dinner and are exchanging compliments in the good old-fashioned way. The songs are just as they were when the visitor used to sing them years ago as a freshman, and sang at the top of his lungs, the only difference being that his class made the numerals '89 instead of '09.

This was but a preliminary warning to the visitor on an errand to the dear old college town that things were not as they had been in the old days. With a natural sympathy for the fellows whose songs of battle were like those he used to sing, he went to the scene of strife to find that it had been only a skirmish, a half dozen sophomores having charged the defiant freshmen and retreated for reinforcements. The smallest man among the freshmen lifted up his voice with a cry for "Three cheers for Oughty-nine!" and the visitor joined in. The time was changed, the "Hurrahs!" being closer together, so that there was an extra number at the end of the cheer, one of twenty years ago. The freshmen looked wonderingly.

"But that is the way we used to cheer," said the stranger back again in familiar scenes. A gust of wind let the electric light play on his face, so that the spokesman could not help seeing that the freshman must be, according to his lights, a veritable Rip Van Winkle.

"You used to cheer for what class?" he asked.

The freshmen gave a mighty cheer for '89 and sang again the songs of battle, substituting for '09 the old numerals '89. There was a general shaking of hands and the stranger moved down the street, where of the shops he remembered one. The idea that he was not just as young as he had been twenty years ago was uppermost, when it occurred to him that the majority of the young men must have been born since he was a freshman. A group of young fellows crowded about him in a threatening way, and he was up against the backbone and sinew of the class of '08. Surely, he thought, things had changed. People other than freshmen could in his day walk the street with an air of superiority without being held up.

The smallest man in the lot was first to see the mistake. Are small men quicker of perception or more impudent than their bigger brothers? "He's gray over the cars," said the little man. "We've made a mistake. I beg your pardon, Sir."

Feeling that he must have reached the age of Methuselah, the visitor would have departed in peace, eager to wander about under the elms alone and forgotten, an aged man of thirty-eight years. The crowd, however, quick to be decent to an old "grad," insisted on the number of his class, and when he told them there were complimentary cheers from oughty-eight to '89, and even these seemed strange because in the old days '88 did not cheer '89. He wandered on alone into the campus for another shock. Just off the entrance from the road where the British had retreated after being worsted by the Colonials stands an elm of majestic height and beauty. Some one had desecrated it with a paper notice attached to the tree by tacks.

He remembered how, when he was a freshman, notices were similarly tacked to the trunk of a tree before the Old Chapel was even then dead. It had withered and died like a punctured tire and was only fit to be a relic and a bulletin board. He wanted to protest loudly when he remembered an address to the clock on one of the buildings delivered at a late hour under inspiring circumstances, which had caused his suspension for a few weeks. Under the new conditions he might be arrested and not suspended. The visitor moved along headed for his old room in one of the first of the college buildings. The campus seemed strange. There were new and magnificent buildings here, there, and everywhere.

Bewildered, like a country boy for the first time on the way to the city, who thought his father was driving into a house when he headed for a covered bridge, he stopped for a second to jump aside from the pathway because there were two great lights bearing down upon him right along the pathway and the honk-honk of a "devil machine." When he was in college men occasionally rode about the campus on high-wheeled bicycles. The safety kind was not then in vogue. There were two of the modern terrors panting in front of the doorway where he used to make his entrances and his exits.

He was not such an awfully old fellow that he could not envy the boys who could make a trip to a town some miles away and back without causing suspicion. In the old days it meant a carriage ride or a trip on the railroad. The occupants of the old room were out.

Then he went to the basement place of the college guardians of the peace, where he had been wont to go when he had lost his keys. There he found a man in brilliant new uniform who let him into the old room. The stove was gone where he used to cook coffee late at night before examinations when his most needed it. Steam heat had bested the stove, once a consolation and a delight, with its coals that would picture the face of his sweetheart. He called to mind the kindly senior who had come to him with a part of the feast from another room, because he was a friend of a brother who did not feel it proper to invite an under classman to his treat.

There were brilliant electric lights. True, he had been modern enough twenty years ago to have a gaslight, but he studied (sometimes) under a student lamp. There was not one in the room, and evidently the modern student must, in making up his expense accounts, charge barrels of gasoline instead of oil in trying to get funds enough from home to meet his indebtedness to the town tradesmen. The panting automobiles below made this a reasonable conjecture.

The visitor would not have known his old home if it had not been for the heavy stone walls that were as they had been. The worst of it was that the venerated oak chair was missing. He remembered the pride with which he had cut his nickname in the broad rest for books, with his class numerals under the mysterious designations by which other classes had called their comrades. The watchman in uniform closed the door behind the visitor. In the old days the watchman was a sleuth, who could be recognized at a hundred yards by any student up to mischief.

The veteran collegian with a sprinkle of gray over his ears thought of the old townspeople and wandered back into the town. There was the old jeweler, still cheerful, at his trade, who called him by name at first sight; the merchant who had trusted him on the strength of the amount of oil he used in his midnight studies; but best of all was the old druggist, who would not let him part without showing to him a worn-out pocketbook which he said had been to him a lucky possession.

The visitor had forgotten all about the pocketbook. It proved to be one he had borrowed from the druggist to hold a large sum of money to be wagered in a football contest that ended in the surprising defeat of his college. The visitor remembered then. He had handed it back on his return, saying that it was a hoodoo. Still legible in the inside were the names of the men who had contributed to the pocket money of a rival institution. Most of them are those of men who have made their mark. A few are dead.

As the visitor started for the station he walked through the campus. On the way he dropped into a novel place where drinks are sold in moderation, and there saw the wiles of the devil. The saloon had bought up the scarred rubbish of old college rooms, sold to make way for modern methods, and among them, fastened to the wall, was the arm of the old chair with its nickname class designations.

As the train sped back to New York he could not sleep because every now and then he would wake up wondering whether it might be that he was twenty years younger or twenty years older, and was as confused as to whether the "Here's to drink down" song for '08 or '09.

Passages in "Man and Superman" that Provoke Laughter or Invite Criticism

OCTAVIUS—This is not fair, Jack. She is an orphan. And you ought to stand by her.

TANNER—Stand by her? What danger is she in? She has the law on her side; she has popular sentiment on her side; she has plenty of money and no conscience. All she wants with me is to load up all her moral responsibilities on me, and do as she likes at the expense of my character. I can't control her; and she can compromise me as much as she likes. I might as well be her husband.

+ + +

OCTAVIUS—Oh, Jack, you talk of saving me from my highest happiness.

TANNER—Yes, a lifetime of happiness. If it were only the first half hour's happiness, Tavy, I would buy it for you with my last penny. But a lifetime of happiness! No man alive could bear it; it would be hell on earth.

+ + +

RAMSDEN (very deliberately)—Mr. Tanner, you are the most impudent person I have ever met.

TANNER (seriously)—I know it, Ramsden. Yet even I cannot wholly conquer shame. We live in an atmosphere of shame. We are ashamed of everything that is real about us; ashamed of ourselves, of our relatives, of our incomes, of our accents, of our opinions, of our experience, just as we are ashamed of our naked skins. Good Lord, my dear Ramsden, we are ashamed to walk, ashamed to ride in an omnibus, ashamed to hire a hansom instead of keeping a carriage, ashamed of keeping one horse instead of two and a groom-gardener instead of a coachman and footman. The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is. Why, you're ashamed to buy my book, ashamed to read it; the only thing you're not ashamed of is to judge me for it without having read it; and even that only means that you're ashamed to have heterodox opinions.

+ + +

TANNER—Yes, of her purpose; and that purpose is neither her happiness nor yours, but Nature's. Vitality in a woman is a blind fury of creation. She sacrifices herself to it; do you think she will hesitate to sacrifice you?

OCTAVIUS—Why, it is just because she is self-sacrificing that she will not sacrifice those she loves.

TANNER—That is the profoundest of mistakes, Tavy. It is the self-sacrificing women that sacrifice others most recklessly. Because they are unselfish, they are kind in little things. Because they have a purpose which is not their own purpose, but that of the whole universe, a man is nothing to them but an instrument of that purpose.

+ + +

TANNER—The true artist will let his wife starve, his children go barefoot, his mother drudge for his living at 70, sooner than work at anything but his art. To women he is half vivisector, half vampire. He gets into intimate relations with them to study them, to strip the mask of convention from them, to surprise their inmost secrets, knowing that they have the power to rouse his deepest creative energies, to rescue him from his cold reason, to make him see visions and dream dreams, to inspire him, as he calls it. He persuades women that they may do this for their own purpose while he really means them to do it for his. He steals the mother's milk and blackens it to make printer's ink to scoff at her and glorify ideal women with. He pretends to spare her the pangs of childbearing so that he may have for himself the tenderness and fostering that belong of right to her children. Since marriage began, the great artist has been known as a bad husband. But he is worse: he is a child robber, a bloodsucker, a hypocrite and a cheat. Perish the race and wither a thousand women if only the sacrifice of them enable him to act Hamlet better, to paint a finer picture, to write a deeper poem, a greater play, a profounder philosophy! For mark you, Tavy, the artist's work is to show us ourselves as we really are. Our minds are nothing but this knowledge of ourselves; and he who adds a jot to such knowledge creates new mind as surely as any woman creates new men. In the rage of that creation he is as ruthless as the woman, as dangerous to her as she to him, and as horribly fascinating. Of all human struggles there is none so treacherous and remorseless as the struggle between the artist man and the mother woman. Which shall use up the other? that is the issue between them. And it is all the deadlier because, in your romanticist cant, they love one another.

+ + +

OCTAVIUS—But who is the man? He can make reparation by marrying her; and he shall, or he shall answer for it to me.

RAMSDEN—He shall, Octavius. There you speak like a man.

TANNER—Then you don't think him a scoundrel, after all?

OCTAVIUS—Not a scoundrel! He is a heartless scoundrel.

RAMSDEN—A damned scoundrel. I beg your pardon, Annie; but I can say no less.

George Bernard Shaw.

TANNER—So we are to marry your sister to a damned scoundrel by way of reforming her character! On my soul, I think you are all mad.

+ + +

OCTAVIUS—I cannot write without inspiration. And nobody can give me that except Ann.

TANNER—Well, hadn't you better get it from her at a safe distance? Petrarch didn't see half as much of Laura, nor Dante of Beatrice, as you see of Ann now; and yet they wrote first-rate poetry—at least so I'm told. They never exposed their idolatry to the test of domestic familiarity; and it lasted them to their graves. Marry Ann, and at the end of a week you will find no more inspiration in her than in a plate of muffins.

OCTAVIUS—You think I shall tire of her!

TANNER—Not at all: you don't get tired of muffins. But you don't find inspiration in them; and you won't in her when she ceases to be a poet's dream and becomes a solid eleven-stone wife. You'll be forced to dream about somebody else; and then there will be a row.

OCTAVIUS—Oh, that reminds me. I have a note for you from Rhoda. [He gives Tanner a note.]

+ + +

TANNER—I rather think Rhoda is heading for a row with Ann. As a rule there is only one person an English girl hates more than she hates her mother, and that's her eldest sister. But Rhoda positively prefers her mother to Ann.

ANN—I love my mother, Jack.

TANNER (working himself up into a sociological rage)—Is that any reason why you are not to call your soul your own? Oh, I protest against this vile abjection of youth to age! Look at fashionable society as you know it. What does it pretend to be? An exquisite dance of nymphs. What is it? A horrible procession of wretched girls, each in the claws of a cynical, cunning, avaricious, disillusioned, ignorantly experienced, foul-minded old woman whom she calls mother, and whose duty it is to corrupt her mind and sell her to the highest bidder. Why do these unhappy slaves marry anybody, however old and vile, sooner than not marry at all? Because marriage is their only means of escape from these decrepit fiends who hide their selfish ambitions, their jealous hatreds of the young rivals who have supplanted them, under the mask of maternal duty and family affection. Such things are abominable: the voice of nature proclaims for the daughter a father's care and for the son a mother's. The law for father and son and mother and daughter is not the law of love; it is the law of revolution, of emancipation, of final supersession of the old and worn-out by the young and capable. I tell you, the first duty of manhood and womanhood is a Declaration of Independence: the man who pleads his father's authority is no man; the woman who pleads her mother's authority is unfit to bear citizens to a free people.

HECTOR—We think in America that a woman's moral number is higher than a man's, and that the purer nature of a woman lifts a man right out of himself, and makes him better than he was.

OCTAVIUS (with conviction)—So it does.

TANNER—No wonder American women prefer to live in Europe! It's more comfortable than standing all their lives on an altar to be worshipped.

VIOLET (very civilly)—I am so sorry, Mr. Malone, if that man has been rude to you. But what can we do? He's our chauffeur.

MALONE—Your what?

+ + +

VIOLET—The driver of our automobile. He can drive a motor car at seventy miles an hour, and mend it when it breaks down. We are dependent on our motor cars; and our motor cars are dependent on him; so of course we are dependent on him.

MALONE—I've noticed, Madam, that every thousand dollars an Englishman gets seems to add ons to the number of people he's dependent on.

+ + +

MRS. WHITEFIELD (slyly)—She'd suit you better than Tavy. She'd meet her match in you, Jack. I'd like to see her meet her match.

TANNER—No man is a match for a woman, except with a poker and a pair of hobnailed boots. Not always even then. Anyhow, I can't take the poker to her. I should be a mere slave.

+ + +

TANNER—I have a frightful feeling that I shall let myself be married because it is the world's will that you should have a husband.

ANN—I dare say I shall some day.

+ + +

TANNER—But why me—me of all men? Marriage is to me apostasy, profanation of the sanctuary of my soul, violation of my manhood, sale of my birthright, shameful surrender, ignominious capitulation, acceptance of defeat. I shall decay like a thing that has served its purpose and is done with; I shall change from a man with a future to a man with a past; I shall see in the greasy eyes of all the other husbands their relief at the arrival of a new prisoner to share their ignominy. The young men will scorn me as one who has sold out: to the young women I, who have always been an enigma and a possibility, shall be merely somebody else's property—and damaged goods at that: a second-hand man at best.

Wiles and Ways of the Counterfeiter

One "Queer" Dollar Afloat for Every $100,000 of Genuine Paper Money and Three Dollars for Every $100,000 of Genuine Coin---Fascinations and Difficulties of the Crime.

WHEN Uncle Sam calls in a new issue of gold or silver certificates, as was the recent case of the Treasury Department calling in an entire new issue of hundred-dollar silver certificates, he pays a silent tribute to the wiles and ways of the counterfeiter. It amounts to an occasional confession on his part that the counterfeiter is nearly as clever as himself, and that it is almost impossible to mint or print a coin or certificate that cannot be copied well enough to insure of extensive circulation before detection. For each $100,000 of genuine paper money in circulation there is one counterfeit dollar, and for each $100,000 in coin there is approximately $3 playing hide-and-seek with us, says United States Treasury Counterfeit Detector John Holler, the most expert member of his profession in this country.

His offices on Bowling Green contain probably the best collection of bogus bank notes possessed by any single individual living. Prior to 1891 there were several extensive collections, but Uncle Sam stepped in then and made it illegal for any one to have counterfeit money on hand without permission of the Secretary of the Treasury. His complete aggregation of notes represents nearly $20,000, but he is allowed to keep only $900 worth here, the rest being deposited in the Treasury Department at Washington. Among other curios in his collection is a new counterfeit $100 gold certificate, which made its appearance at the Gravesend race track about a year ago.

On that occasion a considerable number of hundred-dollar counterfeit certificates had turned up in the metropolitan banks. They were fairly well executed, but there were enough discrepancies to make them distinguishable to keen observers. As many of these notes are no doubt wandering about the country, a description of them will be interesting. According to Mr. Holler, they bear the numbers C424-363 and C324369, and doubtless other numbers. The color of these numbers is good, but not the clear ultramarine blue of the genuine. The lathework surrounding the denomination 100 in the northeast corner of the note is flat, broken, and slightly blurred. The lettering is excellent, except the imprint under the signatures of Register J. W. Lyons and Treasurer Ellis H. Roberts, which is poor. The hue of the word "Gold" on the face of the note is faulty, and the color of the back, instead of the bronze yellow of the genuine, is a pale salmon shade. The fibre of the bogus paper is a clever imitation in pen-and-ink scratches, the absence of the silk fibre being noticeable when the note is held up to the light.

Inquiry developed that several confederates had victimized the Gravesend bookmakers on the Saturday preceding the discovery, the bogus notes having been passed in wagers of $50 each, the bookmakers handing out $50 in good money as change each time.

Of course, the counterfeits were mostly distributed among bettors, who in turn innocently passed them on at Gravesend, Coney Island, and Brighton and Manhattan Beaches, as well as in New York. The discovery being made on a Monday, Robert A. Pinkerton sent for Mr. Holler, who at once picked out the counterfeits from a number of genuine notes. Three weeks later the Secret Service arrested Marcus Crahan and a confederate at the Delmar track, in St. Louis, and confiscated seventy-one hundred-dollar bills found on Crahan's person and in his trunk.

Chief Wilkie obtained a confession from Craban to the effect that he had made and had passed the Gravesend counterfeits, besides several counterfeit fifty and one-thousand-dollar bills. He divulged the hiding place of 150 bogus one-hundred-dollar bills chucked in a satchel at the Union Station in St. Louis. Exactly one month from the day the bogus notes appeared at Gravesend, Crahan began serving a fifteen-year term in the Federal prison at Atlanta.

Aged about 35, he had no criminal record, and had lived for many years in Syracuse and Providence. At one time he was employed by a Providence daily paper, and had subsequently prospered in business for himself.

It would appear that these notes, as well as the even more familiar one-hundred-dollar silver certificates, were accepted without hesitation when presented. No one questioned them until a few of them were deposited in a New York bank, where their peculiar coloring, contrasted with genuine notes, attracted attention. In one of these notes in the Holler archives, the wonderful workmanship, the quality of the paper, and the fac simile threading give the bill a genuine appearance that is startling.

Speaking of this clever deception, Mr. Holler said it was often astonishing how queer a note may look and still be genuine. For example, he continued, a note that inadvertently goes to the cleaner in a coat or a vest and is given a chemical bath often acquires peculiarities that might deceive the average person into thinking it "queer" money. On the other hand, it is quite as astonishing how good a bad bill may appear.

But it must be a wonderful counterfeit, indeed, that deceives an expert bank teller, whose eye and touch are keenly and accurately sensitized in the detection of "queer" money. As soon as a counterfeit is discovered it is turned over to the local authorities or the Secret Service, who in turn wire a complete detailed description to Washington and forward the specimen by special delivery. Such information is circularized and furnished to every branch of the Secret Service and also to Mr. Holler, who embodies it, in his monthly report, which reaches nearly every cashier and teller in the country.

As a rule, vouchsafed the expert, a faulty picture reveals a counterfeit oftener than any other feature of one. Asked to explain why this is so, Mr. Holler replied that in the first place your counterfeiter engages as few confederates as possible for obvious reasons. The so-called "shovers" rarely know who is making the money that they so blithely pass or where it is made. But the makers are wholly at the mercy of one another—and hence are few in number. Rarely is there more than one engraver in a gang, and it has been demonstrated that a letter engraver cannot do perfect portraiture. Neither can the portrait engraver do perfect line work. Each excels in his own branch. And, as there is about ten times as much line as portrait work in a counterfeit note, the line engraver is almost invariably forced to do the portraiture as well.

Our Government engravers, he continued, are the best in the country, and until an expert portrait man collaborates with an expert letter and number man the way of the counterfeiter is pretty sure to be short and toward prison.

Suppose a person should be ignorant of possessing a counterfeit note and should innocently pass it, and be caught; what would be the consequences? was asked the expert. He replied that an innocent person had never even been seriously inconvenienced, much less convicted, so far as was known to him.

Becoming reminiscent, he recited the case of a well-to-do Grand Street merchant in this city who recently permitted his cupidity to overweigh his honesty. A $5 counterfeit note, which his cashier had deposited innocently, was returned to the aforesaid merchant stamped "counterfeit." Instead of debiting himself with the loss, the merchant tore the note along the tell-tale stamping and pasted it together with a slip of paper which covered the ominous word. Next the bill was put in a pay envelope and the recipient was subsequently arrested charged with attempting to pass counterfeit money. It so happened that the receiving teller who had stamped the note counterfeit and returned it to the merchant heard of the case, with the result that the merchant only escaped prison by paying liberally for assistance in influential quarters.

Returning to the portraiture feature. The main defect in the $100 counterfeit certificates is the portrait of James Monroe. In the genuine note the cheek bones of the fifth President were pronounced. In the counterfeit the left cheek bone is not visible at all, while the other is not as distinct as in the genuine note. Otherwise the bill was remarkably free of flaws. To repeat, this entire issue was called in owing to the extraordinary fidelity of the counterfeit to the genuine note.

Perhaps the most interesting feature of this note is that it illustrates better than any other recent counterfeits the steady progress made by counterfeiters in imitating the paper used by the Government in making certificates and notes. For years the chief stumbling block in the way of the counterfeiter was an inability successfully to imitate the fibre paper, the geometrical lathe work, and the paper known as the Crane patent, with the threads running lengthwise.

First in chronological order was the mastering of the lathe work, but it is only recently that counterfeiters have succeeded in securing paper that passes for the genuine. Pen scratches have given way to the genuine thread.

The one-hundred-dollar silver certificates as well as some five-hundreds and one-thousands, two of the most dangerous counterfeits circulating in this country, have the fibre thread. The engraving of the five-hundred-dollar counterfeits is nearly equal to the genuine notes, and the lathe work is excellent, as is the portrait of J. Q. Adams, with the exception of an indistinct ear lobe. In the counterfeit, however, the coat button nearest the lapel is almost square, while in the genuine it is round. The parallel ruling is flawless, as are the signatures of John Allison, Register, and F. E. Spinner, Treasurer.

Mr. Holler warns bankers to receive the above notes with great care, as it is only by comparing one of them with the genuine that even the best experts can detect the fraud. As nearly all of this issue has been retired, very few genuine notes are in circulation. As for the bogus thousand-dollar notes, it is pointed out that a mistake, copied by the counterfeiter, was made in dating the notes March 10, 1862, instead of 1863, an error which was corrected in a subsequent issue of the genuine. On the face of the counterfeit the corner and border lathe work is much inferior to the genuine, and the words, "Act of March 3, 1863," are much coarser. As with the five-hundred-dollar notes, very few genuine notes of this denomination and issue are in circulation.

With the exception of William E. Brockway, the noted octogenarian forger, who was arrested the other day in Brooklyn apparently for no reason other than to afford an up-to-date photograph of him, one of the cleverest members of this get-rich-quick profession was Emanuel Ninger, the Jim the Penman of the civil service records.

As a draughtsman, prior to setting pen and foot in the shadowy path, Ninger made a meagre $15 a week. But one evening he began idly experimenting and succeeded, to his surprise, in making a wonderfully deceptive banknote. Less than three evenings of work had given him $20—and the temptation was too strong. No greater ability was required to imitate fifty and hundred dollar notes, and ere long this Lucifer of counterfeiters had fallen into an income of several hundred dollars a month. Ninger always worked alone in the seclusion of his New Jersey home, at Flagtown, exchanging the bogus notes on weekly visits to this city.

So remarkably deceptive were his creations that he plied his dishonest craft for years with such profit and success that, when overtaken by disaster, he had not only salted away a comfortable fortune, but possessed a valuable farm. And the price he paid—seven years of penal servitude—was small enough when the material welfare of his family is considered.

His $10, $20, $50, and $100 notes, some of which are believed to be circulating to-day, are in many respects the most interesting counterfeits ever let loose over this country. Study the complete set of them in the Holler collection, and, even though a novice in such matters, you will be able to detect the fraud as soon as one of them is compared with a genuine note. Only to the casual and unsuspicious observer could the Ninger counterfeits pass as genuine.

+ + +

While the counterfeits already described are all of comparatively recent construction and launching, many older ones are fully equal to them in the matter of workmanship, but have been done on inferior paper. In the experience of Mr. Holler, no finer piece of engraving was ever turned out than the $100 National bank notes produced by Brockway and one Charles Smith some years ago. There were fewer flaws in it than in probably any other counterfeit ever detected in this country. One of the bills in the Holler collection is well preserved and was scarcely distinguishable from the genuine when they were closely compared, except in the quality of paper used.

Apropos of the recent arrest of Brockway, though on no specific charge, it is of timely interest to review the history of his magnum opus. At the time the genuine note was issued the American Bank Note Company of this city was under contract with the Treasury Department.

Charles Smith was the star engraver of the company, and, as such, had made the plate from which the bona-fide century note was printed. Smith was an honest and industrious, as well as a notably clever, engraver, who lived in Brooklyn with his family. One of his neighbors was a Capt. Spencer, reported to be a seafaring man.

This Spencer was none other than Brockway, who had moved into the neighborhood with the deliberate intention of corrupting the engraver. He succeeded. Smith was soon busying himself with a bogus plate. He naturally made as good a one for Brockway as he had made for Uncle Sam, and when the notes were struck off there was little trouble in passing them. Brockway was suspected, but the Secret Service knew that he had not made the plate.

+ + +

Wily as Brockway was, the Secret Service men were wilier, and they manoeuvred so adroitly that Brockway led them to Smith, who was at once recognized as the chief engraver of the American Bank Note Company. In a raid on his house the counterfeiting paraphernalia were found, and the confederates were arrested. Both served protracted terms.

Commenting on the Smith-Brockway bill, the expert made the remarkable criticism that it was superior to the note Smith made for the Government. Its only faults, as an imitation, are these: In the genuine bill water can be seen falling from both sides of the oar which the man in the rowboat is using. In the counterfeit the water falls from one side only. In the genuine note the wing of the Angel of Victory barely tips the shading of the 0 in 100, while in the counterfeit it touches the rim.

Compared with the quantity and quality of forging done a generation or more ago, there is very little raising of banknotes nowadays. In the genesis of counterfeiting it was a favored transgression—forgery—and a number of interesting examples are in the Holler archives. By far the most, as it was the most daring and adroit, was the famous—or infamous—Bank of Nevada forgery a decade ago, when Charles Becker and James Cregan were arrested after getting away with $20,000 on a draft raised from $12 to $22,000, as shown elsewhere. One morning a plausible man, representing himself as a broker named A. H. Dean, opened an account with the Bank of Nevada with $2,500 cash, saying that his account would run from $2,000 to $30,000 and that he would want no accommodation.

Gaining the confidence of the bankers, he subsequently deposited the Bank of Woodland draft upon the Crocker-Woolworth Bank of San Francisco. The amount was credited to him, the paper was sent through the Clearing House, and was paid by the Crocker-Woolworth Bank. The next day Dean called and drew out $20,000 in cash. When the Crocker-Woolworth Bank made returns to the Woodland Bank the forgery was discovered, and the men were arrested two months later in Minnesota.

Secret Service men have learned that each section of the country has its counterfeiting specialty—notes in the East, silver dollars and halves in the South and West, and gold coin in the Far West. And while there is much about the Secret Service that the public may not know, its chief business is protecting and preserving the integrity of the currency—its work being done so well that counterfeiting may be said to be distinctly on the wane in the domain of Uncle Sam.

More "Editorial Wild Oats" by Mark Twain---Killing of Caesar Localized

(From the new volume by the inimitable American humorist. They have just appeared in book form, and are published by special arrangement with Harper & Brothers, by whom the book is copyrighted.)

THE ONLY TRUE AND RELIABLE ACCOUNT OF THE KILLING OF JULIUS CAESAR EVER PUBLISHED, TAKEN FROM THE "ROMAN DAILY EVENING FASCES" OF THE DATE OF THAT TREMENDOUS OCCURRENCE.

NOTHING in the world affords a newspaper reporter so much satisfaction as gathering up the details of a bloody and mysterious murder, and writing them up with aggravating circumstantiality. He takes a living delight in this labor of love—for such it is, to him, especially if he knows that all the other papers have gone to press and his will be the only one that will contain the dreadful intelligence. A feeling of regret has often come over me that I was not reporting in Rome when Caesar was killed—reporting on an evening paper, and the only one in the city, and getting at least twelve hours ahead of the morning paper boys with this most magnificent "item" that ever fell to the lot of the craft. Other events have happened as startling as this, but none that possessed so peculiarly all the characteristics of the favorite "item" of the present day, magnified into grandeur and sublimity by the high rank, fame, and social and political standing of the actors in it.

However, as I was not permitted to report Caesar's assassination in the regular way, it has at least afforded me rare satisfaction to translate the following able account of it from the original Latin of the Roman Daily Evening Fasces of that date—second edition.

"Our usually quiet city of Rome was thrown into a state of wild excitement yesterday by the occurrence of one of those bloody affrays which sicken the heart and fill the soul with fear, while they inspire all thinking men with forebodings for the future of a city where human life is held so cheaply, and the gravest laws are so openly set at defiance. As the result of that affray it is our painful duty, as public journalists, to record the death of one of our most esteemed citizens—a man whose name is known wherever this paper circulates and whose fame it has been our pleasure and our privilege to extend, and also to protect from the tongue of slander and falsehood, to the best of our poor ability. We refer to Mr. J. Caesar, the Emperor-elect.

"The facts of the case, as nearly as our reporter could determine them from the conflicting statements of eye-witnesses, were about as follows: The affair was an election row, of course. Nine-tenths of the ghastly butcheries that disgrace the city nowadays grow out of the bickerings and jealousies and animosities engendered by these accursed elections. Rome would be the gainer by it if her very constables were elected to serve a century; for in our experience we have never even been able to choose a dog-pelter without celebrating the event with a dozen knockdowns and a general cramming of the station house with drunken vagabonds overnight. It is said that when the immense majority for Caesar at the polls in the market was declared the other day, and the crown was offered to that gentleman, even his amazing unselfishness in refusing it three times was not sufficient to save him from the whispered insults of such men as Casca of the Tenth Ward and other hirelings of the disappointed candidate, hailing mostly from the Eleventh and Thirteenth and other outside districts, who were overheard speaking ironically and contemptuously of Mr. Caesar's conduct upon that occasion.

"We are further informed that there are many among us who think they are justified in believing that the assassination of Julius Caesar was a put-up thing—a cut-and-dried arrangement, hatched by Marcus Brutus and a lot of his hired roughs, and carried out only too faithfully according to the programme. Whether there be good grounds for his suspicion or not, we leave to the people to judge for themselves, only asking that they will read the following account of the sad occurrence carefully and dispassionately before they render that judgment.

"The Senate was already in session, and Caesar was coming down the street toward the Capitol, conversing with some personal friends, and followed, as usual, by a large number of citizens. Just as he was passing in front of Desmosthenes & Thucydides's drug store, he was observing casually to a gentleman, who, our informant thinks, is a fortune teller, that the Ides of March were come. The reply was: 'Yes, they are come, but not gone yet.' At this moment Artemidorus stepped up and passed the time of day, and asked Caesar to read a schedule or a tract or something of the kind, which he had brought for his perusal. Mr. Decius Brutus also said something about an 'humble suit' which he wanted read. Artemidorus begged that attention might be paid to his first, because it was of personal consequence to Caesar. The latter replied that what concerned himself should be read last, or words to that effect. Artemidorus begged and beseeched him to read the paper instantly. However, Caesar shook him off and refused to read any petition in the street. He then entered the Capitol, and the crowd followed him.

"About this time the following conversation was overheard, and we consider that, taken in connection with the events which succeeded it, it bears an appalling significance; Mr. Popilius Lena remarked to George W. Cassius (commonly known as the 'Nobby Boy of the Third Ward,') a bruiser in the pay of the Opposition, that he hoped his enterprise to-day might thrive; and when Cassius asked, 'What enterprise?' he only closed his left eye temporarily and said with simulated indifference, 'Fare you well,' and sauntered toward Caesar. Marcus Brutus, who is suspected of being the ringleader of the band that killed Caesar, asked what it was that Lena had said. Cassius told him, and added, in a low tone, "I fear our purpose is discovered.'

"Brutus told his wretched accomplice to keep an eye on Lena, and a moment after Cassius urged that lean and hungry vagrant, Casca, whose reputation here is none of the best, to be sudden, for he feared prevention. He then turned to Brutus, apparently much excited, and asked what should be done, and swore that either he or Caesar should never turn back—he would kill himself first. At this time Caesar was talking to some of the back-country members about the approaching Fall elections and paying little attention to what was going on around him. Billy Trebonius got into conversation with the people's friend and Caesar's—Mark Antony—and under some pretense or other got him away, and Brutus, Decius, Casca, Cinna, Metullus Cimber, and others of the gang of infamous desperadoes that infest Rome at present closed around the doomed Caesar. Then Metullus Cimber knelt down and begged that his brother might be recalled from banishment, but Caesar rebuked him for his fawning conduct, and refused to grant his petition. Immediately, at Cimber's request, first Brutus and then Cassius begged for the return of the banished Publins; but Caesar still refused. He said he could not be moved; that he was as fixed as the North Star, and proceeded to speak in the most complimentary terms of the firmness of that star and its steady character. Then he said he was like it, and he believed he was the only man in the country that was; therefore, since he was 'constant' that Cimber should be banished, he was also 'constant' that he should stay banished, and he'd be hanged if he didn't keep him so!

"Instantly seizing upon this shallow pretext for a fight Casca sprang at Caesar and struck him with a dirk, Caesar grabbing him by the arm with his right hand, and launching a blow straight from the shoulder with his left that sent the reptile bleeding to the earth. He then backed up against Pompey's statue, and squared himself to receive his assailants. Cassius and Cimber and Cinna rushed upon him with their daggers drawn, and the former succeeded in inflicting a wound upon his body; but before he could strike again, and before either of the others could strike at all, Caesar stretched the three miscreants at his feet with as many blows of his powerful fist. By this time the Senate was in an indescribable uproar; the throng of citizens in the lobbies had blockaded the doors in their frantic efforts to escape from the building; the sergeant at arms and his assistants were struggling with the assassins, venerable Senators had cast aside their incumbering robes, and were leaping over benches and flying down the aisles in wild confusion toward the shelter of the committee rooms, and a thousand voices were shouting 'Po-lice! Po-lice!' in discordant tones that rose above the frightful din like shrieking winds above the roaring of a tempest. And amid it all, great Caesar stood with his back against the statue, like a lion at bay, and fought his assailants weaponless and hand to hand, with the defiant bearing and the unwavering courage which he had shown before on many a bloody field. Billy Trebonius and Caius Legarius struck him with their daggers and fell, as their brother-conspirators before them had fallen. But at last, when Caesar saw his old friend Brutus step forward armed with a murderous knife, it is said he seemed utterly overpowered with grief and amazement, and dropping his invincible left arm by his side, he hid his face in the folds of his mantle and received the treacherous blow without an effort to stay the hand that gave it. He only said, 'Et tu, Brute?' and fell lifeless on the marble pavement.

"We learn that the coat deceased had on when he was killed was the same one he wore in his tent on the afternoon of the day he overcame the Nervii, and that when it was removed from the corpse it was found to be cut and gashed in no less than seven different places. There was nothing in the pockets. It will be exhibited at the Coroner's inquest, and will be damning proof of the fact of the killing. These latter facts may be relied on, as we get them from Mark Antony, whose position enables him to learn every item of news connected with the one subject of absorbing interest of to-day.

"Later.—While the Coroner was summoning a jury, Mark Antony and other friends of the late Caesar got hold of the body and lugged it off to the Forum, and at last accounts Antony and Brutus were making speeches over it and raising such a row among the people that, as we go to press, the Chief of Police is satisfied there is going to be a riot, and is taking measures accordingly."

THE LONG-DISTANCE DOG

A FEW years ago an American engineer was sent out in charge of workmen to erect poles for a projected telegraph line through one of the smaller Central American States.

In the tiny interior villages, whose inhabitants had had no connection heretofore with the outside world—and regarded the suggestion that the earth might not be flat as a good joke—some obstacles were encountered in the ignorance and suspicions of the people. Finally the party was brought to a standstill in a hamlet in the mountains, where the Alcalde, or Mayor, absolutely refused to allow the erection of the poles.

The señor must be jesting—so said the Alcalde at the close of a long conference—for it was ridiculous to expect men of intelligence like themselves to believe that a wire stretched from here to the next village, ten miles distant, would enable people there to know what was being done here! No, the American señor must have some hidden, evil purpose!

The engineer was at his wits' end. To proceed without the consent of authorities, however humble, might involve his company in difficulties; and it would mean serious delay to send back to the capital for an official of the native Government to explain the matter. He himself had spent hours in fruitless explanation of the theory of the telegraph.

A forlorn looking cur that had strayed in to the conference, arose at this point and stretched out to full length—the "Gringo" had an idea.

"Do you see that dog?" he demanded. The surprised señors regarded the animal.

The engineer suddenly gave the dog's tail a tweak, with the premeditated result in the form of a yelp proceeding from the mouth of the indignant animal.

"Now suppose you had a dog ten miles long—if you pulled his tail here, wouldn't folks in the next town know what had happened here?"

In the burst of light caused by this the Alcalde and his sage advisors saw! The engineer put up his poles, surrounded by a sympathetic and admiring crowd.

New York's Great Public Library Nearing Completion

A Huge Bookcase to Hold 4,500,000 Volumes---Will Open in Three Years---To Cost $3,000,000---Why It Has Been Delayed.

THE skeleton of a bookcase that will hold 3,500,000 volumes—without exception the largest bookcase in the world—that is what one may see to-day back of the great central hall of the majestic marble structure that is slowly rising day by day on the site of the old Forty-second Street reservoir in Bryant Park.

It is just completed, this marvelous network of steel bars and uprights, and exemplifies the very latest methods and appliances for the shelving of books. There is nothing like it in the great libraries of the Old World. In the Bibliothèque Nationale, with its 2,600,000 volumes; the British Museum, with its 2,000,000; the Imperial Library of St. Petersburg, with its 1,200,000, there are the old-fashioned wooden shelves, standing in separate sections, a multitude of isolated units, lacking symmetry and plan. In the Congressional Library, with its 1,400,000 volumes, the modern steel bookcase is in use, but not in the solid, impressive mass, distinguishing it over all others, that is shown in the New York Public Library. Here it stands, one huge square, in a chamber 78 by 297 feet, rising in seven tiers of 7½ feet each tier. Above it will be placed the spacious reading room of the library, on either side the various halls, offices, and exhibition rooms. Thus surrounded, this monster bookcase becomes, architecturally, the heart of the whole structure, the treasure for whose protection this marble palace is built.

It is just now, in this stage of the work on the library, that one gets a comprehensive view of this bookcase—or "stack" as it is technically called. Later on, when the floors and galleries are put in, it will not be possible to see it en masse. Even now, with this maze of steel laid bare, it is difficult to appreciate its immense capacity for the shelving of books without the aid of figures. A bookcase holding 3,500,000 volumes means a series of shelves that, if laid together, end to end, would measure 435,000 feet in length, a distance of over eighty miles. That is the shelf capacity of this one bookcase. Then there are shelves for another million volumes in different parts of the library, making a total of 4,500,000 volumes—a more than sufficient number to reach from New York to Philadelphia if they were all placed in a single row. In a way such computations may seem fanciful, yet they are not without their value as illustrating the immense future possibilities of growth of the New York Public Library.

At present the library does not number in its two main buildings and thirty-four branches more than 1,400,000 volumes. Of these not more than a million will be placed on the shelves of the new building when the latter is completed. The opening of this building, however, will greatly increase the buying capacity of the library, whose Trustees hope that the complete filling of the monster bookcase will prove to be not an idle dream. Even as it stands to-day, its central building still in course of construction, the New York Library rangs among the world's five greatest libraries, while in the number of its readers it is easily first on the list. Last year, in the circulation department, 3,750,000 volumes were given out for home use; in the reference department 540,696 volumes were taken from the desk. The total, 4,300,000 volumes, has not been reached by any other library, either in this country or in Europe, and indicates the immense field the library has to cover.

It was just ten years ago that the organization known as the New York Public Library came into being. It was composed of the Astor Library, the Lenox Library, and the Tilden Trust, with a total endowment fund of about $3,500,000. When the building on Forty-second Street is completed it is expected that this endowment fund will be nearly doubled by the sale of the Lenox and Astor Library buildings that will then be possible. That will give a more adequate fund for the buying of new books than has heretofore been within reach. The opening of the new building, also, will relieve the present overcrowding from which readers suffer, and furnish suitable quarters for the storing of the rare treasures that are in the possession of the library, but without the proper safeguards for their preservation and exhibition to the public. At present, awaiting the completion of the new building, the most valuable features of the library collections have been stored in the Lenox building, where they are more nearly fireproof than they would be in the Astor Library building.

There are few New Yorkers who realize the extent and value of the treasures that are thus being cared for. Great libraries seldom limit themselves to the mere collection of books. Works of art come within their scope, rare manuscripts, prints, as well as the early editions of printed volumes having an antiquarian rather than a literary or purely educational value. That, at least, was the idea of James Lenox, who aimed in the collection that he bequeathed to the city to get together a unique assortment of rare books, manuscripts, and works of art, rather than the regulation "working library" to which the public usually has access. The result has been a collection of original material that has been a boon to the artist and the historian.

"It is the private collector who amasses books and manuscripts of rare value," declared Mr. Eames, the official head of the Lenox Library, "and it is to him that the public libraries must look for their real treasures. James Lenox, founder of this library, was a millionaire with a passion for collecting Americana. He started his library by buying up everything that had been printed relating to this country before 1700. That formed the nucleus of the present collection and gave the bent to the library that bears his name. His plan has been enlarged and reinforced by many valuable additions since his death, until to-day, taken as a whole, the Lenox collection is recognized as the most important and comprehensive in the world in the matter of American history. In some branches of American history, as in the period prior to 1800, the collection of the British Museum equals that of the Lenox, while in South American history the library of John Carter Brown in Providence, R. I., is superior.

"This American collection as originally started by the founder of the library comprises about 30,000 printed volumes and some 50,000 manuscripts. It includes the library of the historian George Bancroft and the Emmet collection of autographs relating to the Revolution, in which nearly every person of importance to that period is represented.

"For the student in American history, of the Revolutionary period and after, the newspaper files on the shelves of the library are probably of more practical use than these rare volumes and manuscripts. We have 1,000 volumes of American newspapers published before the year 1800. The first newspaper to appear in this country was The Boston News Letter, in 1706. Our files start with 1710, and, although the first twenty-three years are rather fragmentary in places, from 1733 to this date one can find here a more or less complete series of New York papers.

"Besides this American history collection, the Lenox and Astor Libraries have a number of special collections of great value and rarity, all of which will be brought together and placed on exhibition in the reserved rooms of the great library building on Forty-second Street. These collections include 3,000 volumes of Shakespeareana, containing four copies of the famous First Folio, nine copies of the Second Folio, with a whole shelf of the original Quartos; 10,000 volumes of music, with various smaller collections of literary antiquities; a Bible collection of 8,000 volumes, probably the best in this country, and a geographical collection of 21,000 volumes, containing all that there is in geographical literature before 1500, with 4,000 maps of the world from the earliest time to the end of the seventeenth century, one of the best of its kind in the world.

"Outside of these large collections, there are single objects of great value, such as the MSS. Gospel Lectionary, by Julio Clovio, of the early sixteenth century, containing six full-page paintings. This book was at one time in the Papal Library, and cost over $11,000. Then there is the first edition of Columbus's Letter, costing $7,500—the most valuable among our printed books.

"It may be a matter of interest for the public to know that when the time comes to move all the Astor and Lenox collections to the new library we expect to inconvenience our readers scarcely at all. The moving will be done gradually, and with such thorough system that no book will be out of the librarian's reach except during the short interval occupied in carrying it from one building to another. The combining of the two collections will not be attempted until they are both on the shelves of the new library.

"All this implies a method of cataloguing radically different from that in vogue not so many years ago, and still in use in most libraries, by which books had to be placed in arbitrary, fixed positions on the shelves. Our method admits of an indefinite amount of change without disturbing the catalogue in the least.

"In this respect our libraries are much ahead of those in Europe. For instance, the greatest of the latter, the Bibliothèque Nationale, founded centuries ago, is without a printed catalogue to this day. Eight years ago a catalogue was started. It now occupies nineteen volumes, and has completed the letter B. At this rate it will be more than a century before the entire catalogue is finished—and then, allowing for inevitable changes, it will be time to begin all over again. An applicant at the Bibliothèque is supposed to know what book he wants without consulting a catalogue. The book he applies for is not given to him until the following day, that interval of time being needed to hunt it up in the vast collection. The British Museum has a catalogue, started and finished during the last twenty-five years. It is somewhat unwieldy, however, filling, with the supplements, no less than 500 volumes. Our European cousins have not yet found out the practical value of the card system for catalogues. Without that system our contemplated move to the new library building would be a titanic undertaking."

Just when this move will be possible and the new library building completed and opened to the public cannot as yet be definitely stated. It was six years ago that the work of tearing down the Forty-second Street Reservoir to make room for the library was started. There has been no cessation in the work since that time; but there have been periods when nothing appeared to be going on within the fenced-off inclosure on Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street, and the public have occasionally wondered whether the great work whose completion is so much needed was suffering from interruptions that would postpone it indefinitely. Of late, however, the fence has been lowered and the activity within, visible for the first time to passers-by on the street, has given rise to hopes that the day may not be far off when the library will be an accomplished fact.

Probably if the library were for a private individual it would have been finished by this time. But as it is being erected for the city, and has to meet the approval of the Library Trustees besides, its progress is naturally impeded by the vast amount of red tape for which great municipalities are famous. Every piece of work, no matter how small, that is done on the library has first to be submitted by the architects in the form of detailed drawings and specifications to the Department of Parks for approval, and then to the Corporation Counsel. After that it must pass through the hands of the Department of Parks nine times, through the Corporation Counsel's office twice, to the printer's once, to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment four times, three times to the Controller, and once for a public hearing, and again for advertising, before it can be given out to the contractor. Notwithstanding this elaborate system, every important contract that has come up has resulted in an injunction suit, in one case in readvertisement, and this particular branch of the work has been delayed from eight to eighteen months. Under favorable circumstances, that is to say, if no objections are raised by any of the parties to whom the matter is referred, and if every one endeavors to further the work with the greatest possible haste, a contract cannot be signed under six months. Some of the contracts, as in the case of the book stacks, have taken two years.

With such a system, speed, of course, is impossible, but, in spite of all these hindrances, created by official routine, the stately outlines of the building are being rapidly filled in, and the architects promise that within two, or at most three, years, the library will be completed and ready for use.

Perhaps it is as well that great public buildings of this kind, intended to remain as monuments of an age for all time, should be erected with the utmost care and deliberation that officialdom can devise. As no building has been surrounded from first to last with a more effective system of checks than this library, public expectation looks for something unique in the finished result, and, architecturally at least, considering the peculiarly thorough competition that was employed among the architects for the selection of the plans, the library should be representative of the best artistic development in this country.

Usually in these competitions every one who should does not compete, the contest being limited to the unknown members of the profession who are looking for opportunities to achieve a name. In this case, however, there was a double competition—the first one open to all architects living in New York, the second was a competition between architects selected by the Library Trustees, each Trustee giving six names. Then the best six from the first competition and the best six from the second entered into a third and final competition, the award being made by a jury composed of three architects, three Trustees, and the Director of the library, Dr. John S. Billings. In the two preliminary competitions there were over ninety architects altogether. The final award was given by a unanimous vote to the architects, Carrere & Hastings.

"Architectural style," said Mr. Carerre, speaking of the principle involved in the great work upon which his firm is engaged, "is subject to the same rigorous logic of development as that applied to any of the arts or sciences. The architecture of an age should be the expression of that age in words of stone, and to do this perfectly, since each age is a gradual outgrowth of the age preceding it, its architecture should undergo a like evolution in order to be truly representative. To the architect desiroue of doing representative work the question as to which style is the most beautiful is not the decisive one. The palm for pure beauty may belong to the Greek, the Egyptian, the Roman, the Gothic, the Norman—to any of the great styles known to history. But the real practical question is, in building for this intensely modern city, what is the style that is most appropriate to, that represents the best that is in, the New York of to-day? It will surely not be the style that was typical of a bygone race or people, no matter how intrinsically beautiful that style may be. A building that is intended to be monumental in character, an expression of the public to whose service it is dedicated, should not be merely an expression of the individual preference or taste of its architect. It must first of all take into account the highest development of architecture as exemplified in its last great historical period, and must add to this whatever artistic tendency is capable of architectural expression from the age to which the building belongs.

"By this method the architect of to-day is compelled to go to the eighteenth century, to the France of Louis XVI., for the architectural type that is historically suitable for this age. During the nineteenth century architecture remained stationary, and its onward development must be based, therefore, on the best of the Louis XVI. epoch—on such buildings as the Louvre or the Place de Concorde—that in its turn was the resultant of all the epochs coming before it. It is only by this adherence to the historical sequence to be found in all true architecture that appropriateness can be assured and originality and progress toward higher types made possible. So long as it is considered imperative always to build a church in the Gothic style, or a public building in Greek or Roman, so long architecture will be foreign, eloquent only of a dead age and mode of thought, unrepresentative of the thought and tendencies of modern times, that thus remain in the chaotic condition, architecturally, to which a century of silence has brought us.

"In determining the architectural type of the New York Public Library, it is this logic of history, as one may call it, that has been mainly considered. Hence the building will not be an exponent of any one style to the exclusion of the others, but may be characterized as belonging to the modern Renaissance, more or less of the Louis XVI. period, with such modifications as the conditions and needs of our own age have suggested—and in this way it is hoped that it will be representative, so far as that is possible, of modern New York."

The cost of the library when completed will be in the neighborhood of $8,000,000, the original limit of $2,500,000 having proved inadequate. It will be opened to the public as a circulating library as well as one for reference, in this respect having a much wider field than that of the Lenox and Astor Libraries, both of which are exclusively reference libraries. By the time that the new building is completed it is hoped, also, that the proposed fifty branch libraries will be running, thus giving to New York the most complete library system in the world's history.

AN APPEAL FOR THE BIRDS.

BILLS to prohibit the use of the new automatic shotgun in hunting birds will be introduced in all Legislatures which convene next Winter. The New York Zoological Society and the League of American Sportsmen have decided to send delegations to the capitals of the various States to urge the passage of these bills. It will require a large outlay of money for traveling expenses, printing, postage, clerk hire, &c., to conduct this campaign properly, and all persons interested in the preservation of song, insectivorous, and game birds are requested to contribute to a special fund which is being created for this purpose.

The automatic shotgun is essentially a market hunter's and a pot hunter's weapon. The decent sportsmen of the country are a unit in opposition to its use in the field; but it will require more than the combined efforts of any one class of people to shut it out of the market.

This appeal is therefore directed to all humanitarians; to all who believe in decency and moderation in the hunting of birds; to all who believe that a reasonable number of our birds should be spared each year in order that they may propagate their species, and finally to the men and women of America who do not believe in the killing of birds for sport at any time.

The automatic shotgun is one of the most serious menaces ever instituted against the bird life of this country. It is a veritable murdering machine. Let us legislate it out of existence, and to this extent, at least, provide for saving a few of our remaining birds from destruction.

In Europe, where a careful balance is maintained between propagation and destruction, it has been found necessary to prohibit the use of all repeating rifles and guns. Let us not be behind Europe in this same measure.

Checks for this war fund should be made payable to the order of the New York Zoological Society, and mailed to the office of its Game Protection Department, 1,269 Broadway, New York.

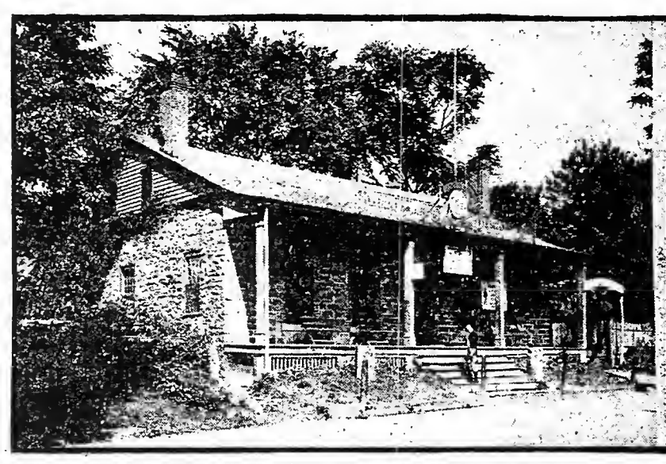
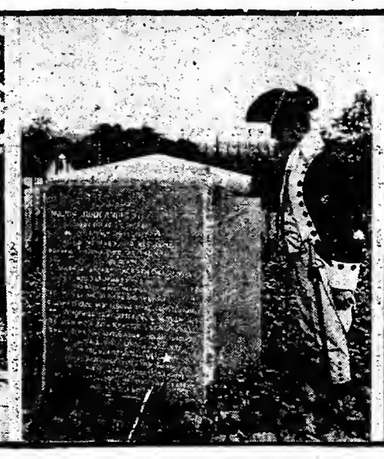
Andre Monument Site Now a Public Park



Revolutionary Prison House Where Andre Was Imprisoned.



Where Andre Was Executed.

Andre Monument, Tappan, N. Y.

IN response to an editorial suggestion in THE NEW YORK TIMES on Oct. 24, 1904, the American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society bought last week the André monument property at Tappan, Rockland County, N. Y., and will convert it into a public park.

The monument marks the spot where Major John André was hanged as a spy and buried. The story of André's mission as the representative of Gen. Sir Henry Clinton, commander of the British Army, in negotiations with Benedict Arnold for the betrayal of West Point and the sequel of André's capture and execution at Tappan on Oct. 2, 1780, are known to every schoolboy. On Aug. 10, 1821, André's remains were disinterred under British auspices and carried to England, where they repose in a superb sarcophagus in Westminster Abbey.

In 1879, when Cyrus W. Field was entertaining Dean Stanley at his home in Tarrytown, the talk turned to André. Mr. Field said that he would erect a monument to André if the Dean would write the inscription. The Dean wrote this inscription, which Mr. Field had placed upon a monument he subsequently put on the spot at Tappan:

Here died, October 2, 1780, Major John André of the British Army, who, entering the American lines on a secret mission to Benedict Arnold for the surrender of West Point, was taken prisoner, tried, and condemned as a spy. His death, though according to the stern code of war, moved even his enemies to pity, and both armies mourned the fate of one so young and so brave. In 1821 his remains were removed to Westminster Abbey.

A hundred years after the execution this stone was placed above the spot where he lay by a citizen of the United States, against which he fought, not to perpetuate the record of strife, but in token of those better feelings which have since united two nations, one in race, in language, and in religion, in the hope that the friendly understanding will never be broken.

Dean of Westminster.

On two different occasions cranks tried to blow up the monument. When Mr. Field died and his estate was divided the heirs lost track of the little bit of property on which the monument stands. Taxes accumulated, and the monument with the small plot of surrounding land was finally purchased by George Dickey of Nyack at a tax sale. Since then Mr. Dickey has bought it in at every tax sale to keep title. It was after one of these sales that the suggestion was made in THE NEW YORK TIMES.

By circular letter the society recently raised enough funds from private sources to buy the monument and also a circular plot of ground 100 feet in diameter, sufficient to maintain a small public park. Among those who contributed were J. P. Morgan, R. Fulton Cutting, Van Wyck Rossiter, S. R. Bradley, J. H. Browning, R. S. Guernsey, and others.

The American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society gives four reasons for taking up the suggestions of this newspaper.

First, it says the occupation of the military spy in a state of actual war is not in itself morally disgraceful. On the contrary, in view of the extra hazard involved, it requires a high order of courage which commands admiration. The preservation of the monument would be a tribute to a brave soldier and cultured gentleman, whose death was as deeply lamented by Washington and his fellow-Americans as by his own comrades in arms.

Second—It would serve as an expression of detestation of the double perfidy of Arnold, who not only attempted to betray West Point, but actually did betray André, with whom he broke faith by failing to deliver him back on the Vulture and by drawing him within the American lines under disguise, contrary to his wish and understanding.

Third—The monument should be preserved out of respect to the memory of Cyrus W. Field, to whom the public has devoted no monument, and who was keenly interested in the André memorial.

Fourth—The plan to take better care of the monument seems timely in view of the movement in England to erect a monument to George Washington and the general increase of pleasant relations between England and this country.

Besides the monument there are two other landmarks in the village of Tappan. One is the house in which Washington made his headquarters when André was executed and the house in which André was imprisoned.

PASSING OF THE BRONX'S HOUSE OF MYSTERY

ONE of the many Englishmen who have felt it necessary to express in print their opinions of this country has called his book "The Land of Contrasts." He did not include in it a chapter on the sights of the Bronx, but he would have felt his choice of a title well justified had he foreseen what is now taking place on the northern bank of the Harlem River. To the average citizen there is little to appeal in the marshes that border the Bronx Kills or in the waste of hovels and empty lots that a great city pushes forward as its advance guard, for few New Yorkers are sufficiently familiar with their city to know that there is no richer historic field within the limits of Greater New York than this unpromising region.

Within a stone's throw of the great suburban terminal and freight yards for which the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has secured a plot of more than 800 acres along the banks of the Harlem and East Rivers are landmarks once famous throughout the whole country, but now forgotten and crumbling in decay. Tumble-down cabins and waste stretches have been swept away to make room for extensive docks, miles of tracks and switches, and all the other facilities necessary to care for the enormous river of freight that flows between New England and the West, but just beyond the limits of this railroad activity there are old farmhouses still as they were fifty or a hundred years ago, and the heavy freight trains rumble by within a few yards of more than one historic mansion.

Ten years ago these relics of the past did not seem out of place. The greater part of the territory now covered by a network of teeming streets and high apartment houses was then occupied by the estates of the descendants of the old-time landed gentry of Westchester, the Morrises, the Hunts, the Tiffanys, and the Vyses.

But though the farms and fields have given way to apartments and paved streets, the old associations still linger for the few to whom the traditions of the past are familiar. On the very edge of the New Haven's new freight yards and surrounded by a ragged mass of squatters' cabins stands the Casanova mansion, once believed to be the centre of mysterious plots and now deserted by its former owners and tenanted by laborers. In 1854 a wealthy New Orleans cotton merchant of the name of Whitlock visited Gouverneur Morris at the old Morris mansion, the home of the famous Revolutionary financier. The mansion is now also almost surrounded by railroad tracks and was long ago deserted by its owners. Whitlock, anxious for business reasons to have a home near New York, purchased from Morris some hundreds of acres sloping down to the water front, selecting for the site of his mansion a grassy knoll projecting into the East River and within sight of the Bronx Kills. Here he built for himself a great four-storied house, topped by four square towers and an ornamental cupola. So lavish were his expenditures that Casanova—as he named the place after a Louisiana estate in his family—was soon the talk of the city to the southward.

The excitement caused by the Southerner's extravagance was heightened by the secrecy of his actions. A high fence surrounded the new mansion and behind it gangs of men, brought from a distance, were known to be hard at work at some mysterious undertaking. Try as they might, the inquisitive residents of the Bronx learned nothing of what was being done behind the Casanova fence until after the civil war, when the family had fled abroad. Then it was discovered that the house rested upon a maze of vaults and tunnels, one of which, the popular legend says, led to the shore of the East River.

In this new home with its imposing exterior of gray sandstone, its eighty rooms and mysterious vaults, the Whitlocks and their relatives, the Casanovas, established themselves as in a baronial hall. The wealthy Southerners who crowded New York for a few years before the war, flocked to the new mansion and Casanova became the Mecca of a hard-riding, hard-drinking set who hunted the country side from New Rochelle to Mott Haven. Then a double tragedy put an end to the festivities. One of the two sons of the house was killed by a fall from his horse near the old Hunt Inn, now destroyed, and his brother, hurrying home on the news of his death, fell in front of a street car and died a few hours later. The brief day of splendor was over, and the doors of Casanova were never again opened to guests.

When the black clouds of the civil war began to lower over the country Casanova entered on a new phase of its existence. Rumors of strange doings within its walls arose, and a story was circulated of persons entering and leaving the house in the dead of night. Other stories said that armed men brought heavy loads in wagons to the house, and a gossiping servant told of several meetings in the great parlors. As the excitement over the impending struggle increased, so did the secrecy about the Casanova mansion, until finally the doors were absolutely closed to all the neighbors. Then Fort Sumter was fired on, and from the day the news reached New York no member of the family has ever been seen in Casanova nor has any heir come back to the old mansion. Rumor said that the family had driven away in the night in four carriages, followed by a dozen wagons laden with treasure chests for the Confederacy. A day or two later a landing party from a Federal gunboat ransacked the place in vain.

The caretaker barred the doors, and for thirty-five years the mansion stood empty as the city grew up around it. The family was said to be living in Paris, but the old caretaker was not communicative, and inquisitive neighbors received little encouragement. When his death left the old house defenseless it fell a prey to relic bunters and other plunderers with more mercenary motives.

One little room escaped the sack, for its existence was unsuspected in the first inroad. Some years ago the President of a real estate company, in wandering through the old ruin, noticed discrepancies in the dimensions of the rooms in the second floor and located an unused space of about fifteen feet square. A careful search disclosed an iron door in the masonry walls of the second tier of vaults directly beneath this space. The door was broken down and the light of a lantern showed a winding staircase leading upward. At the level of the second floor another iron door barred the way. Behind this was a chamber fourteen and a half feet square without any window or aperture of any sort, save an opening no larger than a man's hand, piercing the outer wall of the house. An open safe stood empty in one corner, wooden boxes and rusted carpenter's tools were scattered around the floor, and an old trunk occupied another corner. In it were the uniform of a Captain in the war of 1812, his epaulets, chapeau, spurs, pistol and sword, and four miniatures, one of an elderly woman and three of young girls. Nothing indicated the identity of the owner, and in the mass of letters unearthed at the same time there was nothing to shed light upon the mysteries of the mansion.

Now the ruin is tenanted by the families of railroad hands and week by week the great freight yards creep closer and closer to its marble halls. After forty years of oblivion and decay the Casanova farm is again the scene of life and activity, but the Southern merchants, with their guests, their hospitality, and their plots have given way to the railroad, binding North and South together with the bonds of commercial prosperity.

RUSH DAY AT PRINCETON.

THE college year opened in Princeton on Friday, Sept. 22, with the usual unintellectual ceremonies of fisticuffs and strenuosity.

"Rush Day" is a distinctive feature, for, besides being the first Friday of the college year, it is the first licensed fight. The election of officers of the freshman classes takes place at noon in the old gymnasium building, and at that hour the sophomores line up in front of the doorway to keep the freshmen out. Usually the freshmen outnumber the sophs, because of the reinforcements from the juniors, always loyal admirers of the freshmen. They were out in force at Princeton, and, although every freshman was almost pulled apart before he was precipitated through the door of the gymnasium, enough of the entering class finally foregathered to conduct the election of officers with some semblance of parliamentary order, in spite of excitement and disorder.

The exit from the building was even more exciting, the sophomores uniting in an effort to prevent the freshmen forming in line for the customary parade. The rush out of the building and across the campus was worse than a bargain day in a department store. Another encounter occurred at the point where the parade was formed, for the sophomores are accounted disgraced if they permit the parade at all. The juniors and freshmen together were too much for the sophomores, however, who succeeded in trampling the quiet streets of Princeton, chanting as they marched.

At night the "cannon rush" was celebrated with all its warlike intensity. This is one of Princeton's most time-honored events. The sophomores group themselves, four abreast, around the old Revolutionary cannon in Princeton, and the freshmen make a rush to break the line. If any freshman succeeds in touching the cannon a victory for the freshman class is scored. Until an upper classman yells "All over" the fight is fast and furious. It usually lasts about five minutes, but often does damage that takes the doctor weeks to repair.

Hall Caine Caught by a Caricaturist

Novelist-Dramatist Tells Something About His Method of Play-Making and Says a Few Things Anent Bernard Shaw.

"I have just had eight weeks of hard rehearsals in London."

"I am only a miniature of my father."

"I have just had eight weeks' hard rehearsals at Drury Lane Theatre in London, and should really have slept all the way over on the steamer, but they would make me preside at a concert on board, and, well—I threw myself, as I always do, heart and soul into the effort to get what money I could out of their pockets, and though we collected £40, I should have done better, perhaps, to put my hand into my own pocket for that amount and turned over and gone to sleep." When you see Hall Caine and realize the slender physique of the man, the frailty of him excuses this exhaustion of his nerves.

+ + +

"I am only a miniature of my father," he said, smiling indulgently at the comparison. "He was an enormous man, with tremendous power of heart and feeling, and wisdom—a man of the soil, as we have all been. He was not an educated man, not a college man, you understand, and how often I have felt these disadvantages myself when I began my career as a journalist! I was in contact constantly with Oxford men, always a bit intolerant of the chap who isn't, and it was hard work to make them realize that I knew anything at all, for this reason. But little by little I pushed ahead, and my schooling at the university of life was better than any college degree I might have had."

+ + +

"It was in your journalistic work you built the foundations of the novelist?"

"Oh, yes. It was when I was rubbing up against the dramas of the streets and the police stations and the universal old, old conflicts of nature! There really is nothing new in my stories or my plays. I am not in sympathy with the purely intellectual problems, the questions of social discord, of sex conflict, of ethical culture for culture's sake. Much larger to me seem the perplexities of the heart, the love that beats itself to pieces against the bars of its own imprisonment, the despair of a mother who has lost her heart grip on her child, for instance; the silent sufferings of blind affection, the struggle in a father's instinct between his love for a wayward son and his sterner duties to make a man of him. It is the tragedy in front of you that can reach no comfort through intellectual surgery, but is there, a wound to be healed, to be comforted. In art one can suggest the oplate of hope, even though in life it may never be effective."

"Bernard Shaw has taken a subject logically mine—the Salvation Army."

+ + +

This is not the mere architecture of melodrama; it is the universal inspiration of the poet; it is his mourning for the burdens of humanity.

This, unquestionably, is Hall Caine's temperament, a deep, underlying pity for the inevitable, and a mind that obediently dismisses analysis as a flippant waste of cruelty.

His uncle was a wonderful preacher, a man who gave his life to his own people, the Manxmen. From him he inherits the mystical, the spiritual superstitions of heaven and hell, of forgiveness of sin, of punishment that is but an exercise in the stronghold of redemption.

"I wish I had asked the Bishop of London to come to see one of my rehearsals at Drury Lane," he said, "that he might see for himself the injustice of this moral and intellectual barrier that still exists between the life of the theatre and the life of the home. If he could have had a glimpse of the stage, behind the curtain as I know it, it would have been an answer to those who still misrepresent the respectability of life behind the scenes."

Then he confessed what is easily seen in him, that he works with an abandonment of feeling, in the same degree of emotion that Bernhardt, for instance, plays a big scene.

"You must rely upon your discretion to put this in words that will not expose me to misunderstandings; it is quite possible that people may say, 'You see, that's the sort of man he is, hysterical, irresponsible intellectually,' unless you do," he said, preferring the truth that it might not be read as otherwise.

"When I am writing a big scene, when the emotions of my people are in full cry, as it were, I suffer with them. I have walked from my library into an adjoining room, and glancing in the mirror seen my face streaming with tears. My doctor at these times shakes his head and says: 'Pull up, my boy, you can't stand it; you put too much of yourself into this!'"

To send a soul down, down, down, and lift it up again."

+ + +

"After all, sincere or insincere, posing or not, alert ae I was to the possibilities of Hall Caine's acting version of himself, I was convinced that he has in him the artist's temperament, not because he sheds tears over his own plays, but because he has survived the analytical tendency of the age, to have sensibilities at all.

"While Shaw is playing ducks and drakes with the destiny of the theatre, I believe that he is a man of deep emotional feeling," said Hall Caine, confidentially. "Though one might conceive that I am the direct antithesis of himself, I received a note from him the other day that showed him in a different light. He has recently taken one subject which is logically mine, the Salvation Army, as the basis for a play. How he will treat it, of course, I don't know, but I fancy he will do it seriously, with regard to its intrinsic human meaning, of conflict between the spirit and the flesh. If he does not, then I shall consider the subject mine, and I shall do it."

"When an idea for a play or a book impresses Hall Caine, it horrifies him."

When an idea for a play or a book first impresses Hall Caine as available, he says, it must be something that grips him by the throat, stifles him, horrifies him, not because of its mere sensationalism, but because of its acknowledgment of inevitable human tragedy. This he told me, in relating the inception of "The Prodigal Son." After that he plans for it some merciful redemption; he presses the needle of hope into its laceration, because he believes that people demand of art the comforting answer, the redeeming promise that is denied them often in life.

"Art has nothing to do with mere horror; where beauty ceases is its boundary line," he said, flaring into feeling and gesture. "The Greek tragedies were for the Greeks purely classical, highly intellectual as they were themselves, but complexities have increased since then, knowledge has made new demands, and in the evident cruelty of existence we have discovered a need of rest from tension. I prefer to send a soul down, down, down to its lowest depths and lift it up again, than to leave it in utter darkness."

The Hungry Tramp

(Copyrighted, 1905, by Charles N. Crewdson.)

NOT the poor widow, alone, but even the big, ablebodied, hungry tramp comes in often to share the drummer's generosity. A friend once told me of a good turn he did for a "Weary Willie" in Butte.

Now, if there is any place on earth where a man is justified in being mean, it is in Butte. It is a mining camp. It rests upon bleak, barren hills; the sulphuric fumes, arising from roasting ores, have long since killed out all vegetation. It has not even a sprig of grass. This smoke, also laden with arsenic, sometimes hovers over Butte like a London fog. More wealth is every year dug out of the earth in Butte, and more money is squandered there by more different kinds of people, than in any place of its size on earth. The dictionary needs one adjective which should qualify Butte and no other place. Many a time while there I've expected to see Satan rise up out of a hole. Whenever I start to leave I feel I am going away from the domain of the devil.

"One morning I went down to the etation before 5 o'clock," said my friend. "I was to take a belated train. It was below zero, yet I paced up and down the platform outside breathing the sulphur smoke. I was anxious to catch sight of the train. Through the bluish haze the lamp in the station cast a light upon a man standing near the track. I went over to him, supposing he was a fellow-traveling man. But he was only a tramp who had been fired out of the waiting room. I wore a warm chinchilla, but it made my teeth chatter to see this shivering 'hobo'—his hands in his pockets and his last Summer's light weight pinned close around his throat.

"'Fine morning, old man,' said I.

"'Maybe you t'ink so, Major,' replied the hobo, 'but you stan' out in de breeze lon'e I have in Fourt' of Chuly togs an' you'll have to have a long pipe dream to t'ink it's a fine mornin'. Say, pard, cup o' coffee an' a sinker wouldn't go bad.'

"I took the tramp to the lunch counter. I was hungry myself, and told the waiter to give him what he wanted.

"'Cup o' coffee an' ham sand'ich—t'ick slab o' de pig, Capin, please,' said my hobo friend.

"I saw some strawberries behind the counter, and I said to the waiter: 'Just start us both in on strawberries and cream, then let us have coffee and some of that fried chicken.'

"'Sport, you are in on this,' said I to the tramp.

"He unpinned his coat and looked with longing eyes on the waiter as he pulled the caps off the berries; he never said a word, merely swallowing the secretion from his glande. When he had gulped his berries, I told the waiter to give him some more.

"'Ever hungry, Major?' said the hobo. 'Dat's kinder featherweight for my ap'tite. Let me have a ham sand'ich 'stead.'

"'No, go on, you shall have a good square meal. Here, take some more berries and have this fried chicken,' I answered, shoving over another bowl of fruit and a big dish with a half a dozen cooked chickens on it. 'Help youreelf like it all belonged to you.'

"The hobo ate two halves of chicken, drained his cup of coffee and started to get down from his stool. But he cast a hungry look at the dish of chicken.

"'Have some more, old man,' said I.

"'It's been s'long since I had a good square meal that I could stan' a little more, Major; but let me go up against a ham san'ich—it's got a longer reach.'

"'No, have chicken—all the chicken you want—and some more coffee,' said I.

"Eat! How that fellow did go for it—five pieces of chicken! I'd rather see him repeat that performance than go to a minstrel show. He slid off his stool again saying: 'Major, I guess I'm all in. T'anks.'

"'Oh no; have some pie,' I said.

"'Well,' he replied, 'Major, 's you shift the deck, guess I will play one more frame.'

"'Gash o' apple,' said Weary to the waiter.

"When I insisted upon his having a third piece of pie, the hobo said: 'No, Major, t'anks, I got to ring off or I'll break the bank.'

"He, for once, had enough. I gave him a cigar. He sat down to smoke—contented, I thought. I paid the bill; things are high in Montana, you know—his part was $2.85. My hobo friend saw $3.55 rung up on the cash register. Then I went over and sat down beside him.

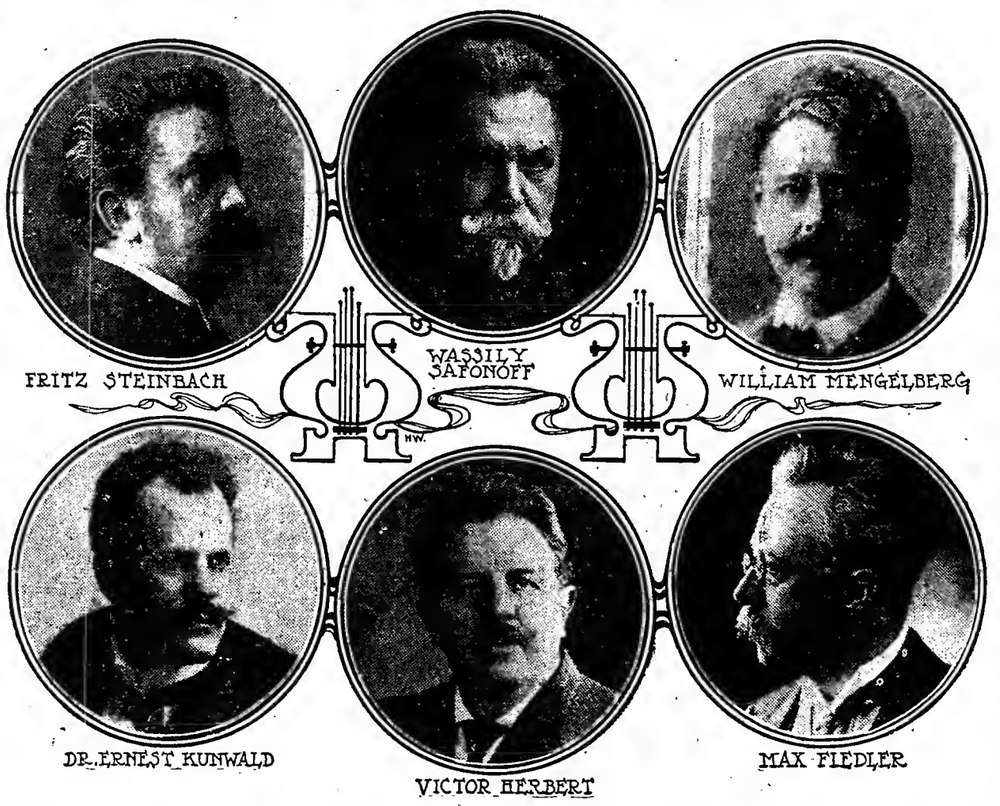
"'Feeling good?' said I.

"'Yep, but chee! Dat feed, spread out, would a lasted me clear to Sain' Paul.'"

ORIGIN OF "SO LONG."

YOU have perhaps wondered how the expression 'so long' came to be so generally used by the American people," said a Columbia College lecturer the other day. "It is usually used in closing a conversation and is simply a form of 'good-bye.' The Norwegians brought it to this country. In that Land of the Midnight Sun 'saa laenge' is a common form of farewell. It means the same as the 'auf diedersehen' of the German or the 'au revoir' of the French. Among the early settlers in America were many Norwegians, and the phrase was picked up from them. They pronounce it with the g softened and accompany it by a wave of the hand.

New Philharmonic Leaders



THE success of the concerts given by the Philharmonic Society during the past two years made them important incidents in the musical history of New York and has led that organization to follow for another season the plan of intrusting its concerts to famous European conductors who are strangere to this country, as well as those who have already established their popularity with the audiences at the Philharmonic concerts. Five of the conductors to appear this year have never been in this country before, while the two others are well known to New York music lovers.

The concerts of the sixty-fourth season of the Philharmonic Society will, as usual, be given in Carnegie Hall.

The last two seasons of the Philharmonic Society have been the most successful in its long history, and the concerts during the coming year will be kept up to the high standard of the orchestra.

The new men are William Mengelberg of Amsterdam, Max Fiedler of Hamburg, Dr. Ernst Kunwald of Frankfort, and Fritz Steinbach of Cologne. Wasili von Safonoff, who has been extremely popular in New York the last two seasons, will return for two concerts of the series and an extra concert. Victor Herbert needs no introduction to New York audiences.

William Mengelberg, who is to conduct the first public rehearsal and concert, has placed on his programme Richard Strauss's symphonic poem, "Ein Heldenleben," which the composer dedicated to the conductor after the work had been played under his direction at the Strauss Festival in London. Mr. Mengelberg is the conductor of the famous Concertgebouw Symphony Orchestra of Amsterdam, which is one of the noted organizations of Europe, and he has won special renown as an interpreter of Richard Strauss'e music. Max Fiedler, who is a graduate of the Conservatory of Music at Leipsic, acquired his first fame as a pianist, but soon developed his talents as a conductor. He is one of the stars of the baton who has repeated in Parie, Madrid, and St. Pstersburg, where he has for five seasons had the direction of a series of symphony concerts, the success he found with the Hamburg Philharmonic Orchestra. Dr. Ernst Kunwald of Frankfort wae at first an operatic conductor, and was selected to produce the Wagner music dramas in Spain. He was later conductor of the opera at Frankfort and Berlin, but following the example of Weingartner, Richard Strauss, and Nikisch, was able in 1903 to devote himself exclusively to concert conducting. Fritz Steinbach of Cologne succeeded Hans von Bülow as conductor of the Meiningen Orchestra in 1886, and remained in that important post until 1902. For the last three years he has been conductor of the Gürzenich Symphony Concerts of Cologne. He is noted as an interpreter of Brahms'e music.

Boston, Sept. 29, 1905.

THE Mother Goose myth still flourishes despite the inexorable truth, and visitors from Oshkosh, Kalamazoo, and other remote points daily stand in reverence about the tomb in the Old Granary where lie the remains of Mrs. Elizabeth Goose, as though she were indeed the author of the nursery rhymes which have for 300 years delighted the youth of France, England, and the United States, and which some classical scholars pretend to find in the oldest Greek.

And the curator of the Old South Meeting House is daily put to his trumps, as the saying is, by strangers with guide books in hand who ask to see the reproduction of Mother Goose's house on Pudding Lane, which for a long time occupied a place in the gallery of the old shrine of patriotic memories.

But the model house is no longer there; it was torn down some fifteen years ago to make room for more valuable mementos of the ancient days. No one now within reach seems to know who built this house. Dr. Samuel A. Green, the encyclopaedia of local history, asserts that it was of modern origin, and there is no doubt of the correctness of his statement. In the early days of the last century he says a Frenchman named Duchesne occupied his leieure with constructing wooden models of ancient housee, but the doctor is very careful not to say that a model of the Goose house was among them; indeed, ae will be seen hereafter, it is impossible that it ehould have been. These models were for a long time stored in the rooms of the Massachusetts Historical Society, but in 1870 they were removed and put in a building on Milk Street, and in 1872 the great fire destroyed them root and branch.

It was in 1875 that the work of "saving" the Old South began under the auspices of an association composed largely of women of sentiment and patriotism, who made of it a museum—as it remains to this day. Among the relics of antiquity which were collected for the purpose of attracting visitors there appeared before long the model house of Mother Goose, before referred to. Who designed it or who put it together is not now known; it was evidently, however, patterned after the Shakespeare house at Stratford-upon-Avon.

Regarding the association of Mrs. Elizabeth Goose with the tales there is also interesting doubt. According to the late William H. Whitmore, whose inquiry was most complete, they had their origin in France. The first English edition was, he says, printed in London in 1760, and he repeats the interesting suggestion that Oliver Goldsmith assisted in the editing.

The great popularity of the "Melodies" in America is ascribed to the editions which were published in this city between 1824 and 1860.

The myth sets forth that Mrs. Goose, whose maiden name was Foster, was born in Charlestown in 1665, married in 1693, became a member of the Old South in 1698, and died in 1757. The date of her death is recorded on her tombstone, and may be deciphered to-day. Thomas Fleet, a printer doing business on Pudding Lane, now Devonshire Street, married her eldest daughter, and in her later life Mrs. Goose made her home with them. When her first grandchild was born the old lady was much delighted and spent much of her time in singing songe and ditties, which are said to have been of her own composition. This to entertain the baby.

Tradition goes on to say that Mr. Fleet, being a quiet sort of man, was annoyed by this and did all in his power to stop it, but in vain, and then, resolved to turn the annoyance to good purpose, he collected the ditties and published them under the title, "Songs for the Nursery, or Mother Goose's Melodies for the Children."

Still another version has it that the wife of one Isaac Vergoose (1639) was the original "Mother Goose."

It seems to have been The Boston Transcript which gave first publicity to what has been above termed the "myth." In its issue of Jan. 14, 1860, The Transcript published a statement based upon a remark made four years earlier by John Fleet, a grandson of Thomas, to the effect that he had seen in the library of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester a volume published by Thomas Fleet and entitled as above. Diligent search of that library made then and at intervale since has failed to bring the precious volume to light, and thue subetantiate the claim of the Fleet family, but Mr. W. A. Wheeler "took enough etock" in it to incorporate it in his "Noted Names of Fiction," and thus set it going among recognized literary standards.

Whether Elizabeth Goose's poet-mortem claim to fame be just or unjust, her descendants of a later day, some of them at least, have supported it. One of them, Mr. James Bartlett Wiggin, of this city, published as recently as 1894 a volume of ditties entitled "Father Gander'e Songs." He used to say that his ancestress was a peculiar woman, and, the family tradition was, made a habit of singing much.

It is also interesting to learn that the Goose family owned all the land on what is now Washington Street, between West and Winter Streets, the most valuable part of the Boston of the present day.

Henry Merwin Shrady's Washington for Brooklyn

Equestrian Statue of the Father of His Country at Valley Forge for the Williamsburg Bridge Approach.

SOME years ago a statuette of Washington, shown at Starr's on Fifth Avenue, was noted in this journal for its original treatment of a subject which has occupied the painters and sculptors for more than a century. It represented Gen. Washington at Valley Forge. The originality did not consist of any striking or fanciful departure from what is natural, or any attempt at symbolism. The horse was very still and the rider even quieter. But the sculptor expressed in the arrangement of the great coat the effect of cold, and in the treatment of the head and features the psychic state of the commander at that period of ebb in Colonial affairs—not indeed despair, but melancholy bordering on despair.

The sculptor was Henry Merwin Shrady, and the statuette won him the commission for the equestrian Washington of heroic size, which will stand at the eastern approach of the Williamsburg Bridge.

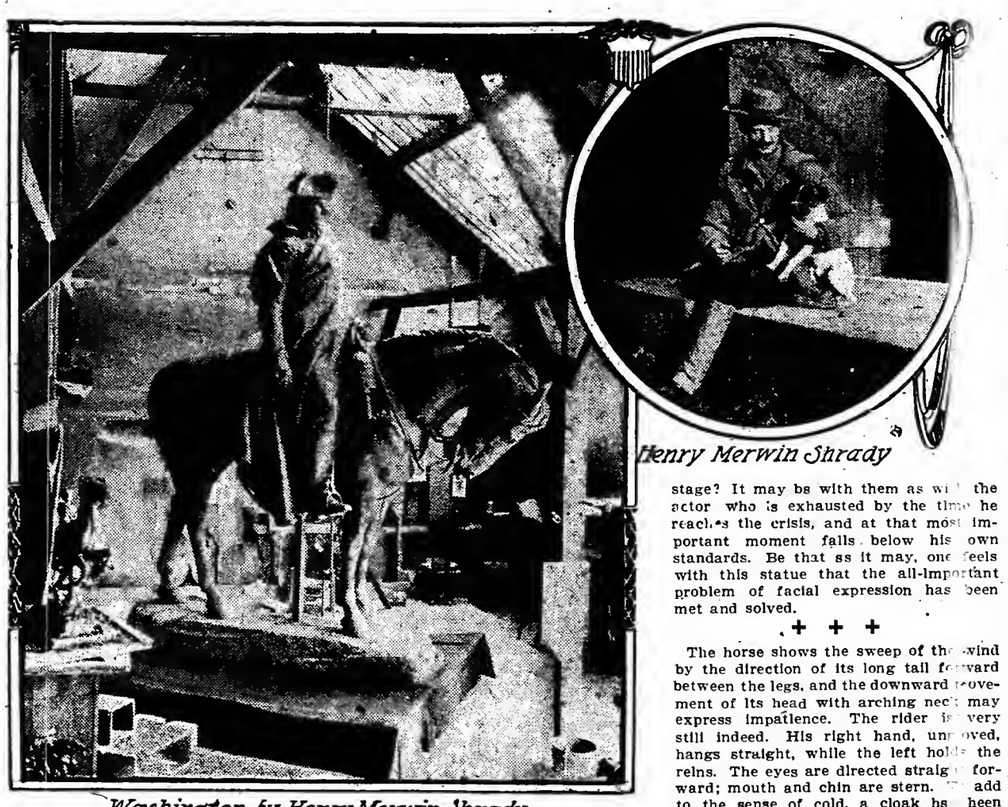
During the years that have passed since then the conception which he struck out in the statuette has been maturing in the sculptor's mind. What is proper to a statuette is not always fitting in a monument, and Mr. Shrady has found good reason to depart in various particulars from his original sketch. It is one thing to model for an object which is to decorate a mantelpiece or the table of a drawing room, but quite another for a charger that stands ten or eleven feet high and carries a man larger than the largest giant known, the whole group of horse and rider, moreover, elevated in the brilliant sunshine on a pedestal fifteen or twenty feet above the street level! In the latter case there must be study of masses and of grand lines such as would be lost in a small object seen close at hand, where the finer points can be accentuated without harm to the composition as a whole.

+ + +

"Washington at Valley Forge" is just nearing completion at Mr. Shrady's farm, near Elmsford, where he has put a big barn in requisition as a studio and built a second studio for further work. Elmsford is a picturesque hamlet to the east of Ardsley-on-Hudson, and lies astraddle of the valley of the Sawmill River, a desultory stream that meanders between tree-clad hills and ranges of pasture land, with here a fine gray face of stone cropping out beneath the overhanging woods and there a rank of ancient trees that skirt the old valley road. Among his horses and dogs, cows and chickens, the sculptor lives a country life far away from the dust and noise of town, and thus escapes the constant interruptions that beset an artist in the city. The dark clay model of the Washington, as one may see from the illustration, fills all of one end of the big barn-studio, the rest of which is littered with sketches, in wax, clay, or plaster, of horsemen nude, cavalrymen in uniform, lions and dogs, and the thousand and one articles that go to the preparation of larger models—which themselves are half-way halts between the pencil sketch and the completed monument.

+ + +

Notable deviations from the original idea in the statuette are the position of the horse's head, which has been lowered in a natural movement in order to make the figure of Washington more completely seen from the front, and the collar of the great-coat, which in the statuette stands up close behind the head, thus adding to the impression of cold and windy weather, but in the monument is bent back enough to show the head and most of the queue. The face is also different. It expresses more perfectly the grim determination of the man. It has also a certain hollowness of cheek, as compared, for instance, with Houdon's statue in Richmond or the well-known bust by him; for it is the face of middle age rather than of old age, and of a man engaged in a struggle rather than the well-to-do landowner and President. This is a point that might well be dwelt on, considering how rare it is that in large equestrian statues the face has any definite expression at all. One might suppose that for large monumental work sculptors imagine the expression unimportant. Or does it arise from the difficulty of coping with the hundred questions of pose, dress, movement, and gesture, so that the artist, leaving the face to the last, is mentally exhausted when his model reaches that stage? It may be with them as with the actor who is exhausted by the time he reaches the crisis, and at that most important moment falls below his own standards. Be that as it may, one feels with this statue that the all-important problem of facial expression has been met and solved.



Washington, by Henry Merwin Shrady, for Brooklyn End of Williamsburg Bridge

Henry Merwin Shrady

+ + +

The horse shows the sweep of the wind by the direction of its long tail forward between the legs, and the downward movement of its head with arching neck may express impatience. The rider is very still indeed. His right hand, unmoved, hangs straight, while the left holds the reins. The eyes are directed straight forward; mouth and chin are stern. To add to the sense of cold, a cloak has been wound about the torso, leaving the arms free and allowing certain oblique lines of its folds to tell very distinctly in the composition. So far the statue has not been seen by the sculptor under the broad light in which it will stand, but before it goes to the foundry Mr. Shrady will take occasion to get it in the open and study it carefully from every point of view under such conditions. His newly built studio has many appliances the old one lacks, such as a revolving stand strong enough to carry heavy models, one also that can be run out on a track into the open whenever there is need.

Another difficulty which sculptors experience is to make due allowance for height above the normal level of the eyes. A statue should be modeled differently according as it is to stand ten, twenty, or thirty feet above the street. In the present case the horse has been modeled unusually long in the leg, in order to allow for the perspective when seen on its tall pedestal at the bridge end on the Long Island side.

Another illustration shows the sculptor seated with a favorite fox terrier at the door of the studio barn as he appeared when just back from a walk with his gun. The pockets of the hunting coat, however, are empty; for your artist is rarely a shot. The country about Ardsley and Elmsford is tempting to those who love to tramp it, for the little hills beckon one to see what is beyond them, and from almost any one of the higher points a glimpse may be caught of the Tappan Zee or of Long Island Sound. Not far from the Shrady farm is the spot where Paulding and Van Waert bagged that promising soldier André, and here and there among the orchards peep out houses which stood there during the Revolution and knew the joys of the cattle raiders and the scouts from the British camps.

Brooklyn is likely to feel proud of the Washington when at last it is mounted on its pedestal in full view of the thousands swarming to and fro over the new bridge. Once in bronze, it will be much more impressive than it now appears against the dark interior of the studio. The unveiling will be a grand function, which will accentuate the steps that one by one are being taken to bind together the dislocated parts of Greater New York.

Mr. Shrady is an example of success in early life almost without a parallel in the annals of American art. He is very young to have won such a monument as the Washington for Brooklyn. But in a competition open to all American sculptors he also obtained the great Grant monument for Washington, on which a quarter million of dollars will be spent. The jury was so much astonished at his success and so alarmed at his youthfulness that they decreed a second competition between him and an older sculptor who had won second position in the finals—a departure from precedent to which another artist might have declined to submit. Mr. Shrady, however, routed the doubters by taking the lead for the second time and showing that, notwithstanding his youth—a fault he was sure to cure in time—he could plan a grand monument at least as well as, and perhaps somewhat better than, those competitors who cast doubts on his ability to grapple with such a task.

+ + +

The Grant monument is still in its beginnings. It includes a wide platform, large enough to serve as a reviewing stand, whence the President can review troops, and two large pedestals at the ends to carry groups of cavalry and artillery in bronze. On a tall pylon in the centre is to stand the equestrian Grant. This monument will take many years to model in its manifold details, and will be so placed at the capital as to harmonize with the latest plans for the laying out of Government buildings in Washington.

Her Complexion in Danger.

Unconsciously have some negroes shown humor. As an example witness the following case of motherly solicitude: A little colored child, very dark, suggestive of polished ebony, ran out of a small house. A moment after the window was thrown open and a woman of color called after the child:

"You, Martha Washington, come here and put on your yellow sunbonnet, or you'll be tanned as brown as an Injun."

CLYDE FITCH CONDUCTING A REHEARSAL---HIS KNOWLEDGE OF WOMEN

(See Pictorial Supplement.)

I SAW Clyde Fitch while directing a rehearsal of Viola Allen and her company in his new play go through the same artistic fruition that comes to a painter who paces his studio in a restless passion of feeling because the spirit of the woman whose portrait he is painting evades him because he cannot give his canvas the touch of life that comes later, suddenly, on the end of his brush.

The dramatist's advantage over the painter was obviously greater because he had actors and actresses who could weave their brains into a semblance of the picture he wanted, but the interesting fact was the same, the fact that a delicate inflection he sought evaded him, that the picture as he saw it would not come to life on the stage.

I confess I never quite realized the creative artist Fitch must be till I construed him at rehearsal.

His sensitive understanding of a woman's irresolute nature of those evasive intuitions that seem to guard and guide her, I knew had made him the most successful interpreter of modern women in the modern theatre.

+ + +

There is scarcely an actress of any celebrity he has not measured to a play, and in all these complex personalities he has caught the spirit of each woman herself and forced its naturalness into her acting.

He knows it is the woman who confirms most vividly in the theatre the illusion of power and passion. It is the woman who fastens upon us the heart-tones and all the bantering witchcraft of undiscovered sources of feeling across the footlights. I am not forgetting the artcant that forces upon us an untruthful axiom that all is assumed in acting.

In the bigger dream we call life they are the same, it is women who make its real surprises, it is women who give it heart and comfort, or darkness and confusion, and so it is in the theatre, where all that is seemingly poetic in the actor is but the movement of a woman's plot.

The essential ingredient in a play is the woman.

+ + +

Clyde Fitch has seized upon this essential in the ceaseless conflict of the sexes, clung to it positively as an elemental representation of fact in fiction, and has contributed immensely to a naturalness on the American stage which makes good acting in his respect for femininity.

Like some portrait painters, he paints women better than men, because they are artistic mixtures of themselves, while another painter is rendered helpless by their delusiveness.

I said that Clyde Fitch understands the modern woman, but he understands her by no means at her best; he denies to her many of her heroisms and her lyrical moods of vain tragedy, because they are as absurd to him as they are secretly to the woman herself. He is not blinded by her because nature has stamped him a man, though to most men it is her art that conquers; it is her art that he misses and in his foolish way demands.

Clyde Fitch at rehearsal does one thing that no stage manager I have known can do, he becomes womanly, he disarms the actress in the woman, and makes the woman, not the actress, a part of his play picture. No man can do this except at the expense of his dignity, but your artist's dignity is never more serious than a child's. Clyde Fitch can be as conscious of inharmonic dignity in man as any one else.

"I suppose I get up there and make an ass of myself," he said, waving his hand toward the stage; "but I find I can get my effects only by directing things myself."

I was not exactly surprised to hear Miss Viola Allen tell me what a wonderful man is Clyde Fitch, but I was impressed, because somehow or other Miss Allen had always seemed to me a woman of lyrical mood, an actress with genuine poetic demands on art. So, when she said to me in the white glare of day that Clyde Fitch was "such a rock of strength," I threw off discretion and tried to climb up to him.

I did not succeed; I don't think it can be done except at the expense of true wonder. This does not mean that he is not artistic, nor that he does not know just what he would like in his own plays, but it does mean that as a stage manager he is not so very different from others I have seen. If dramatic authors are ever permitted the license that Clyde Fitch executes for himself in his contracts, I am quite sure the stage would suddenly become a rostrum of intellectualities, where to-day the actors even are scarcely ever permitted to arouse it in themselves.

There are playwrights who scatter their manuscripts with enlightening suggestions. Tradition, (a monstrous old octopus that has squeezed art and artists to death times out of number,) promptly suppresses the author, to the glorification of the actors' instinct for the centre-field.

+ + +

The thing that Clyde Fitch has insisted upon so justly is the fact that the stage of a theatre is a playwright's easel, where he alone should be held responsible for the picture he exhibits.

The art of acting is subservient to the art of supplying the material to act on. But where Clyde Fitch has insisted other playwrights have entreated; where he has had the assurance, others have had the respectful timidity of artistic regard for the actor's science in stage-lore and limelight effects.

I am quite sure that there are a great many men and women writing plays who could rehearse a play just as well as Clyde Fitch if they would only insist upon it.

Miss Viola Allen, like her fellow-artists among women of the stage who have produced plays by Clyde Fitch, is surprised to discover that an author can know so much about the technical directions of acting, and, having so long supported the legend that authors are mere obstructions after they have had a play accepted, she applies a very ordinary fact to the genius of Clyde Fitch, while it is literally a latent possibility in the author of any good play.

+ + +

It is not Clyde Fitch's fault that this glory is thrust upon him. He assumes the laurels of a situation which he has forced because he has the artist's faith in himself, not because he considers himself a wonderful stage manager.

Before Clyde Fitch ever reads his play to the company he has accomplished a thing more difficult than acting, for there is no task in art so amazing in its perplexity of effort as the task of writing a play. That there are playwrights who commit five-act crimes with a profligate ease does not affect the artistic virtue of a good play.

Clyde Fitch has not always written good plays, but he insists on rehearsing them, good or bad, so that if his play fails he must shoulder the sin manfully, entirely alone.

Miss Allen told me that what surprises the actors when Fitch rehearses or reads his play is the power and vigor of his temperamental interpretation.

He is a strong reader and his memory of women is remarkable. That Clyde Fitch is willing to expand this way of course pleases the actor, as any intelligent suggestion of acting always does, is not by these tricks of mannerism or speech that the play is improved a little.

The most powerfully dramatic situation on the stage needs but the simplest reading of it to seize the plastic sense of the actor.

The mimicry and tonal emotion that Clyde Fitch effects in the reading of a play may seem authoritative color to the actors, but it cannot be so impressive as a severe subjective rendering would be. The author should never seem mistrustful of the actor's version. He may guide, but he cannot interpret.

I do not share the legend of the Rialto that proclaims Clyde Fitch as a marvelous reader of his own plays.

"I read my play to the company because I am asked to. If they receive it well, if I hear a little applause, I am more hopeful than if it is received in silence," said Clyde Fitch, and that is why I suspect there is some insincerity in applause.

When the company assembles for the first time to hear the dramatist read a play they only suspect the parts they are to be cast for.

"Possibly the man engaged to play the footman may imagine himself in more important character as he listens to the play," said Clyde Fitch, "but there is a matter soon settled afterward."

He smokes about a hundred cigarettes to an act at rehearsal, and though this is not in his contract, it is an unwritten privilege.

+ + +

Miss Viola Allen seems exceedingly obedient at rehearsal, as all actresses will be when the author is acknowledged to be the man who knows what his picture should be.

"How many steps do I take?" she asked, and Clyde Fitch was on his feet measuring the theatrical perspective of a love scene.

He knew what he wanted, he had calculated the foregrounds and the backgrounds of his picture, and of course he delighted in the artistic adjustment of the figures on his canvas. Still; all this other stage managers have done, are doing, every day.

+ + +

There was really nothing exceptionally original in the mechanism of a Fitch rehearsal, except that he stood out before me, a valiant pioneer of the new system, that will entitle an author to his own ideas. Clyde Fitch is especially good at the archaeological adornment of his plays.

"One chair that I introduced in an oak room has kept the Grand Rapids furniture factories busy ever since," he said. "I do try for exact details. I overheard two ladies discussing a scene in 'Her Great Match,' and I was gratified to hear them acknowledge the pleasure they had found in the furniture of the room, its arrangement, the colors, the little delicacies of service, and so on. Sometimes I am abused. I heard a woman say, 'Goodness, here's another one of those Fitch plays. I am so tired of them,' and I promptly got out of hearing. Even drapers misunderstand me. I had one of them arguing with me the other day that I was not strictly in period. 'You are getting a Sir Joshua Reynolds effect,' he demurred, and I had to impress upon him that I yearned for just that effect, and no other."

"Do you find the actor responsive to your endeavors?" I asked.

"Always, so far as his personality will allow. Sometimes I find it quite hopeless to get the right effect, and then I smile and say, 'Very good, dear boy, very good indeed.' I suppose I am misunderstood, but I have antiques and things of that sort. I have built three very beautiful houses and filled them with objets d'art; in fact, all my royalties go into such things," he said apologetically, it seemed to me, as though it were tainted money and should be donated to art.

Miss Allen appealed to my discretion with an assurance that any one who denied to Clyde Fitch the honors of a great dramatist did not do him justice.

My assignment being merely to construe him at a rehearsal, it revealed him nevertheless to be a man of sound creative genius, with no especial eccentricity of manner, but with a temperamental assurance that balked at no suggestion to the actors, and though wavering sometimes as to certainty, never failed in confidence.

Miss Allen's manager told me, among other things, that a set of draperies ordered for a background by Clyde Fitch was costing them $600.

"Will the 'road' appreciate this?" I asked.

+ + +

He smiled a wan, thoughtful smile, and said simply: "Mr. Fitch demands such things in his contract, as he retains the right to approve the selection of his cast."

The lesson of which is this, let the playwright hold tight to the spirit of his play; let him surrender it so cautiously that his contract shall not compromise its artistic lineage.

Let him insist, as Clyde Fitch does, that the stage of a theatre is the playwright's easel.

DUTCHESS COUNTY HAS A REAL DAUGHTER OF THE REVOLUTION

UP in the little town of Pawling in Dutchess County there lives an old lady who enjoys the distinction—sufficiently rare in the twentieth century—of being a real daughter of the Revolution. She lives in the outskirts of the village, rarely leaves home, and avoids publicity of any sort. She was with difficulty persuaded to unveil a tablet, which the inhabitants of Pawling erected, on Saturday, Sept. 16, to mark the site where Gen. Washington once made his headquarters, when operating in the vicinity. The "Kane House," where the General stopped, since destroyed, belonged to a loyalist named John Kane, whose property was confiscated by the Americans after the close of hostilities. The unveiling of this tablet was an occasion of much local enthusiasm, in which this old lady entered to the full.

Mrs. Laura A. Stuart Sherwood was born in the town of Sherman, Fairfield County, Connecticut, in 1800, and is consequently now 96 years old. She seems rather to resent inquiries about her age, and evidently still believes that every woman is as young as she looks. Vigorous in body and mind, Mrs. Sherwood performs some manner of work every day and takes an active interest in the affairs of the hour. She holds the theories of her Puritan ancestors about the sanctity of labor, and it is, no doubt, due to her free life in the open that she has reached so great an age. She not only can, but does read without glasses. Her memory is very fresh and goes back with ease to the days long before the era of railroads, when local produce was carted to the nearest town on the Hudson River and then shipped to New York—and when herdsmen drove their cattle afoot to the city. She modestly disclaims any distinction for being so closely related to remote events of history, and is apparently unaware that there is anything unusual or particularly interesting about being a real Daughter. It was with considerable reluctance that she consented to have this brief sketch appear.

"My father, Silvanus Stuart, was born in Sherman in 1756 and lived in that neighborhood all his life. He was just a plain farmer, and never went far from home. So far as I know, the Battle of Danbury was the only fight he was in."

The battle of Danbury, it should be explained, took place on April 26, 1777. A great many stores and provisions had been collected at this town, which the enemy desired to seize. Gen. Tryon (formerly Gov. Tryon of New York) was placed by Howe in command of an expedition of about 2,000, which proceeded from the city up the Sound. It landed on the shore of Fairfield County and marched to Danbury. It was to check this advance that the minute men of the county were called out, after the manner of the more famous men of Lexington two years before. The small band of Fairfield County farmers, hastily collected and poorly drilled, made a gallant resistance; the popular Gen. Wooster was killed at the first onslaught. But they were for the time forced to fall back before the British. The Continentals, however, saved a part of their stores before evacuating the town. Gen. Arnold, who arrived shortly after in the vicinity, finally succeeded in defeating Tryon at Ridgefield.

"My father was 21 when he fought in the Revolution. We have often regretted that we have no portrait of him, but they weren't so fond of having pictures then as we are to-day. Father died in 1849."

This last was said without any evidence that the speaker considered it at all remarkable for a man born at the beginning of the French and Indian war to have lived beyond the termination of the war with Mexico.

Mrs. Sherwood remarked that she had not always lived in Pawling. When young she taught school in various places in Dutchess and Litchfield Counties, and accordingly she feels at home all over the surrounding country, though, of course, at present she rarely makes calls. She does not, though, by any means avoid society, and neighbors frequently gather at her home to pay their respects, drink a cup of tea, and talk over matters of local interest. Mrs. Sherwood and her equally hospitable daughter are always ready to receive guests. Mrs. Sherwood has repeatedly been urged by relatives to join the Society of the Daughters of the Revolution, where, of course, she would be a distinguished ornament as well as a venerated member, but as yet she has not done so, though she approves fully of such patriotic organizations.

Mrs. Laura A. Stuart Sherwood.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY

Don't make the mistake of believing that the girl with dreamy eyes isn't wide awake.

You can always flatter a very young man by telling him he resembles some popular actor.

The fellow who tries to "act smart" is either cordially hated or greatly admired.

If you are going to sit down and wait for something to turn up, be sure you are armed with a meal ticket.

There is generally more excitement in one novel than the average man meets with in his whole life.

When a girl gives a wedding present she feels that she is merely casting her bread on the waters.

It doesn't pay to cry over spilled milk, or to crow over it, either.

Virtue that has never been tried isn't the kind that takes people to heaven.

After a fellow has bought candy and flowers for a girl for a whole year and has taken her to the theatre once a week, and still finds that he has enough left for his lunches, he feels that he can afford to get married.

Some men have so much self-esteem that it makes them stoop-shouldered to carry it.

There are people who divide their time between patting themselves on the back and kicking themselves.

Love that lives on beauty alone will soon starve to death.

The fellow who never does anything is the one who can always tell how everything ought to be done.

Don't place too much confidence in a man's opinion of himself. The ass can make as much noise as the lion.

Things are not always what they seem. Many a doormat with "Welcome" worked into it has an ugly bulldog sitting on it.

Some Snakes Mr. Ditmars Has Known

Bronx Park Reptile House Curator Disposes of Some Popular Fallacies Regarding Serpents---Hypnotic Power All Nonsense---As to Their Intelligence---Poisonous Snakes the Latest Evolution.

THE average person has a strange, undefinable antipathy to snakes; it amounts to more than antipathy, really—it is a shivery, creepy loathing for which the senses supply no adequate explanation, nor mere courage an antidote. Scriptuarians tell us that this instinctive emotion of horror at the sight of serpents was bequeathed to man as a result of certain events in the Garden of Eden some years ago. However that may be, the fact remains, pure and simple. Nor, indeed, with few exceptions, are the various animal tribes exempt. Lions, tigers, panthers—all give the "poison people," or in fact snakes of any kind a wide berth. And the other day in the Bronx Zoo, just to demonstrate this, the keepers took from the large mammal house an orang-outang, a husky brute with a chest like a barrel, and placed him in front of a rattlesnake's abode in the reptile house. The orang fell to the floor in gibbering horror, and did not eat all day.

Strange it is, then, to talk to a man who fears not the reptiles of the order Ophidia; who, on the contrary, has a profound regard for them, who understands them better than they understand themselves; who loves to handle them, and who sees in their vermiculations the very poetry of motion and in the markings of their skins nature's most beautiful and lavish display. Such a man is Raymond L. Ditmars, Curator of the reptile house in the Bronx Zoological Park, who began the study of snakes in boyhood, and who since has carried his investigations into almost every country in the world.

One suffers the destruction of several serpentine illusions in a brief talk with Mr. Ditmars. Things you read in childhood's nature books or books of travel melt into sheer nonsense under his calm first-hand knowledge and snake logic—and it's hard to have illusions killed. But the curator of reptiles does it very nicely and gently, and in exchange gives facts almost as interesting.

As, for instance, when you question him as to stories concerning birds that have been so hypnotized by snakes as to walk down their throats, Mr. Ditmars smiles softly.

"Yes, yes, I know," he says, blandly. "That is the common belief, but it is far from true. Snakes have no hypnotic power—none whatever. Here it is: You are walking across the street, and suddenly you look up and see an automobile bearing down upon you. You are tied to the spot with fright. So it is with the poor little bird suddenly confronted by his hungry snakeship, lying in wait upon the limb of a tree. See—the bird is too frightened to fly. But"—and here is where the exchange comes in—"some snakes will allow birds to roost on their backs without exhibiting any desire to have them anywhere else. Take the Mississippi River water snake, which eats only frogs, for instance," &c, &c.

Mr Ditmars talks while he works among the glass houses of the reptiles. It is no part of his duties to play snake charmer before an admiring public; so he performs what he has to do in the morning before the visiting hour. And if what he has to do among those snakes each morning could be done by any other than a very excellent snake charmer, then the writer has observed in vain. There is something almost snaky about the movement of his arm as he thrusts it into a copperhead's case to arrange interior decorations and conveniences. Possibly the copperhead thinks that arm is a snake; at all events, it does not seem to mind. In fact, the curator is so matter of fact about it all, so deft, so quiet and quick, that one sees no reason, really, why the copperhead should mind. It was a villainous looking thing, too; a yard long, with a flat, coppery head and brown and yellowish stripes.

"I did a rare thing with him once," said Mr. Ditmars. "In a spirit of folly, I suppose you might call it, I held him in my hand while a photographer took a time exposure picture. In handling poison snakes, you know, you must lift them so as to have no pressure anywhere. Snakes are all stupid, and if you gently insert your hand under them and lift them up, they cannot tell your hand from a stick. As long as they feel no restraint you may carry them about as you would a kitten. But—let them feel so much as the pressure of a finger, and they strike; and you know you never can see a snake strike—lightning is not swifter. Well, that is the way I held this copperhead—and oh, yes, I forgot to say that the hand must not tremble. When the picture was taken I dropped him quick, and for the first time I noticed that I was wet with perspiration from head to foot. I have not done that with a poison snake since. Why? Oh, because I am a married man now and have children to think of." Here the curator exhibited the picture. He seemed very proud of it; in fact, he did not hesitate to admit that he was proud.

"I got this snake, by the way, not over three miles from the Times Building. Didn't know they had deadly, poisonous snakes so near the metropolis as that, did you? Well, it is so. All the deadly copperheads in this zoo I caught not three miles from Forty-second Street. It is just below Fort Lee, between the road on the top of the Palisades and the river. I go out every once in a while in my motor car just after sunset, and in the twilight I catch them as they cross the road. No, not in my hand; in a loop of twine. Yes, indeed, the woods are full of them over there, and I wonder that this fact is not more generally known."

Thus speaking, Mr. Ditmars approached the rear of a rattler's cage with a nice fresh rat. You could see the snake coil up to strike, while a whirr like the buzzing of insects emanated from the rattles on his quivering tail.

"All right, Pete, be good," he said, thrusting in the rat and walking on.

"Does he know you?" we asked. "You called him by name."

"No, of course not. Snakes have no intelligence. I might as well have spoken to a telegraph pole. Well, no, I was not quite accurate in that statement—you will see a form of intelligence among the larger snakes, the rock pythons and the boas. As a general thing they are good natured and docile, and are inclined to recognize good treatment from bad, and I think grow to have a certain liking for the man who feeds them—at feeding time."

Near by was a cage containing a twenty-five-foot python getting ready to crawl out of its skin. Mr. Ditmars remarked that this serpent was very good natured, and proceeded to prove it by reaching in his hand and patting the diamond-scaled head. And the python looked actually pleasant, as though he expected something good to follow it.

"He will bite if he gets mad, and his teeth would make a fearful tear, but there is no poison to fear. They butt quite hard with their heads, these snakes, although not as hard as a strong man could hit with his fist"—exit all belief in Mr. Kipling's terrible Kaa, who used to butt down stone walls. But the snake man did admit that this snake could crush a man to death if it caught him in its folds.

+ + +

"You might call rattlesnakes the most recent snakes," said Mr. Ditmars. "All poison snakes are of more recent origin than non-poisonous snakes. They represent a certain process of evolution, as I figure it out. Centuries hence, or aeons hence rather, most snakes will be poisonous. But at the same time poison snakes have no intelligence at all. For that matter I have never seen signs of affection in any snake; yet I have seen snakes—not poison snakes—so docile that you could tie them in knots—do everything you wished with them. But docility might mean anything other than intelligence. Serpents in fact are the lowest in order of intelligence of all reptiles. I rank them this way—tortoises, alligators, and crocodiles, lizards, and then snakes.

"You will notice curious things about big snakes, which, as I have said, do give frequent evidence of a sort of intelligence. This twenty-five-foot python, Jim, for example, will eat only out of my hand—I don't know why. Big snakes take just such a kink as this very frequently. We lost a twenty-eight-foot python recently because of this. He took the notion of refusing food unless it was handed to him. Snyder was taken ill, and I was on my vacation last Summer and neither of us returned until two weeks had elapsed. We had neglected to tell the other keepers about this snake's peculiarity, and as a result he refused to eat all the time we were away. We returned to find him starving; he died a few days later.

"Jim, here"—pointing to the python—"is good only when he is ill. When he is feeling fit we are always having to dodge blows from his head. But he invariably has trouble shedding his coat, and at such times he is quite happy to have us come in and steam him from head to tail. Once his nose became sore from battering at the bars of his cage, and no one was more patient than he while we were dressing the bruised snout. But now he is well, he wants none of us, as you see.

"Snake charmers use these big snakes because, as a rule, the larger species do not much care what one does with them so long as they are well fed. Any person could handle them as well as the average charmer could. I have seen very few charmers who used the genuine poison article—only one, in fact—good old Rattlesnake Jack. The snakes he had were rattlers all right, and they had their fangs, poison and all. He depended upon that deft, sticklike motion of the hand when picking them up. He would slide his hand gently under them, and up they would go, as nicely as you please." Here Mr. Ditmars demonstrated with a little ring snake. "Now you would suppose that those snakes in time would have become used to him. But they never did. He had to be just as careful with them the hundredth day as the first day of their acquaintance. I sent Jack two Florida diamond backs, and he liked them so well that he sent to Florida for two more.

"He was a good, light-hearted fellow, Jack was, and he at last came to have a sort of contempt for his rattlers. The last time I saw him was in Boston, and it was then that I noted his increased insouciance. I spoke to him after the act was over, warning him that he was playing with death and that they would get him if he were not careful. In fact, I advised him to give up the rattlers and do his act with non-poison snakes. But he laughed. The next day, the very next day, before a matinée crowd—Jack was showing off and making extra flips of his hands—one of the Florida fellows struck him. Right on the finger it was. Jack lived a day, I think. It was the second time he had been bitten.

"No, I've never been bitten by a poison snake. Of course, I've had hundreds of narrow escapes, but I always considered a miss as good as a mile, and never worried. I usually, when working among them, take care to keep out of striking distance, which is two feet, a third of their length. If I have to lift them, I just shove a nerveless hand under them and move them to the desired place. A nervous man has no business with snakes.

"Contrary to general belief, snakes are not hostile to man; that is, they do not seek battle with us. Any snake will invariably run from a man if he has time. A rattler will never go after a man; they strike when they are stepped on, or when they become so frightened in the presence of man as to arouse their instincts of self-preservation; but neither rattlers nor other snakes kill for the love of killing. As to rattling their tails in order to give warning, I consider that sheer nonsense, however. All snakes quiver their tails when excited, and the fact that one species has rattles, and thus give warning of their presence, does not argue that they rattle with design to warn human beings. No one really knows what those rattles are for.

"I like rattlesnakes; there is something husky and powerful and beautiful about them that incites admiration. They have a certain amount of self-possession, too, and they do not get nervous and ready to fly off at the handle the first second—see how long Rattlesnake Jack handled them before they finally struck him to death.

"I have no respect for the cobra," continued the curator, pointing to a hooded viper, standing almost on its tail, its flat head swaying as though in a gentle wind. "They are as nervous as a stretched wired, and strike at a puff of wind. I don't like them at all. No, I never handle a cobra. They do not impress me as a rattler does; they have none of a rattler's husky build, and seem to me less snaky. Cobras really belong to a harmless species of serpent life, and why nature endowed them with the most deadly poisonous attributes of all vipers I cannot fathom.

"There are strange things to be noted in the habits of these poison snakes that perhaps might be attributed to that sixth sense which some scientists believe is possessed by poisonous snakes. One of them is a desire to be alone. Poison snakes are not at all gregarious. Last month we had a fine prairie rattlesnake in that case there. Two more snakes were received, and I put them in with the prairie fellow. None of the three would eat after that, and all took care to occupy separate corners. Finally I had to take out the new arrivals and place them by themselves. They began to eat then, but the rattler whose home had been invaded never ate again, sulking in a corner until it starved to death. Why, I don't know. Snakes have no maternal instinct either. The minute little snakelets come into the world they are spurned, and I might add that they are as well provided with fangs at their birth and are as generally dangerous as their parents.

"There is nothing to fear from non-poisonous snakes. I handle them as I would pieces of rope. But then, I suppose I naturally take to snakes and consequently like them."

Mr. Ditmars went on to explain the lavish colors with which nature has endowed them, but the visitor could not share the enthusiasm of his host. There was something about the writhing reptiles, the thick foliage of their quarters, the heavy odors of bloom, that got on his nerves, and once when the curator touched him on the shoulder he jumped three feet from the floor.

What New York's Mayoralty Has Done for George Brinton McClellan

WHAT has the Mayor's office done for George Brinton McClellan in his twenty-one months' incumbency?

"It has turned half of my hair gray, has added twelve pounds to my weight, and has ruined my signature," is the answer made by the Mayor himself a few days ago when the question was put to him.

This half-sad, half-humorous summarization has far more truth and depth to it than would appear at first glance. Prematurely gray hair does not run in the McClellan family, and yet the Mayor, who will not be 40 years old until the 23d of next November, is more than half gray. When he took office there was scarcely a white hair in his head. During his earlier career, first as a college man, then as a newspaper reporter, as Treasurer of the Brooklyn Bridge, as President of the Board of Aldermen, and then as Representative in Congress, the Mayor always was a great exerciser and spent as much of his time as possible in the open air. As a result, the close confinement of the Mayor's office has added weight to his frame, in spite of all that he has been able to do to keep it down.

And his signature! Well, if any other man had the task of signing his name 60,000 times in one year, as the Mayor had to do last year, his penmanship would deteriorate about as much as has Mayor McClellan's. Most of the signatures were attached to municipal bonds, and the result has been most marked. Let any one examine the first signature of George B. McClellan after he became Mayor, as it appears in the oath book at City Hall, and then examine one of his hurried signatures of to-day. Formerly every letter was clearly defined; now only a short, wavy line indicates the letters following the capital "C" of his last name, while the letters which precede it look like one of the figures on a Chinese laundry ticket.

These may be but light straws but they give some indication of the stress and strain under which a man works in the Mayoralty chair. True, the Mayor persuaded the last Legislature to allow him to designate his chief clerk to sign bonds in his stead, but he has not relieved himself of any of the hard work and constant attention of the routine of acting as housekeeper for the city.

Housekeeper for four millions of people! That's what the Mayor's job amounts to, and it is a pretty thankless job in most ways, too, with little future for the incumbent unless he establishes precedent for himself. Oblivion is the position of an ex-Mayor of New York, generally speaking, and this is especially true of Tammany ex-Mayors. So far George B. McClellan has made such a record that he received complimentary mention last year for the Presidency and bids fair to be the leading candidate next year for the Democratic Gubernational nomination. In accomplishing this, as well as in winning to his support for the coming campaign papers and men who bitterly opposed his election two years ago, Mayor McClellan has shown himself an unusual figure in the Mayor's chair, one whose career is by no means over.

Housekeeper for four millions of people! That is the task to which George B. McClellan settled himself down after the first six months of his incumbency in the Mayor's office. That, too, is the task which will confront him for four years more after the first of next January unless the absolutely unforeseen happens, or unless he should be called to higher posts before the opening day of January, 1910.

For after a Mayor has been Mayor for six months, and has shaped the policy of his administration, the office resolves itself into a humdrum routine of seeing that the streets are well cleaned, that the city is properly policed, that the water supply is kept adequate to the growing needs of the people, that schoolhouses are erected with sufficient rapidity to care for all children of school age and that the efficiency of the fire department is maintained. To these routine duties must be added the task of keeping the municipal expenditures down to the lowest reasonable point, that of increasing the transit facilities of the municipality abreast of the growth of population, and that of regularly inaugurating the construction of new bridges to closer weld together the island boroughs which make up the metropolis of the Western Hemisphere.

Is not this routine deadly? Is it not enough to add gray to the hair of any active, athletic man who by it is compelled to spend his working day in the confines of an office, or in a crowded room listening to arguments of delegations of his people? It is no wonder, to those brought in daily contact with his Honor, that his hair has turned gray and that his weight has increased by his lack of outdoor life.

Yet, more than this, the twenty-one months which George Brinton McClellan has spent in office have broadened his statesmanship, have developed his executive ability, have quickened his judgment, and have given him a decisive power in matters both great and small which are far more than unusual in one of his comparative youth.

Always quick to grasp a proposition, to consider it from various sides, and to arrive at his own conclusions, Mayor McClellan unconsciously has developed this tendency since taking up the Mayoralty, and he has acquired a facility for quick thinking, quick acting, and accomplished fact which only too few of his predecessors have known. Coupled with this is an unfailing courtesy, a genial man-to-man frankness, and a red-blooded manliness that appeal to every one who comes in contact with him.

"Schools? Ah, there is one of the gravest problems we have to face in this city," said the Mayor a few days ago. "It is the solemn duty imposed on us that we shall provide accommodations for all children of school age, and yet so rapidly does the school population increase that the task is herculean. When I made my canvass for the Mayoralty I promised a seat for every child of school age, and they shall get it.

"It takes time to do it, but the schools have been planned, and, too, they have been built in sufficient number to care for the school population we had when I was elected and for much of the subsequent increase. But this increase in the school population has been out of proportion to the estimates, and so there still is far too much crowding. However, an enormous number of sittings will be ready by next Fall, and then an entirely different state of affairs will be found.

"You must consider the time it takes to start a school building and to get it ready for educational purposes. In the first place, with all of the red tape that had to be unwound, it takes six months after determination is reached to build a schoolhouse before a condemnation commission can get through with its functions and allow the Corporation Counsel to proceed to take title. That takes another three months, and still another three months is required to get the plans ready for the building work. So a year is consumed before ground is broken. Then two years more elapse before the building is finished, and ofttimes it is not equipped then for school purposes.

"Talk about a business administration! It is an impossibility with all the red tape that surrounds public office at the present time. No man can conduct a public office as he would a private business, for it is an impossibility ninety-nine times out of a hundred to take a short cut to any desired result. It takes weeks and months and years to unwind red tape, and it is killing to business energy. It is delay on every hand, and the hands of the city official may be tied at any time on the slightest pretext by persons who want delay for their own purposes. Legal entanglements, one after another, can be thrown around the Mayor and heads of departments, and we are rendered practically powerless.

"Take, for instance, the Brooklyn Bridge terminal. Time after time we were ready to act, only to be bound hand and foot with red tape, and even now there is no telling when we may be able to get that work, of priceless value to the city, completed so that our people can get the benefit. It is galling for one to be obliged to sit and see the days and the weeks and the months slip by when he knows what ought to be done and when he knows just how it ought to be done, only to find that red tape and legal obstacles may encompass him at any time, and often at the crucial moment.

"This holds good of the Brooklyn Bridge terminal; it holds good of school buildings, of bridge construction, of subway work, of everything which the city may take up in the improvement line.

"This is a state of affairs which I did not, could not, realize when I took office. Now I know it only too well, and I guess this as much as anything else has put the gray in my hair. Think of the work under way and what its immediate completion means to this city. We are spending millions of dollars on our bridges, the Manhattan and the Blackwell's Island Bridge now being well under way. These new bridges are absolutely needed to weld together the boroughs and to relieve the Brooklyn Bridge of some of the strain now being put on it during rush hours. Then we are preparing to spend a couple of hundred million dollars on rapid-transit plans, more subways, and more tunnels; the police force is being enlarged, the fire-fighting forces increased, and the Street Cleaning Department kept up to date. This alone is enough to bring a man to a sobering sense of his responsibilities and to make him feel that it is work, hard work, and nothing but work to head the government of a city of the size and importance of New York.

"It brings him to a realization that a few months in this office remodels a man, broadens his ideas, develops any instinct for executive work, and it gives him the hope that he had worked to place the office and himself on better and firmer lines."

With a half-sigh the Mayor glanced hurriedly to the clock on the wall, brought himself back from a retrospective to an official attitude with a jerk, pressed the buttom on his desk, and prepared himself to give heed to the protests, the advice, the requests, and the reports of the dozen or more of important official and semi-official visitors who had accumulated in the ante-room while his Honor was discoursing on his official life.

THE SAMURAI'S BOAST

The chief pride and glory of the Samurai (retainers of the Daimios or feudal lords of Japan) was their carrying two swords, the Katana, a long sword, for active warfare, and the Tanto, a short sword, reserved for hari-kari in case of disgrace. The Satsuma rebellion in 1877 was undertaken for the continuation of this privilege, taken away by edict the preceding year; and its calamitous but traditional ending by the use of the Tanto for the suicide of the conquered is called to mind by the present spirit of the Japanese. Both swords were decorated with poppies and dragons. F. G.

Mukden, 1905.

And a poppy for every Russian whom its writhings rest upon:
For the soul of my sire's Katana is in each bursting shell,
And long may his time-dulled Tanto await my call to Hell!

We have wrestled with Western warfare, we have conjured with Western art,
And we wield with our Western death-blow the wrath of the Samurai's heart:
With the weal of a wealth of Katanas we welcome your wine-worn line,
While each rent in our own would widen with the Tanto's woe divine.

For had the sluggish Muscovite our brave ranks crushed apart
The Cossacks a Japanese bullet had found in each Japanese heart,
And had the fleet we shattered attained our lotus strand
It had found but a fire-swept nation, it had conquered a corpse-strewn land.

We have mimicked your Western morals till we master them to your blame,
Till our care of each Czar-killed peasant is praise to the Samurai name;
Yet we laugh at your fond superstitions, though proud, for our Emperor's fame,
To graft on our Samurai valor all your virtue—but none of your shame.

In a decade we grafted your ages, but of Peking's loot we took nought;
Baled to Berlin and Paris, yes, London, and pocketed into New York.
China's myriads we'll hurtle against you, for we Samurai grinned in disgust—
Content that the Katana's glory had yielded the Tanto to rust.

You boast of a Chivalry—stifled; you speak of a Christ-Spirit—dead,
And we'll wear you with war and with commerce till you barter your women for bread;
Still only Katana's Spirit shall rule us in field and in mart,
And alway the Tanto be sheathed save disgrace and the wearer to part.

And when we have swept through your nations as neither the Turk nor the Moor,
And the Tanto is sheathed forever—the Katana shall ever endure:
We will show you the Spirit you've squandered, you shall waken the Faith you deny,
For all the World shall be grafted with the HONOR OF SAMURAI. FRED GOODWIN.

SOCIETY AT HOME AND ABROAD

OCTOBER brings with it a suggestion of the abandonment of country and suburban life, and the taking up of the thread of the yearly routine in town. Houses are being opened slowly, one by one, and a few more equipages with two men on the box are seen on the avenue and in the Park. Well-known faces are everywhere, and Sherry's and Delmonico's at luncheon time are almost as gay as were the Casino at Newport and the Kebo Valley Club at Bar Harbor a month ago. It has been a lively week on Long Island, with the Mineola Fair and kindred attractions. So far the Meadow Brook meets have been attended by only a few of the hunting set women. Mrs. James L. Kernochan has not been in evidence, as she is slowly recovering from the shock of the automobile accident of last month. Mrs. Ladenburg is due at Meadow Brook any day, however, and Mrs. Smith Hadden, Mrs. Scott Cameron, Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, and other young matrons are settled there for the Autumn and Winter. It is the fashion now to attend the hunt in a motor, and prejudice against these useful if faddish vehicles is rapidly disappearing among the Meadow Brook people.

This week will see the reopening of Belmont Park, and from now to the close of the season there will be much entertaining at the clubhouse. Idle Hour will be one of the last of the great country estates to open, and, as already arranged, the Duchess of Marlborough will be entertained there before she sails for the other side. The Duchess is one of the many American women living abroad who have come to New York for treatment for ear affections. Deafness of late has become alarmingly prevalent in England and France, and has become quite a fashionable complaint. The Duchess was obliged to postpone her visit to Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane at Lenox on account of the slight operation performed at a sanitarium last week. This will give the Lenox season an extra week, as she will be the guest of honor at a large house party on Oct. 6. The Duchess is with her mother this Sunday at Hempstead.

The return of the Gerrys was an event in society last week. The Gerrys have been abroad all Summer, it being the first time in many years that they did not spend the season at Newport. They were in England in June and afterward on the Continent, in the Engadine and at Carlsbad. They will spend a short time at their country seat at Delaware Water Gap before settling in town for the Winter. Miss Gerry and her father are at Newport for Sunday. On the same ship was Mrs. Cooper Hewitt, who has been on the other side for some months. Mrs. Cooper Hewitt made an extensive tour of the Continent, motoring over Germany and Switzerland and France and a part of Italy.

The next arrivals will be the I. Townsend Burdens. The Harry Payne Whitneys reached New York Wednesday. Miss Dorothy Whitney has been abroad since a short time after the death of her father, the late William C. Whitney. She is now about 18 years old, and will in all probability make her début in New York society this Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney will entertain for her. Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney will remain at their Long Island estate until late in the Winter. Mrs. Payne Whitney is in mourning for her father and will not be seen in society this Winter. Mrs. Almerie Paget did not return with the Harry Payne Whitneys. She and her husband have settled permanently in England.

\+ + +

Cornelius Vanderbilt has sailed from Southampton in the yacht North Star. It will touch at Madeira and be there for some days before coming to New York. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt will make the voyage across on an ocean steamer and she will arrive within the next week in New York. She has engaged a suite of rooms at the Hot Springs of Virginia for October and will be one of the New York set which is now represented there by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Philip Lydig, and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson.

\+ + +

Tuesday is the date set for the wedding of Henry R. Winthrop and Miss Alice Babcock. The list of ushers and the best man and matron of honor were given in THE TIMES last week. On Saturday last Mr. Winthrop gave his bachelor dinner at Sherry's. The wedding will be a most notable reunion of society. Besides those who will go by train to Stowe House, the Babcock place on Long Island, the entire hunting and country set will assemble in motors and equipages of all kinds. The Stowe residence, which is now occupied by the Babcocks, is a beautiful Italian villa, and the drawing rooms, where the ceremony will take place, are large and commodious. Few town houses have such facilities for entertaining on an extensive scale. Miss Babcock has been the recipient of some splendid gifts, and in the corbeille are tokens from two American Duchesses—the Duchess of Roxburghe and the Duchess of Marlborough. Among the guests who will be present will be the Duchess of Marlborough, Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Gerry and the Misses Gerry, Mrs. Ogden Mills and the Misses Mills, and, in fact, the "pick" of the Social Register.

\+ + +

Miss Frederica Webb and Mrs. W. Seward Webb have been in town arranging for the Pulitzer-Webb wedding, which takes the form of a large house party, at which there will be a representative gathering of Vanderbilts. Shelburne Farm is famous for its entertaining, and few country houses in America are arranged to accommodate so many guests on the lines of an English house party. Miss Webb has also been the recipient of some gorgeous gifts, notably from her relatives and from Mr. and Mrs. Pulitzer. She will have around her at the wedding Mrs. Wheelock, who was Miss Dix; the Misses Sloane, Miss Twombly, Mrs. Pruyn, and others of the Bar Harbor and Adirondack circles. Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt are up from Biltmore for the wedding. The list of names of the bridal party has already been given.

\+ + +

Just at present the Hudson is one of the centres of social activity. With Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor at Ferncliff, Mrs. Ogden Mills and the Misses Mills at Staatsburg, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Vanderbilt and Mrs. Elliott Shepard at Hyde Park and Scarborough, Mr. and Mrs. Starr Miller at their place near that of the Ogden Millses, and, until the end of this week, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Garrisons, there has been no lack of a good time. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould are at Ardsley. Mr. and Mrs. George Gould have left town, and to-day they are at and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly are keeping open house. Miss Twombly, who has been visiting in Connecticut, has returned home. Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Olin are back from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wilson will return to-morrow from Newport. Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Wilson, Jr., are going South for the Winter.

\+ + +

Sir George and Lady Murray have gone to Boston to visit relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Roberts are with them. They will be in town some time before sailing for Europe. George Charles Montagu, M. P., and Mrs. Montagu terminate this week their visit to Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Leggett at Ridgeley Manor. They sail next week for Europe. Mrs. Leggett will remain at Ridgeley Manor during the Autumn and until the Christmas holidays. Lady Vernon Harcourt, widow of Sir William Vernon Harcourt, is at present the guest of Mrs. T. Shaw Safe, at Newport.

\+ + +

Miss Iselin, who has been abroad visiting her sister, Mrs. John Beresford, returned last week. She is at New Rochelle, where Col. and Mrs. De Lancey Kane have been for the past fortnight. Adrian Iselin and Miss Nora Iselin are visiting at Lenox.

\+ + +

Mr. and Mrs. Orme Wilson were in London last week, homeward bound. They will be among the arrivals in New York within the next few days. They have been absent since early June. Mrs. Samuel Newhouse is to be in New York for the Horse Show. She sails in the latter part of the month. Mr. Newhouse has been able to occupy their Hempstead cottage during the season of the races at Belmont Park. August Belmont has been in Newport on a visit to them. No date has yet been set for the wedding of August Belmont, Jr., and Miss de Golcuria, but it will be an early event of the Autumn.

\+ + +

The musicales which are to be given at Tarrytown at the residences of Mrs. Archbold and Mrs. Villard are among the entertainments arranged for that section of the Hudson River villa colony. There will be a great deal of music this Autumn and Winter at the different suburban resorts. Morristown is to have its Saturday afternoon concerts at the Whippanny Club; Mrs. Lorillard and Mrs. Alexander and other hostesses will give musicales at Tuxedo. Mrs. Mackay's musicale at Harbor Hill last Saturday has given the cue for this method of entertaining, which is so popular in England. Mrs. Mackay will not come to town until Jan. 1. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay have taken the Bronson residence for another year, as already stated in THE TIMES. Mrs. Frederick Bronson remains abroad. Her sister, Mrs. John King Van Rensselaer, now makes her home in Philadelphia. Mrs. Mackay, Sr., and her sister, the Countess Telfener, were in England last week. The Countess, who has been very ill, is improving rapidly.

\+ + +

Mrs. Glen Collins, her young son, and her mother, Mrs. Schenck, are due to arrive to-day from Europe. They passed last Winter in Paris. For the present they will live in New York.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

MRS. WILLIAM ASTOR is represented in the Pictorial Supplement by a reproduction of her portrait by Carolus Duran—the original of which is in the drawing room of her town house—and by photographs of her town house and of her Newport villa, Beechwood.

Mrs. Astor was, before her marriage to the late William Astor, Miss Caroline Schermerhorn, daughter of William Schermerhorn, a wealthy merchant, and a granddaughter of Henry White, who married Ann Van Courtlandt. She was born in this city and most of her life has been spent here, though for a number of years she has passed the latter part of the Winters and the Spring months in Paris.

She can trace her ancestry back to Jacob Janse Schermerhorn, who settled on Manhattan Island in 1636. Her marriage to William Astor took place soon after she made her début, and that début was a notable one, as a few old New Yorkers now living recall. It was a coming-out ball given by her father, Mr. Schermerhorn, in his splendidly appointed residence on Lafayette Place, and was a notable event.

For years Mrs. Astor occupied a residence in Fifth Avenue on a part of the site where now stands the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mr. Astor died in 1902, leaving the greater part of his immense fortune to his only son, John Jacob Astor. Mrs. Astor, however, has always had a large income, derived from the property and money she inherited.

For some years and since leaving the former house near Thirty-third Street Mrs. Astor has occupied the huge white marble house in upper Fifth Avenue, north of Sixty-fifth Street, facing Central Park. Col. John Jacob Astor and his family occupy the southern part, that seen most plainly in the picture, while Mrs. Astor occupies the northern half. This double residence is practically one. The two parts are built exactly alike. A large arched double doorway, usually concealed by heavy tapestries, opens between the two entrance halls, uniting them when large entertainments are given by either Mrs. Astor or her daughter-in-law; each main hall also opens in the rear into the ballroom and picture gallery.

Beechwood, her Newport villa, is a charming house, spacious and somewhat old-fashioned as compared with the wonderful modern residences built there by new-comers, who call them villas. Beechwood, however, is an ideal villa. Its grounds are filled with trees, and there is a large flower garden in which there are old-fashioned flowers.

Mrs. Astor always gives a large ball on either the first or second Monday in January of each year and several dinners of twenty-four to thirty covers each. At Newport her entertaining consists chiefly of dinners. A year ago this Summer she gave a ball in the new ballroom of Beechwood, but this year omitted it.

Mrs. Astor has a remarkable collection of diamonds, including some superb gems once the property of the ill-starred Marie Antoinette. She almost invariably receives alone at her annual balls, but last year Miss Constance Knower, who later married Mrs. Astor's grandson, H. Coleman Drayton, was honored by being asked to receive with her. She also always stands near the famous Duran portrait in her drawing room, and wears her famous stomacher and other diamond ornaments. In appearance Mrs. Astor is of middle height, of dignified and graceful carriage, and has a sweet, kindly face.

Mr. and Mrs. Astor had four daughters and one son. The eldest daughter, who died more than twenty-two years ago, married James J. Van Alen, leaving two daughters, Miss May Van Alen and Miss Sara Van Alen, now Mrs. Robert Collier. Another daughter, Miss Helen Astor, married J. Roosevelt Roosevelt and died some fifteen years since, leaving two children, one of whom was a son, and the other, Miss Helen Roosevelt, married Theodore D. Robinson, son of Douglas Robinson and a remote cousin of her own. Miss Augusta Astor married J. Coleman Drayton, and several years after her divorce from him became the wife of Ogilvy Haig of London, a brother of Gen. Haig. There were several children, including Henry Coleman Drayton, who married Miss Knower and Miss Caroline Drayton.

The fourth and youngest daughter, Miss Caroline Astor, married M. Orme Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, and brother of Mrs. Ogden Goelet, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Lady Herbert.

Col Astor married Miss Ava Willing of Philadelphia, then as now noted for her beauty. They have two children—Vincent, now a lad of 14, and Alice, a baby of about two years.

It was Mrs. Astor's custom to give on the wedding days of her children abundant dinners to the inmates of the New York hospitals, and her contributions to charity are liberal.

Mrs. Astor always has No. 7 box in the parterre row at the opera and appears in it regularly certain evenings in the week. Further along, near the stage, are those of Mrs. Orme Wilson's father-in-law, R. T. Wilson, and of Mrs. Ogden Goelet. Mrs. Astor shares her box with her son and the younger Mrs. Astor.

The Countess of Minto, whose picture appears in the Pictorial Supplement, is the new Vicereine of India, her husband, the Earl of Minto, having been appointed to succeed Lord Curzon. Before her marriage she was Miss Mary Grant, daughter of one of the private secretaries of the late Queen Victoria. When Lord Minto was Governor General of Canada, Lady Minto and her daughters, the Ladies Eileen and Ruby Elliot, visited at Newport and are well known to a number of prominent New Yorkers. In Canada she was remarked for her genial kindness as a popular hostess, and for the success of her many entertainments. Lord Minto was appointed Governor General of Canada in 1898, and was succeeded last year by Earl Gray. He served with the Turkish Army in the Russian war of 1877, and later in the Afghan war. Educated at Eton, he took a degree at Cambridge, where he rowed in the university eight.

Mrs. J. Frederic Pierson, a picture of whom with her little girl may be found in the Supplement, was Miss Susan Miles. The Piersons make their home there year round at Tuxedo, where they have a cottage, but visit at Newport in the Summer, where Mr. Pierson's parents, Gen. Frederic Pierson and Mrs. Pierson, have a cottage.

Miss Charlotte M. Gillet, a photograph of whom is reproduced in the Pictorial Supplement, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmslie M. Gillet. Her mother was Miss Susan V. Milnor and for years they lived in the immense, old-fashioned Milnor house, in East Twenty-fourth Street, but now occupy the house at 152 Thirty-eighth Street. Miss Gillet's marriage to Arthur Paul F. Adenaw, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius K. Adenaw, is set for Oct. 14 in Trinity Chapel.

James Henry Smith, a small picture of whom, with coach and party, is seen in the Supplement, has been abroad all Summer, but is expected back in October. He has spent much time abroad with his brother-in-law and sister, Sir George and Lady Cooper. Mr. Smith is the richest bachelor in society and is in early middle life.

Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., who sits by him, was Miss Adele Sloane, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Sloane. She is the brunette of the family.

Red cashmere with darker red satin dots trimmed with plain red broadcloth embroidered in different shades of red. Red hat trimmed with black velvet.

Black chiffon broadcloth wrap lined with white satin. The insertions down the front are white cloth braided in silver, and silver cabochons are used.

Gowns of the Moment.

THE Duchess of Marlborough (Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt) has been frequently seen in town with her mother, Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, during the past few days. She is as svelte and as youthful in face as when here two years ago, and looks twenty rather than twenty-seven, and the mother of a boy of ten. Her beauty is of the ethereal type, and the soft, fluffy, but clinging, trailing gowns in which she is usually seen are the sort best suited to her.

One of these frocks, worn at a smart Fifth Avenue restaurant at the luncheon hour, showed the soft, pale shades of blue, pink, and also white and black.

The frock was topped by a flat, round hat of bluish gray chip trimmed with pink roses, autumnal-hued rose leaves, and pale blue ribbon.

Resolved into its elements the gown was composed of white chiffon cloth having tiny hollow rings of black sprinkled over its surface. The chiffon cloth was arranged over a slip of pale blue silk of soft clinging quality, and there was a girdle and sash with long ends of the same shade of blue in liberty satin.

The skirt of the gown trailed slightly in the back and touched elsewhere; the lower half, or nearly half of it, was formed of scantily gathered ruffles of the chiffon about five inches wide, each edged with an inch-wide ruffle of white lace. Forming a heading to the lace on each ruffle was a pale pink liberty satin ribbon between an eighth and a quarter of an inch in width. At the knee line above these seven or so ruffles there came a seven-inch ruffle of white lace, dividing the lower ruffles from the upper. The upper ruffles extended from about the hip line to the lace ruffle, and were narrower than those below. The top of the skirt was slightly gathered at the waist line, and the rather narrow-shaped girdle of blue satin had its long ends falling directly in the back.

The gathered bodice had narrow ruffles finished with ribbon and silk to match those on the skirt, and these ruffles formed a fichu effect up the back, over the shoulders, and down the front. The V-shaped sections in both the back and front had very flat ruffles or slightly gathered bands of the chiffon, with the lace and ribbon going across the figure instead of up and down like the fichu. The stock was a transparent one of the white lace.

The sleeves were formed of ruffles matching those on the bodice, and were so arranged as to give the sleeves a puff effect. They ended the elbows above the long white gloves.

The hat worn by her Grace was a large, round, French sailor of very pale, bluish gray chip, raised at the back and having two folds of wide and pale blue satin ribbon brought from the crown out over the back brim and then under it, where they formed a large flat bow that faced the under back of the brim. Satin ribbon arranged in close loops over the bandeau filled up the space between the hat and the soft, wavy brown hair. A wreath of pale pink rosebuds and half-blown roses was set around the crown flat on the brim, and around them, or, rather, forming a mat, were sprays of rose foliage in reddish brown autumnal tones.

Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., lunching at Delmonico's, wore one of her always smart hats—a large, round chapeau with a round crown perhaps an inch and a quarter high. It was tilted a bit over the forehead and at the left. Starting from the front and sweeping out and then down and back at the left was a large bird of paradise plume in black with a long fluff of white plumage at the starting point.

The gown this hat topped was a black liberty satin with small white polka dots at infrequent intervals. Its sweeping skirt was trimmed with silver, while silvery white leaves that had the appearance of being embroidered on were probably fine silk applique.

The fitted bodice had a high, tight black stock with the silvery white leaves going around it. The top of the bodice was in loose folds and bands of the gleaming white leaves extended in the front from the stock to the bust line in a narrow vest effect. From the bust line down the bodice was very tight. The sleeves were full, and soft puffs at the elbow were drawn in tight with bands of the leaf passementerie. From just above each elbow at the back of the arm there fell a drooping puff of the silk with a single band of the leaves extending from top to bottom. Ruffles of white formed the finish to the rest of the sleeves.

The skirt was laid in fine tucks, plaits, or gathers at the top, but was very full at the bottom, and trailed in the back. The silvery white leaves outlined deep hollow squares fourteen inches deep at the bottom. This leaf border was a modified Roman key design; where the line wound around inside it was cut off short, so that it was more of a broken Roman key or square design.

A handsome hat just imported by a private customer of a Parisian firm, is a large, broad-brimmed affair of pale gray chip with a moderately high crown. The wide brim is raised only slightly at the left, and the hat is worn almost straight on the head. Two enormous roses shading from dull purplish in the centre to lavender at the outer leaves, and having grayish green foliage, are placed at the front of the hat, one resting partially on the edge of the top of the crown and the other on the brim, while the foliage spreads out against the crown and toward the right back. From under the top rose there starts a wide and long path of pale gray ostrich plume that sweeps back over the brim and down over the back. The bandeau, of which but little shows, is pale gray tulle, and under the brim at the left back is fastened a cluster of three small roses matching those on the front.

Mrs. Sidney Dillon Ripley, who will spend the Autumn abroad, lunched the other day in a smart Fifth Avenue restaurant in a simple mourning gown in which, however, she looked decidedly handsome. It was a fine voile with a round length skirt closely plaited at the top and trimmed between the knee line and the hem with three or four wide tucks.

The bodice shirred in at the waist line also showed a cross-tucked effect, and the somewhat scant, slightly puffed elbow sleeves carried out the tucked idea. Her hat was a small, smart affair, raised very much at the left and back, black, of course, as she is in mourning, and had a number of small black wings applied to the upturned portions, the tips of some of the wings extending down over her coiffure.

A smart driving coat just arrived from Vienna is really a redingote. It is a light brown cloth, the skirts, which come to within eight inches of the floor, are laid inside plaits three inches wide at the top by six at the bottom and pressed in very firmly. The coat skirts are simply hemmed and stitched and are absolutely plain. The skirts are set on to a rather wide-shaped belt of the cloth, stiffened and stitched and closing invisibly with hooks. This belt droops in a point in the front and is narrow at the back. The top of the coat is somewhat boxlike in cut and sets out a little over the girdle all the way around and has few seams. It is double-breasted, but is closed with a single row of three enormous buttons done in shaded brown and tan crochet. The collar is three inches wide and of much darker colored velvet, the inner edges meeting in the centre and the outer spreading apart in two points. This collar is embroidered around its edges in shaded gold and bronze thread.

The sleeves are quite full, being set in in plaits at the top. They are narrower at the wrists, and at that point are laid in plaits at the back, and turned-back puffs of the cloth six inches deep, with borders over an inch wide of brown velvet, embroidered to match the collar, roll back over the sleeves. These cuffs flare at the top, and each has two smaller buttons matching those on the body at the outside of the cuffs.

\+ + +

A small toque seen at Delmonico's was formed of light gray tulle. The tulle was in bands formed of tuck folds a quarter of an inch wide laid bias. The bands were three-quarters of an inch wide, and six bands formed the brim, the bands being so joined that the tucks formed a herringbone pattern. The crown was entirely of simple folds of the tulle going round and round. The toque was tilted over the forehead, and chou bows with short ends were set in under the back, and a coque feather in Sevres blue curled from the left of the crown over the back.

The Shackles on Dramatic Inspiration

Mr. Shaw's Latest Philippic in Its Relation to the Drama of the Times---Alfred Sutro's Discussion of a Social Evil Limited.

IT IS too early to determine whether Alfred Sutro's "The Walls of Jericho" will enjoy as much favor here as in London, but there seems every reason to believe that the play will have a substantial measure of prosperity. This is as it should be, for it has been constructed with exceptional skill. Its story, so far as it goes, is plausible, and its characters for the most part are human, even though they are, for the most part, disagreeable. The play is not without flaws. That indeed was to be expected in the case of an author who, despite some experience, is still something of a novice in the theatre. But its structural defects, surprisingly few, are more than atoned for by its many excellences of scene, situation, and character-drawing. It discusses an evil of a limited social sphere with some frankness.

It is singular, perhaps, that its reception by those who are called upon to pass the first judgment was possibly more varied than has been the case with any play produced this season. Final judgment must, of course, rest with the public. The failure of the critics to agree at the representation of a new play is not a reflection upon the critics. But it is a reflection upon the state of the drama, and often upon the men and women who are intrusted with the making or marring of the author's conception. Few writers, we imagine, will fail to be impressed, for example, with such a work as Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," providing its representation be even reasonably adequate, for here we have a tremendous struggle based on an elemental principle of existence, a great, overpowering, universal emotion of humanity, projected through the medium of the stage. Human customs may change, but the bedrock emotions have always been the same. And if there were more of the universal in our drama it would not be so difficult for intelligent men to get a more harmonious perspective on that drama. But the men who write the plays are content, for the greatest part of the time, to skim the surface of things—to write pretty little passages of mock heroics and mimic passion that bear about the same relations to the real that the penny picture card printed in eight colors bears to the actual scene it represents.

Life Viewed Superficially.

It is not the dramatic reviewer's province to pass judgment upon the morals of the community or its ethical standards or the means to its improvement. But the point is that we can have no great plays without a more sincere recognition of the real facts of existence. As long as our dramatists continue to treat life from its purely superficial aspect so long will our drama be hesitant and unconvincing.

Place a primary truth before ten men and you will be reasonably certain to find a unanimous recognition of it. When the dramatic power hedges, the critic is hard put to it in his search for the truth. Most of our plays are offered as entertainment, and upon the question of what constitutes good entertainment the authorities are more than likely to disagree.

The condition that exists at present is not necessarily a reflection upon our times, to the advantage of times that have gone before. The great dramatist has been rare in every age, and as a consequence the findings in dramatic criticism have been always more or less a problem. But to-day, possibly more than ever before, the critic finds himself called upon to pass judgment upon Entertainment pure and simple rather than dramatic art. And who shall be the final arbiter as to what is entertainment? The thing that makes one man roar with delight is received in stolid silence by his neighbor, the incident that evokes a flood of tears from one impressionable being is absolutely without the power to move another less emotional.

The Case of Mr. Sutro.

In Mr. Sutro's plays we have a case in point. The little one-act play, "A Maker of Men," contained the germ of an idea so movingly true, so suggestively human, that it was susceptible of development into a tremendously powerful drama, a theme that, if truthfully enlarged upon, might have become a classic of its kind. Here in a nutshell, as it were, we had a whole life story. But when the same author undertakes a four-act play he is overpowered with the necessity for making an appeal to the public in general, and he proceeds for three-fourths of the way along the familiar lines of so-called entertaining fiction. In "The Walls of Jericho" he has availed himself of the convenient license of arguing from the particular to the general, and in so doing he follows the lead of most of the modern playwrights. The generality of our plays will on this very account be worthless in the future for the student who seeks to find in them some reflection of the average of life of our time. Such vices as Mr. Sutro depicts are, perhaps, a part and parcel of life wherever men and women congregate in what we term, for want of a better phrase, polite society.

But the people and incidents of the great master tragedies are of little importance as compared with the vital truths woven into their fibre. Human virtue, vice, passion, despair, hope, fear—these are the elements of all great dramas. But most of us have long since given up the hope of applying the yard stick to any such dramatic output. We find the little foot rule of custom quite long enough for our purpose. We remember that our playwrights are seeking to entertain us for a day—that when their little day is done others will arise whose ambitions will be no larger and no more important. As a consequence we approach their efforts endeavoring to determine in how far they have succeeded in the task which they have marked out.

Enter Bernard Shaw.

For two years our theatres were almost entirely given over to the most senseless form of amusement—cheap, garish, witless musical comedy that was vainly projected in the belief that it represented the level of public appreciation. To-day the public welcomes a man like Bernard Shaw, and it suddenly develops that the word entertainment is not synonymous with vacuity. Mr. Shaw—sincere or insincere, as the case may be—has provided food for thought in his latest tirade against "Comstockery," his equivalent for American prudishness. We have been in the past inclined to regard Mr. Shaw simply as an irrepressible humorist. But is it not possible that in this philippic he has in reality put a finger on the one fault that has made our theatre for years such a weak and useless thing? Where would the great dramas of the last twenty-five years have come from if Norway, Italy, Germany, and France had not each provided its studies of topics which our playwrights dare not touch?

It is generally conceded by the idealists that the man or woman is not worth consideration who regards as indispensable a recreation which is in no wise instructive and can bring into his or her perspective no new food for reflection, whose search for entertainment is uncombined with some motive other than a desire to "kill time." What, then, to be the drama of the ideal, should our theatre mean to us? May it not comprise, firstly, amusement for those who need it; secondly, advice for those who will take it; thirdly, information for those who seek it; fourthly, remedy and redress for those who will be philosophers enough to ponder over it? Our social system is far from idealistic. There is something wrong with life. Bernard Shaw says concealment lies at the base of the trouble—Anthony Comstock denies the Shawism. "Suppress!" says he. Which are we to believe? How are we to mend matters?

Exposition Versus Suppression.

Mr. Shaw's advice, which has come like a blow out of the clear sky of his brilliancy and when we had all begun to regard him as a man without a purpose, a juggler of arguments for the arguments' sake, is worthy of consideration. He believes (or says he does) in honest knowledge of the pitfalls of life, and an open exposition of that knowledge—the younger the student the better. Mr. Comstock has shown his allegiance to his suppressing methods by many years of service and much accumulated data expressed in numerals. The question for the thoughtful man is this: Has Mr. Comstock diminished the evil to a sufficiently appreciable extent to warrant our pinning our faith to his method? Is there any real cessation of liberty at the core of things? Our municipal aspect may be more wholesome, but is it not perhaps a whited sepulchre, and has the standard of our morals as a people—as human souls and not as Boards and Institutions—been lifted by these means? Mr. Comstock declares he will suppress Mr. Shaw. Is Mr. Comstock doing a service or a great wrong? We have found no relief from the means that we have tried—in the name of fairness, why not try Mr. Shaw's?

It is so much easier to perpetuate one's pet vices if the word is hushed and each man is a pillar of society in the eyes of his neighbor, and, better still, of his wife and children. Such a man has no wish to see his kind paraded openly upon a stage, and the popular illusion of his respectability destroyed. In such a play as "Mrs. Warren's profession" Mr. Shaw lays bare a naked, shameful truth, and the all-wise censor of the public morals crys in a loud voice against its nastiness.

Some philosophic mind has said that it is Womankind who rules our morals—that man will be just what she requires him to be and no better. If she condones his faults and abets them, he continues to err. This is so true that it may be the fear of our wives and daughters being brought face to face with such a phase of life as that shown in the Mrs. Warren play, and in lesser measure in such a work as "Zaza," that is keeping the movement toward suppression alive. Does any one imagine that if our Domestic Woman could see over the threshold of her own little domain and find her Lares and Penates unmistakably with feet of clay that she would not rise in her might and enforce the demands for a moral house-cleaning? If an upheaval of vice and its exponent disciples can be helped to a culmination through the theatre, let Mr. Shaw, or any other fanatically inclined person, try his hand. "Let there be light."

The Theatre as an Educator.

But, it will be argued, the theatre is not the place to teach the lesson. Why not? When did the stage cease to be a great common educator?—when men became too self-satisfied in their own opinions to heed the lessons, when the playwrights, following their lead, substituted the prudish pose for the outspoken expression of real facts.

We would not willingly part from the simple plays with their sweet, gentle tales of gentle folk, living in a world half real, half of fairyland. But let us not be forced to a diet of treacle always. Let us have a drama of red corpuscles, let the men who write our plays face the problems of existence fearlessly and express them freely and openly. If the weak fall in the face of truth, what does it matter? Is there any less evil in the world as a result of a general equivocation? In those great Titanic upheavals which periodically shake the universe, has there ever been a thought of the tender weaklings who go down in the struggle? Some good may perish with the bad, but the ultimate result is beneficent to mankind.

Is an improved condition of affairs to be brought about by exhibitions of pretty pictures of the ideal domestic arrangement? That has been tried, and the greater evils still lurk hidden in the shadows.

If Mr. Shaw or any other dramatist treats these questions flippantly, insincerely, or in a manner calculated to cover the face of vice with an artificial enamel, no condemnation can be too severe. But is it not time that we come out into the open? Is there any one medium of expression whose voice is more eloquent than that of the acted drama? Does the pulpit reach a larger audience or one in more need of enlightenment?

We know that we have certain elemental emotions which are at the root of all human experiences. Yet we elect not to be told of them through the medium of the theatre. Instead we lose ourselves in a sea of frivolity which we know of old to be salutary to the conscience which prefers to be undisturbed.

Mr. Sutro has attempted to rouse that conscience. The pity of it is that the field he has chosen in "The Walls of Jericho." is so very small. It is a beginning, to be sure, but comparatively few of us are affected by these foibles of the Very Elite. When Mr. Sutro, then, lays his scalpel to the dissecting of a little corner of the body social he may be doing a useful service, but it is one whose value is extremely limited. Mr. Shaw asserts that he can do more. It may be for the general good to let him try.

We are much too squeamish in our drama. When that squeamishness shall have been overcome, it is possible that we may rear a theatre of monumental and lasting greatness.

Small Parks as Playgrounds

(See Pictorial Supplement.)

ONE of the principal things Commissioner Pallas has been most active in during his administration of the Park Department has been the enlargement of the scope of the smaller parks, particularly in the poorer sections of the city, as playgrounds. To his mind a playground in itself is not sufficient for the children and young men who are to enjoy them. In common with the modern philanthropist, he has realized that something more is necessary. And the results of the city's work in this field are shown in the pictures in the Pictorial Supplement. The playgrounds are not only fitted up with swings and sand piles for the littlest toddlers, but they are supplied with open-air gymnastic apparatus, tennis and volley ball courts, tether ball poles, [illegible] ball courts, and the last cry in athletics, the cinder path.

That big boys as well as little ones enjoy these places provided by the city for outdoor games is clearly shown in the pictures of the players and the crowds of spectators. It is a happy coincidence that the largest of this group of photographs presents a scene that the Park Department encourages by every means in its power—that of promoting the patriotic spirit. This girls' "flag drill" is only one of the many forms which the athletic instructors use to make the varied races that assemble in our public playgrounds realize they are living under the protection and the beneficence of American institutions. Indeed, from the number of flags bearing the Stars and Stripes seen on one of these playgrounds no one would have cause to doubt as to what country he was in.

A School of Household Industry

(See Pictorial Supplement.)

THERE is a little frame cottage in one corner of De Witt Clinton Park that owns to a name almost as long as the structure itself. The cottage is called "The School of Household Industry," and its purpose is to teach the things its name stands for to the little mothers of the neighborhood that they may be better cooks, better washerwomen, better ironers, better all-round housewives, in short, than they would be if, like Topsy, they had to grow up to such positions naturally.

+ + +

Of course cooking and household economy are taught in the big schoolhouses throughout the region touched by De Witt Clinton Park. But those studies must be pursued in a regular classroom. The charm about the "School of Household Industry" is that the place of study is what girls call "cute," and is so much more like a real home than any other kind of classroom could possibly be. The interior of this cottage is fitted up like the "living room" of many a tenement house, a room in which the cooking as well as the eating of the entire family is done. This gives to the girls "studies" in cooking, setting a table, and waiting on it a practical air that most studies in schoolrooms lack.

Outside the house is a "yard" fitted with clothespoles and lines, where the washing may be hung out to dry, after the work has been done under the watchful eye of a teacher of domestic economy. Judging by the enthusiasm of the pupils this novel little schoolhouse may be reckoned as a huge success.

YOUNG BUT OBSERVING.

A CERTAIN editor, living in St. Louis, is the father of a precocious daughter of five Summers.

But far from being elevated in the community's esteem by the quality of his offspring's gray matter, poor Donaldson is kept in a state of humiliation. The precocity of the mild-looking, blue-eyed little person, known in the neighborhood as "the Donaldson kid," runs to original undertakings, often startling in the outcome. If Donaldson ever "chirks up" a bit in his intercourse with the neighbors he is sure to be brought down shortly by some calamity traceable to the Donaldson door.

After long and tedious effort, the dwellers in that section of Euclid Avenue had succeeded in getting their block paved—with what satisfaction only those familiar with St. Louis mud can appreciate. The day after the Italian workmen had departed from the block one of the Inspectors came out and looked the work over, occasionally discovering an imperfect brick, on which he made a cross with white chalk.

The following day Donaldson, returning home for dinner, was thoroughly disguested to see the street practically torn up again.

"Well," he said indignantly to a couple of neighbors who stood viewing the scene of havoc, "what the dickens does this mean? Haven't we walked through mud long enough, so that we might be excused for having the path of a cyclone for a street?"

"I'd advise you to 'lay low,' Donaldson," said one neighbor, grinning broadly.

"What d'ye mean?" demanded Donaldson.

"Well, the dagoes were here to-day to take out the imperfect bricks, and Smith here says that after the Inspector went away yesterday his wife watched that kid of yours putting little white chalk crosses on bricks the rest of the afternoon."

It is related that this was Donaldson's last attempt to hold up his head.

Autumn Book List Number

THE NEW YORK TIMES

Saturday Review of Books

WILL BE PUBLISHED

a week earlier than last year, because of the earlier opening of the season in the book trade. This special number will equal, in the fullness and variety of its contents, the best of its predecessors.

The principal purpose of this annual number is to give to buyers of books, whether they are booksellers or librarians, or of that "general public" which is more important than either, a clear idea of the number and variety of the new books of each Fall season.

Indications point to an exceedingly busy and profitable book season. A carefully classified list of new books of the season in all departments of literature, with all essential facts for buyers as to title, author, publisher, and price, forms only one of the special features of this number. There will be a number of important articles touching the prospects of the book trade.

The greatly enlarged size of this number provides ample space, not only for the classified lists and the attractive display of the publishers' own announcements, but also for a much larger display than usual of reviews of good books by expert reviewers, and news and gossip of the literary world.

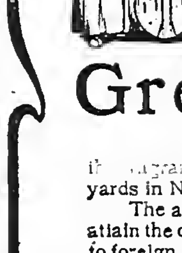
THE HISTORY OF CHAMPAGNE—No. 3.



A BENEDICTINE MONK named Dom Perignon, noticed that grapes from some soils imparted fragrance, others flavor, etc., to the famous Champagnes of Old France, and he hit upon the idea of blending the produce of several vintages.

All the delicate skill of Champagne's inventor, crowned by centuries of improvement, are known to the makers of

Great Western

Extra Dry

The age of these vineyards has made it possible to attain the chem[illegible] conditions of soil which have imparted to foreign Champagnes their peculiar quality.

This has not been accomplished in any other American vineyards, and is due to the long period of cultivation with scrupulous care.

Great Western is the finest American Champagne—the only one granted a gold medal at Paris.

Actually equal to foreign Champagnes at half the price. The duty, not the quality, makes the difference.

We invite comparison. Order a bottle and see.

a dramatization by Grace Livingston Furniss of Harold MacGrath's novel, Tuesday evening at the Madison Square Theatre.

an operetta by K. Lindau, J. Wilhelm, and Ernst Reiterer, Thursday evening, at the Irving Place Theatre.

TO-MORROW night De Wolf Hopper comes to the Lyric Theatre with his new comic opera, "Happyland." The piece has been much heralded, for it received the commendation of Boston and "the road," so that the verdict of New York will be watched with interest.

The score of this new piece is by Reginald De Koven, who is said to have been especially happy in his work, having provided some delightful musical numbers, while the book, by Frederic Rankin, is also reported to be fully worthy of the music.

The work is described as a "comic opera," and it is interesting to note that Mr. Hopper has never wandered very far from comic opera. He has not ventured much in the musical comedy field, preferring the more legitimate line. "Happyland" is announced as having a plot and music that, though not too high, is aimed above the average. Whether these reports are all true to-morrow night will decide.

The star plays the King of Happyland," which of course is a humorous character. Next to Mr. Hopper in importance is William Danforth, who plays the opposite part to the star in the rôle of the King of Altruria. The two together, each in a kingly rôle, have the comedy, and in the second act they are said to have a very funny duet, entitled "How I Love Flowers." Marguerèt Clark appears as the ingenue as the Princess Sylvia, while Joseph Phillips plays the Crown Prince of Fortunia. Estelle Wentworth is the prima donna of the company.

"The Man on the Box," Grace Livingston Furniss's dramatization of Harold MacGrath's popular novel, will be given its initial performance at the Madison Square Theatre Tuesday night, under the management of Walter E. Lawrence.

the life of a young man of good family and moderate fortune. At the home of his brother in the capital city, athirst for adventure, he plans to change places with the family groom and himself drive his sister and sister-in-law home from the embassy ball, meanwhile giving them a scare by reckless driving. He, however, drawe the wrong carriage call, and consequently the wrong carriage containing two ladies. His arrest for reckless driving and fine follow. How one of his victims pays his fine and engages him as her groom, and how he conducts himself in that "situation," with the attendant comedy in his contact with the "below stairs" element, affords the two hours and a half of complication.

The title rôle is in the hands of Henry E. Dixey as Lieutenant Robert Warburton, while Carlotta Nillson is Betty Annesley. The cast includes Sydney Booth, Lee Baker, John Wesley, James A. Bliss, Fred. W. Peters, Duane Wagar, Chester Beecroft, C. N. Shafer, Marie Nordstrom, Constance Adams, and Lily Carthew.

To-morrow evening Chauncey Olcott begins a limited engagement at the Majestic Theatre, where this popular comedian and singer will present for the first time in New York a new romantic drama written for him by Theodore Burt Sayre, entitled "Edmund Burke." Mr. Olcott will be seen in the character of Edmund Burke, who from a poor boy became a famous statesman.

In the first act he is earning his living as tutor in an English nobleman's family, and falls in love with the pretty daughter. The Prince of Wales sees the young woman and has her abducted. Edmund rescues the girl and returns her unharmed to the arms of her family. He goes into politics and becomes the idol of the people, but finds fame and fortune unsatisfying because they cannot be shared with the woman he loves. Just as affairs seem darkest the lovers are united, and all ends happily.

Mr. Olcott has composed several songs which he sings during the performance. They are entitled "Your Heart Alone Must Tell," "You Can Sail in My Boat," "The Little Bird's Story," and "Miss Mary."

+ + +

On Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday evenings at the Irving Place Theatre, the attraction will be the popular four-act farce, by Bernard Buchbinder, entitled "Er und seine Schwester." On Thursday evening, the three-act operetta, "Fruehlingsluft," by K. Lindau, J. Wilhelm, and Joseph and Ernst Reiterer, will be given. The company will be headed by Lina Abarbanell, who is said to be equally remarkable as the comedienne and a singer. Another interesting new member of the company will be Marion Ohla, who is to interpret a prominent part. Jo Hegyi, Richard Koch, Edmond Loewe, G. von Seyffertitz, Karl Knaack, and others will also take part in the interpretation of "Fruehlingsluft."

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

Maxine Elliott continues her successful engagement at the Criterion in Clyde Fitch's comedy, "Her Great Match," which enters on its fifth week in New York to-morrow night.

"Man and Superman," at the Hudson remains one of the permanent successes

in the city. Robert Loraine and his excellent company of players, including Fay Davis and Clare Bloodgood, give a delightful interpretation of the comedy.

Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company, presenting a revival of "Leah Kleschna" at the Manhattan, are playing to crowded houses, notwithstanding the fact of the unusually long run last season.

James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering in "The Walls of Jericho" seem to have won the favor of the public in their production of the English society comedy drama at the Savoy.

Joseph Wheelock, Jr., in the new George Ade play, "Just Out of College," begins his second week at the Lyceum to-morrow night. The piece is full of Ade types.

This is the last week of "Way Down East" at the Academy of Music, and the advance sale is reported to be as heavy as though it were its first season. The play is in its ninth year, and 365 days have been spent at the Academy.

Arnold Daly will continue to present Bernard Shaw's satirical farce, "You Never Can Tell," at the Garrick for another fortnight. At the end of that time "John Bull's Other Island" will be produced.

Margare Anglin in her performance of "Zira" at the Princess is playing to the capacity of that playhouse. Besides the telling work of Miss Anglin, the drama is otherwise interpreted by a worthy company.

Hall Caine has made a number of changes in "The Prodigal Son," now playing at the New Amsterdam. The production is elaborately staged, while Edward Morgan as Magnus gives a fine portrayal.

The opening of the dramatic season at Joe Weber's Theatre starts to-morrow night with the production of "The Prince Chap," which moves over from the Madison Square to make room for "The Man on the Box."

John Drew, in the Augustus Thomas comedy, "De Lancey," at the Empire, enters on his fourth week to-morrow night. Mr. Drew has a congenial rôle and the play is most amusing.

At the Bijou there is no change in the attendance and David Warfield plays "The Music Master" before capacity houses at every performance. The three hundred and fiftieth performance at the Bijou is not far away.

Raymond Hitchcock, in "Easy Dawson," begins the last week of his engagement at Wallack's to-morrow night. Following this engagement, Thomas Jefferson will present a revival of "Rip Van Winkle" for a brief run.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, in the revival of "Adrea" at the Belasco, is winning new admirers. This is the last week of "Adrea," a revival of "Zaza" being presented next week.

MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS.

Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dolly Dollars" at the Knickerbocker has found a good vehicle to display her talents as a comedienne. Miss Glaser begins her fifth week at this playhouse to-morrow night.

The new burlesque of "The Music Master" and the new edition of "It Happened in Nordland" are proving strong magnets with theatregoers at the Lew Fields Theatre.

"The Pearl and the Pumpkin," at the Broadway, with its large company, gorgeous scenery and costumes, draws large audiences. Harry Gilfoil is now playing the rôle of the Ancient Mariner.

Sam Bernard and "The Rollicking Girl" at the Herald Square have already celebrated their 150th performance, and tomorrow night ushers in the last two weeks of their engagement in town.

"The Catch of the Season," with Edna May, is proving a most substantial success. Miss May is delightfully dainty, and the quaint humor of the piece seems to appeal to the patrons.

In "The Rogers Brothers in Ireland" the comedians have found their greatest success. The Liberty is packed at each performance.

McIntyre and Heath in "The Ham Tree" at the New York still continue to play to large houses. They certainly present every auditor with a dollar's worth of laughter.

WITH THE STOCK COMPANIES.

F. F. Proctor's "all-star" Fifth Avenue company will be seen next week in Bronson Howard's Lyceum Theatre success, "One of Our Girls," written for Helen Chauncey Olcott and Edna Phillips in "Edmund Burke," Majestic Theatre.

Dauvray, and the play in which E. H. Sothern made his first pronounced hit. Amelia Bingham will play the title rôle of Kate Shipley, created by Miss Dauvray, and Charles Richman will be the Captain John Gregory, originally played by Mr. Sothern.

Gertrude Coghlan, J. H. Gilmour, Charles Dickson, William Norton, Gerald Griffin, Geoffrey Stein, Charles Abbe, Mathilde Deshon, Ralph Locke, and Albert Veazle complete the cast. The play is one of strong heart interest and deals with the experiences of a young American girl in Paris beset by a bevy of fortune hunters. It ran 200 nights at the old Lyceum and was revived the next season for a run of fifty nights.

+ + +

"All the Comforts of Home" will be the attraction at the Yorkville this week. Byron Douglas and Henrietta Brown, who appeared in the London production of the farce, are cast in the leading parts. They will have the support of H. Buchannan, Bradlee Martin, Jerry Keller, and Winona Bridges.

+ + +

"Squire Kate" will be revived to-morrow by the stock company at Proctor's One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Theatre, with Jessie Bonstelle in the title rôle. William Kelley will appear as Geoffrey Doone and Beatrice Morgan as Bessie, Effie Shannon's original rôle. Others in the cast will be Agnes Scott, James Wilson, and Robert Cummings.

+ + +

At the American "She Dared Do Right" is the offering for the week. The melodrama has a strong plot, which is indicated by the title of the piece.

+ + +

+ + +

+ + +

At the Metropolis, "The Beauty Doctor" is to play a week's engagement. The piece is billed as a musical comedy, with plenty of jokes and catchy numbers.

+ + +

"The Duchess of Dantzic," with Evie Greene in the title rôle, is the attraction at the Harlem Opera House this week. The company is practically the same as last year, while Holbrook Blinn continues in his former rôle.

VAUDEVILLE.

Lillian Russell will make her appearance at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre to-morrow afternoon. It is announced that at each performance Miss Russell will wear a different gown, each one "a triumph in the dressmaker's art." The gown she will wear to-morrow afternoon, so the management says, was made for Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. A new set of scenery has also been painted for the comic opera star's appearance, representing the interior of a palace in cream and silver. She will sing three songs at each performance, exclusive of encores.

Other acts on the bill will be given by Fred Niblo, Macart's monkeys, Crane brothers, Beliman and Moore, Josephine Cohan and company, and Delmore and Lee.

+ + +

At the head of the bill at Hammerstein's Victoria for the ensuing week is Adele Ritchie, the well-known comic opera prima donna, whose recent début in vaudeville at this house was attended with success. Miss Ritchie will have an entirely new répertoire of popular songs, and will wear some new frocks.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

A first-class vaudeville will be presented at the Orpheum for the coming week.

The October Heavens.

WHEN the calm October mornings visit us they appear like glimpses of departed Spring amid the wilderness of wet and windy days that lead to Winter. It is pleasant when these interludes of silvery light occur to ride into the woods and see how wonderful are the colors of decay. Overhead the elms and chestnuts hang their wealth of golden leaves, while the beeches darken into russet tones, and the wild cherry glows like blood-red wine, while here and there are others bronzed and purple. Every day gives us a succession of glorious pictures in never-ending variety. This all makes a beautiful outline for the splendors of the morning and the evening skies, which at this season excite the admiration of all who have eyes to see.

From the zenith to the horizon we have one molten, mantling sea of color and fire; even the waves turn into unsullied shadowless crimson and purple and scarlet, and colors for which there are no words and language and no ideas in the mind; things which can only be conceived while they are visible. We can see the intense blue of the upper sky melting through it all, showing here deep and pure and lightness, there modulated by the filmy, formless body of transparent vapor, till it is lost imperceptibly in its crimson and gold; not colors, but conflagration; and so with varied tints the glorious kaleidoscope is ever changing.

The zodiacal constellation that is associated with October is Scorpio, the scorpion, the mythological monster which caused the disastrous runaway of the steeds of Phoebus Apollo. Scorpio cannot well be mistaken, because of the fiery star Antares which marks the creature's heart. Its title signifies in Greek "the rival of Mars," this being in fact the only star in all the sky that could be mistaken for the red god of war.

Antares is interesting telescopically not only for its striking red color, but more especially on account of the small green companion which lies so close as to be involved in the flaming rays of the larger star. Not far to the northwest of this fine double star is a cometlike cluster, which Herschel describes as "the richest and most condensed of stars in the firmament."

The sun starts this month in a great hurry toward the far south limit of his course, but before the close of the month his pace will slacken considerably. Nevertheless the sum total is an increase of ten degrees in south declination and a much shorter day than we are at present enjoying. The first of the moon's monthly phases takes place on the 5th, when the moon that came in on the 28th of last month will be at its first quartering. This will be followed on the 13th by full moon, on the 21st by last quartering, and on the 28th by new moon. When we see the new moon with the old moon in its arms, as the appearance is called when the bright crescent and the remainder of the moon's disk are seen together, we are told that it presages bad weather. This statement, so positive in its character, should have something better to support it, but unfortunately for those who not only make it but believe in it implicitly, it is not at all justified by the known facts.

For example, in many favored parts of the world the conditions of the atmosphere are most always favorable for seeing both the crescent and the rest of the disk at the same time, and in such localities it possesses no particular significance. On the other hand, in countries given to a chronic state of moist and haze the phenomenon, from its rareness, attracts more attention and indicates an unusual clearness in the air, which, according as it is backed up by other signs, may or may not herald the approach of rain or wind. From the roving nature of his calling, the sailor, more than other men, has to be on his guard against the general application of what are only intended as local weather signs. That which denotes one kind of weather in one place may signify something totally different in another, much in the same way that in the northern hemisphere the barometer rises for north winds, whereas in the southern hemisphere it falls for the same winds.

+ + +

In the crisp Autumn evenings when the hunters' moon, like a night sun, ascends the dusky blue sky, it is rather difficult to find much else to admire, so that some of our meetings between moon and planets lose much of their beauty, owing to the brilliant face of the moon paling the others' effort. Mars opens the monthly performances by being in conjunction with the moon on the 3d, but the event loses significance, as there is too much clear space between the two for scenic effect. All have thoughts about Mars, as our wise men have promised so much when some years hence the planet will be favorably situated for observation. We remember how freely were discussed only a few years ago the possibility of Mars being inhabited and the possibilities of a future communication with its inhabitants. People are putting questions and answering them, thereby getting many of us into strange confusion. However, it all tends to prove that a popular interest is being taken in matters above the commonplace and that general instruction in the knowledge of the universe is on the advance, which is really the most important thing.

Neptune is a morning star and reaches the half-way point between opposition and conjunction, or quadrature as 'tis called, on the 4th. It will take this planet until the last day of the year to finish this trip and be in opposition with the sun.

Uranus is one of the evening stars and, if one cares to identify his general position among the stars, an opportunity will be offered on the 8th, when Mars and Uranus are fairly close to one another. This planet passes from the realm of the evening to that of the morning stars on Dec. 26, when it will be in conjunction with the sun.

+ + +

Saturn and the all but rounded disk of the moon are in close proximity on the 8th, but our satellite will prove too powerful for the planet's rays to strike us most favorably. Saturn remains an evening star for some months to come. Mercury on the 11th of the month once again joins the evening stars and toward the close of next month we shall be able to see him shining not far from where the sun has set, without much more brilliancy than one of the smaller stars with which we are familiar.

We can probably already perceive a distinct increase in the size of Jupiter from what he was when he first entered the realm of early dawn where Venus was presiding with all her wonderful brilliancy. His diameter is half as large again as it was in April and he is much more brilliant.

Venus is now only two hours ahead of the sun in rising, but affords a pretty picture to those whose inclination or occupation necessitates an early rising. Her conjunction with the waning crescent of the moon on the 26th should afford a most pleasing tableau. Beyond this the fairest of the planets has no special number assigned her for the month.

NEW VIOLINIST COMING.

MISS MARIE HALL, whose picture is in the Pictorial Supplement, is a violinist who has been received with enthusiasm in London. She will make her first appearance in America at Carnegie Hall the coming season.

She is only twenty-one, and began playing the violin for pennies in the streets, going from town to town.

Her father, Edward Felix Hall, was a harpist and her mother a pianist, who traveled from town to town in England, making a precarious living. She was born in Newcastle, England.

When she was 15, a Mr. and Mrs. Roeckel of London, hearing of the extreme poverty of the little violinist and of the struggles her parents were having to care for her and three other children, all younger than herself, came to her assistance, and induced her father to sign an agreement permitting her to be educated and cared for in London for three years. She is a pupil of the renowned Bohemian Sevalk of Prague.

Miss Hall will bring with her to America a Guarnerius violin, valued at 2,000 guineas, presented to her in England by voluntary subscription. Her last concert in England was directly under the patronage of her Majesty, the Queen, who it is said takes a great personal interest in her.

THREE IMPERSONATORS FOR ONE CHARACTER.

IT is unique in the drama to find three persons impersonating one part in a play. Edward Peple, author of "The Prince Chap," and an American dramatist, has found it necessary that three persons should impersonate the part of Claudia in his play. Claudia appears at the age of 5, again at the age of 8, and for the third and last time when she has reached womanhood at the age of 18. Two clever children play Claudia. Helen Puttman impersonates her in the baby stage, while Edith Speare presents Claudia when she is three years older. Grayce Scott, a talented ingenue, completes the trio of actresses playing the part.

New Use for Photography.

"What makes your sister so stout now? She used to be thin."

"She's working down in a photographer's."

"What difference does that make?"

"Well, she's in the developing room most of the time."

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Adverse money market conditions were more successful in restricting the volume of trading on the Stock Exchange last week than in promoting actual weakness. The developments bearing on the money position, including the advance of the Bank of England's discount rate from 3 tn 4 per cent., the steady rise in call money rates here, culminating in a 7 per cent. quotation on Friday, the heavy doss of cash by the banks to the Sub-Treasury, the early advance in demand sterling to 4.8775, well above the gold import basis, and the numerous and heavy syndicate and corporation payments falling within the week, all these had been for some time recognized as imminent, and their market effect was therefore correspondingly minimized. Beyond this, however, the market of the week made clear the great and widespread confidence in underlying conditions, for in spite of the openly adverse money position and the high level of prices, there was practically no pressure nf stocks. It de this and the further facts that speculation is largely confined to a limited number of pools and individuals in command of large means and that there is not overhanging the market a mass of "undigested securities," which promise to differentiate the present period of higher money from that of 1902, unless the lessons of the overspeculatinn then under way have been forgotten. There is no reason to believe that the banking community, at least, has failed to remember that period, and it may be safely taken for granted that demands for funds for use in speculation will be subordinated to the more important requirements of the farmers and of business undertakings generally. The supply is scanty enough. The bank return at the week end showed surplus reserves of $7,440,025 in spite of a currency movement which normally would have wiped out this item. There is yet to be met the call of the South for funds to move the cotton crop, and in addition there are the load requirements involved in the final payment on the Japanese loan on Oct. 15, the financing of the Erie's purchase of the Dayton-Père Marquette system, and other necessities, modest individually but substantial in the aggregate. There is here as little to promote an outburst of speculation as there is to cause uneasiness to an investor.

The question of most interest in connection with the advance in the Bank of England's discount rate is the probable effect of this step on gold imports. The situation in this regard is not unlike that of the Fall of 1903, when London was compelled to shoulder the entire burden of gold shipments to this side, and in the process lost $21,000,000 bullion in November and December. The rate then as now was 4 per cent., and at that time, too, the price of gold bars was advanced during the gold drain, rising from 77s. 10d to 78s. 1d. per ounce. The present price of gold in London is 77s. 9½d., and, as in 1903, the Bank is diverting the demand to the open market, compelling our banking hnuses to intercept gold under way from Africa and even Australia. In 1903 the Bank refused to sell bars, and the high price reached by them made it more profitable to take coin. To prevent withdrawals of sovereigns the Bank was at last forced to supply bars. This was an open acknowledgement of its inability to arrest the movement of gold. A similar result may be looked for in the present instance. Upon the announcement of the higher rate on Thursday demand sterling at once advanced, hut the effect of the Bank's step was overcome by the advance of call money to 5 per cent. On Friday again, with call money lending at 6½ per cent. and 7 per cent., sterling again weakened, selling well below the figure at which it rested when the first engagement of gold was made. The selling of finance bills by international banking houses desiring to put out money at the high rates was a factor in depressing the price, but the most effective instruments in depressing the rate to the point where gold would flow in freely lie, of course, in grain and cotton bills. Thus far the supply of cotton bills has been restricted by the unwillingness of English spinners to buy the staple at the prices to which it has been forced by speculation. There is much brave talk of the adequacy of supplies in hand at English mills, and the takings have admittedly been exceptionally heavy, but the truth is revealed rather in the bitterness which the English journals are manifesting toward American speculators in cotton, and in fact toward our entire system of speculation in the staple. This, very apparently, betrays an irritation over conditions which make cotton prices so high as to limit profits. This irritation bids fair to be shared on this side of the water if artificial prices prevent sales of cotton and remittance in gold of the proceeds of these sales. The cotton season is somewhat late, but the middle of the present month may tell how far this source of procuring gold to replenish reserves is to be depended upon. So far as our export trade in wheat is concerned, there seems every assurance that, owing to the size of our own harvests and the moderate crops abroad, we are in position to gain handsomely.

There are no signs of abatement of the prosperity which has found lodgment in all sections of the country. Extreme activity marks practically every branch of trade. Orders on hand in all lines of industry make certain the extension of this activity well into 1906. Railroad earnings still overtop those of the same periods in 1904, which were, of course, well above the returns of 1903, and bank clearings continue to reflect in their enlargement the widespread business expansion.

In the iron market the buying movement which developed suddenly after a long period of only normal business has advanced with such vigor that the September tonnage is expected to prove the greatest for a single month in the history of the trade. Prices have moved up in accordance with this flood of orders, the advances at Eastern Pennsylvania furnaces having equalled $1 a ton in little more than a fortnight. The steel mills are likewise participating in this movement. Purchases of railroad material, including takinge of 125,000 tons of steel rails last week, coupled with the buying of structral material, incidental to the widespread building boon, resulted in eales of finished lines in September which established a record. The crop position has been generally enhanced by the favorable weather conditions, and in consequence it is estimated that from 75 to 90 per cent. of the corn crop is beyond danger from frost. The Government's report on condition of cotton, which will be issued on Tuesday, is expected to show only a moderate deterioration, less, probably, than in previous years, so that a crop of 10,000,000 bales or more seems assured.

Told 'Round the Ticker.

Jefferson M. Levy again bulks big in the London financial news. Here, for instance, is what one London journal says of his movements and their importance:

"Rhodesians, especially Charterods, Bankets, Tanganyikas, and Salisbury Buildings, opened with a boom on the statement that Mr. Garthwaite's report had been received by the Chartered Company, and was more than favorable, and, further, on the rumor that Mr. Jefferson Levy, the millionaire, who has been the prime mover in the Canadian advance and Hudson Bays, was closeted all yesterday afternoon with Abe Bailey, and that there is the probability of a great American combination. It is impossible to conceive the importance of such an alliance, to predict what Chartered would rise to if a second Cecil Rhodes appeared on the scene. American brains and American dollars are what the Rhodesian market wants.'

Thomas F. Woodlock, who last week severed his connection with Dow-Jones & Co. and The Wall Street Journal, began a commercial career on Saturday as a member of the Stock Exchange firm of S. N. Warren & Co. To a group of professional associates he said: "I now take hold where I shall he in danger of breaking all the rules that I have laid down in fifteen years of financial writing. But I shall try not to break them. I may be fooled into breaking one now and then, but not easily." Mr. Woodlock was perhaps the best-known financial writer in Wall Street. He made a specialty of analytical railroad criticism. Upon the death of Mr. Dow he became editor in chief of The Wall Street Journal and the presiding spirit of Dow-Jones & Co. He will be greatly missed by his old confrères.

Clarence W. Barron, proprietor of The Boston News Bureau, is understood now to have the controlling interest in the news bulletin service of Dow-Jones & Co. and in The Wall Street Journal.

GEN. DANIEL E. SICKLES came down to Wall Street the other day. His carriage, with the coat of arms on it, stopped in front of Henry Clews's office, and the one-legged veteran hobbled across the sidewalk on his crutches. The General is not a speculator, but he comes to the financial district occasionally to invest in bonds of the gilt-edged variety.

PRESIDENT E. P. RIPLEY'S testimony in Chicago that the Atchison actually loses money on carrying dressed beef for the packers caused great interest among railroad financiers in New Ynrk. Speaking of the Atchison, Wall Street is much amused by ex-Senator William E. Chandler's characterization of Paul Morton as "the original Apostle Paul, who first preached repentance to railroad sinners, having seen a great light himself while on his road."

CHARLES M. SCHWAB is gone again—this time to Nevada to look at mines. If they had nothing else to do the Wall Street chroniclers could be kept busy cataloguing the movements of Mr. Schwab. He is in a continual state of going, returning; and saying: "It was only a pleasure trip." His trips are only exceeded by the rumors following his every movement.

WILLIAM A. SIMONSON, Vice President of the National City Bank, returned yesterday from a trip to Great Britain. Mr. Simonson spent much of the time in London. What he missed most, he says, was the American newspapers.

IMPROVING RAILWAY SERVICE.

Educational Work Undertaken by Railroad Managements.

In their effort to improve the standard of service on their lines the railroads in this country, as well as elsewhere, have in recent years paid considerable attention to the question of affording to the men in their service educational facilities intended to increase the degree of intelligence with which railroad work is performed. One of the most recent steps in this direction has been taken by the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada. That road has for some time had in operation an apprenticeship system through which men are trained to fill the various positions on the line. The road has now supplemented this system by offering to the apprentices and other employes, provided they be less than 21 years of age, two scholarships in the School of Applied Science of McGill University. The scholarships are to be awarded to the employes most successful in competitive examinations.

MEETING BANK THEFT LOSSES

Hidden Reserves Tapped in Cases Like City Bank Incident—What They Are.

The theft from the National City Bank of securities valued at $359,000, with the possibility that existed of the bank's losing a considerable amount by the theft, brought up afresh thle past week the question of so-called "hidden reserves." It was recalled that when a few years ago one of the leading National banks of this city lost $750,000 by embezzlement, the subsequent financial statement of the bank gave no indication that any loss at all had been suffered. The amount had been made good out of resources that had not been reported among the bank's assets, and thus any impairment of reported surplus was avoided. Sometimes this reserve is represented by the actual value of securities over and above the price at which they are carried on the books of the institution, or similarly by the excess value of real estate. While the custom of carrying some such reserve to meet contingencies is most general among banks, many other corporations in a somewhat different form carry a similar surplus.

A conspicuous case of hidden bank reserves, or in this instance merely an unreported and not an actually concealed reserve, is the value of the Bank of England's office, which is valued on the books of the bank at £1. Were the bank ever brought to the point of doing so, hers is an asset of great value that might be availed of to maks good a loss. The simple process of marking up the valuation of the property to some figure near its actual value would offset a very large sum.

Some conservatively managed industrial concerns in similar manner, through the conservative valuation of assets, create for themselves an actual reserve that in time of need may prove of great benefit.

Up to the time of the absorption of the White Star Line by the International Mercantile Marine Company the owners of that line had annually for a considerable period charged off such a large sum to depreciation that at the time of the purchase of the line by the shipping combine the White Star tonnage instead of being carried at a high valuation had actually been written off the books entirely, and in its stead was a reserve equal to 1s. 8d. per ton. Thus during the years that the owners of the line had followed their conservative policy an amount had been set asids representing much more than the cost of the vessels which they owned. Such a policy is of course unusual, but these are conspicuous examples of a custom which is perhaps more general than is commonly supposed. It is particularly true so far as industrial undertakings are concerned in the cases of smeller corporations that are managed more as private enterprices than as public corporations. The prices at which such stocks as Singer Manufacturing and Chesebrough Manufacturing are selling indicate that some such policy has been followed by the Directors of those concerns.

CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS.

The Erie's India Rubber Account Under Jay Gould Recalled—$1,000,000 Disbursed Through Tweed in 1868.

The recent disclosures regarding huge corporation campaign contributions have recalled to old Wall Street men the era in which Jay Gould presided over the destinies of the Erie and poured out its money lavishly for political purposes. There were, of course, very evident differences between the Gould-Erie contributions and those now under investigation, but it was corporation money, given by the President and disclosed by a legislative investigation in each case.

Gould was called as a witness by the investigating committee which sat in 1869 to look into the corruption of the previous session of the Legislature. It was brought out that over $1,000,000 was disbursed from the Erie treasury in 1868 for "extra and legal services," most of these dishursements, as the vouchers proved, going through the hands of William M. Tweed, whose attainments were political rather than legal.

On the stand Gould eald frankly that if he had noticed it he would not have permitted pecuniary transactions with Tweed to be put in the shape of "legal services," and then he continued naively:

"The 'legal account' was of an india rubber character. I gave large amounts in 1869, 1870, 1871, and 1872 in the Senatorial and Assembly districts. It was what they said would be necessary to carry the day in addition to the amount forwarded by the committee, and I contributed more or less to all the districts along the line of the road. We had to look after four States—New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. It was the custom when men received nominations to come to me for contributions, and I made them and considered them good-paying investments for the company.

"In a Republican district I was a strong Republican; in a Democratic district I was a Democrat, and in doubtful districts I was doubtful. In politics I was an Erie Railroad man all the time.

"The amounts contributed for the elections were large, but I could not give any definite estimates, and you might as well go back and ask me how many cars of freight were moved on a certain day."

PEORIA—MONEY CENTRE.

Holds Third Place in Matter of Government Deposits, Due to Large Internal Revenue Receipts.

An analysis of the distribution of Government funds in the National banks reveals the interesting fact that, next to New York and Washington, Peoria outranks all other cities in the amount of Government deposits held by its banks. The total deposits of the National banks in Peoria amount to $14,000,000, of which $2,916,000 are funds belonging to the Government. The Financial Age, in a recent issue, points out this fact and gives the percentage of Government deposits to total deposits in a number of cities ae follows:

New York	.0067
Chicago	.0033
Philadelphia	.0041
Boston	.0083
Peoria	.2083

The total deposits and the amount of Government money held in the same cities is as follows:

	Total Deposits.	Government Deposits.
New York	$1,279,000,000	$8,600,000
Chicago	322,000,000	1,079,000
Philadelphia	284,000,000	1,175,000
Boston	20,000,000	1,456,000
Peoria	14,000,000	2,916,000

These figures confirming Peoria's right to the designation of a "money centre," so far at least as the banking of the Government is concerned, have direct bearing on the fact that Peoria is also the "distillery centre" of the country. The internal revenue receipts in that city are therefore very large, and explain Peoria's position as the third most important Government banking centre in the country.

GEO. J. GOULD IN FINANCE

His Recent Policy Greatly Puzzles Wall Street.

MANY FRIENDS ESTRANGED

Why Gould Securities Are Discriminated Against by Speculators, and Even in Some Instances by Investors.

I.

The last four or five years of George J. Gould's career in railroad finance have been so crowded with contradictions, and ths "Gould policy" has become so inscrutable to Wall Street, that members of the financial community refer nowadays to the Gould situation only in terms of bewilderment, or as if it were a situation that had been brought about through the opsration of secret and mysterious influences. There seems, indeed, to be an elsment of mystery in the decline of Gould prestige in Wall Street. There are many theories to account for it, and conjecture as to the outcome is endless.

Mr. Gould is said to havs made the retort recently to an unfriendly critic that the Missouri Pacific Railroad had never been reorganized. That is true, and anybody would havs been glad only a few years ago to lay emphasis on the fact. It now counts for very little, however, as against the more pertinent fact that for several years Gould issues, including Missouri Pacific, have been so handled in the stock market as to become boycotted by speculators, while Gould financing has been so unprofitable and unsatisfactory to those participating in it or affected by its results that Gould securities to-day are discriminated against by investors. There are Stock Exchange firms whose policy it is to discourage trading in Gould stocks. A few days ago the fact was brought out in the course of the life insurance investigation now going on that one of the large life companies had barred Gould issues from its investment list. All this prejudice is of comparatively recent growth. It hardly existed five years ago.

Jay Gould died on Dec. 2, 1892, and the career of George J. Gould as a corporation manager may be supposed to date from the elder Gould's death. Inheriting control of a number of large corporations, and with them great responsibilities, George Gould acquitted himself for a time in a manner that won for him the respect and approval of Wall Street. He possessed the confidence of investors, his securities ranked high in the market, and Gould stocks were favorably regarded as vehicles of speculation. Missouri Pacific, under the management of Russell Harding, and the Wabash, under the management of Joseph Ramsey, Jr., both kept pace with other great railroad properties, showing satisfactory growth and development. The relations between Mr. Gould and these two subordinates were apparently most pleasant, and unlimited confidence existed on both sidea. There was at this time a thing frequently referred to as "the Gould pride." In the troubled times of the early nineties, when so many Western railroads became bankrupt, the Gould heirs stepped forward and saved the Missouri Pacific. That was one instance of Gould pride.

The career of George J. Gould in railroad finance was most happily begun. Young, vigorous, and ambitious, controlling several of the most important railroad corporations in the country, with a family position already established and a personal reputation which commanded the respect of the prominent banking interests of Wall Street, his opportunitiee for success seemed almost unlimited.

Much of the prestige formerly carrisd by the Gould name has been sacrificed, and without any apparent gain. To-day George J. Gould alone among the men who individually or in groups control the several great railroad systems of this country is without a large and loyal following of investora and speculators. He once had such a following, and only a few years ago, after nearly a decade of his personal leadership, it was still intact, but in the last three or four years the experiences of epeculatore, investors, and syndicate subscribera in Gould affairs have been not only unprofitable but in many instances extremely exasperating, with the result that former friends have become enemies. Examples of euch experiences are easily recalled.

An operator who throughout hie Wall Street career had been identified with Gould securitiee cloeed out a speculative interest of yeare' standing in the Wabash debenture B bonds when the interest was unaccountably paseed on the debenture A bonds in 1904. The passing of the interest on the A bonds—a small issue held entirely by insiders—was done, it has always been believed, to check the clamor of the holdere of the debenture Be for some distribution on those bonds. Friction between the Wabash management and the Wabash debenture B bondholders is of long standing. It eventually reached a point where the bondholders organized themselves to protect what they conceived to be their rights.

In the Western Maryland eyndicate several Wall Street firms had to bring suit as subscribers to compel a eettlement. It was recently announced that this syndicate would be dissolved on Oct. 16. The experience of eubscribers to the Western Maryland syndicate give a very fair idea of the Gould method in eyndicate operations generally. Subscribers to the original Western Maryland purchasing eyndicate put up their money as they were called upon for it, and then for several years were unable to get a statement or accounting. While they were being denied all information as to what results had attended the employment of their money, advertisements appeared in the newapapers offering to purchase subscriptions at a discount, and some subscribers, being tired out, were induced to sacrifice their rights in the transaction. It is understood, of course, that a few insidere, knowing what the syndicate had done, were the buyers of these subscriptions, procuring them at a profitable discount. Then a syndicate was formed to underwrite certain Western Maryland bonds. The bankers got a commission for forming the syndicate, and the subscribers went in under the impresion that it wae like any other underwriting syndicate—that the bankers would make a public offering of the bonds and that the underwriters would be called upon to take only what remained unsold. Instead of that, the subscribers were treated as purchaeers of the bonds, and no public offering wae made by the managers of the syndicate.

There hae been no profit to the subscribers in any of the recent Gould syndicates, except poseibly in the Little Kanawha and Ann Arbor syndicates, which were controlled by Mr. Ramsey. If the syndicate operations in themselves had been unprofitable, or if the results could be blamed upon mismanagement, the feeling among subscribers would not be what it is. It is alleged by those who, as outside subscribers, have participated in Gould syndicates of the last few years, that situations were adroitly created by which inside cliques were able to make large profits, leaving subscribers nothing. This suspicion has been greatly strengthened by the unwillingness on the part of the syndicate managers to vouchsafs information to subscribers.

In the stock market the manipulation of Missouri Pacific was handed over several years ago to a firm whose management of the stock could be understood only on the assumption that the chief aim was to make commissions out of it. The stock was subjected at once to a process known among traders as that of "milking," and if there is one thing more than another that will kill speculative interest in a stock it is that particular practice. Traders wonld go in to bull Missouri Pacific and find that they were getting stock continually from one house, and all that they could do would be to sell it back to the same house at a loss of 2 or 3 per cent. The word soon got around that you could not bull Missouri Pacific so long as that cliqus was on top of it, and speculators began to let it alone. So Missouri Pacific, which had always besn a good stock to trade in, became ths most neglected of any of the important railroad issues, and finally was spoken of as the boycotted stock. Persons who took a friendly interest in Gould affairs tried repeatedly to arouss the Gould pride by pointing out the fact that Missouri Pacific was the lowest of the 5 per cent. dividend payers, and was conspicuous in the market only as a laggard, but in vain. The milking continued.

In 1904, after the bull market was pretty well advanced, a group of aggressive speculators took hold of Missouri Pacific to see if it could not be bulled in spite of the inside clique. They went about it openly. The inside clique, unwilling to bull Missouri Pacific itself, waa determined that nobody else should make a campaign in it, and the speculators who were trying to do it were simply overwhelmed with stock, all from the one house. It made them indignant; they consulted with members of a former Gould party and were advised to go ahead. They might reach a point, they were told, beyond which the clique would not dare to lose any more stock. They did go ahead, but not until they had resolved to buy control of Missouri Pacific if they had to. They served notice upon the clique, and the stock was not so freely supplied after that. As a rssult of this campaign there is to-day a hostile interest among holders of Missouri Pacific stock, represented by men who went into it first as a speculation and had to go so far that they decided not to withdraw.

A similar desire to make commissions has characterized a good deal of the recent Gould financing, as may be illustrated by the methods that have been adopted to raise money on certain occasions. First notes have been issued, the bankers getting a commission on those, and then bonds have been issued to take up the notes, the bankers getting a second commission on the bonds, when the bonds might just as well have been issued in the first instance.

Enough has been recited to show why the old "Gould following" is no longer intact, why Gould methods in the stock market have been severely criticised, and why Gould securities are discriminated against both by speculators and investors.

Many interesting theories have been advanced from time to time to explain the change that has been described in Mr. Gould's attitude toward his public and Wall Street following. Perhaps the most interesting theory is that he was induced to form alliances with persons who intended first to break down his credit and destroy his prestige and then to take away from him the control of his corporations. Those whose suspicions run in this direction firmly believe that some strong and subtle mind has been scheming to bring Gould affairs into their present situation. Some of Mr. Gould's friends, without openly holding any such theory, insist, nevertheless, that of recent years other minds more powerful than his have dictated his policies. There has been unmistakable evidence, they say, of constant interference by persons newly invested with influence in Gould affairs, who have exerted their influence either unwisely or with intent to do harm.

A man who for many years has followed Wall Street affairs closely was asked if be could throw any light upon the natura of thia alleged interrerence. "It is altogether a very curious situation," he replied, "and I do not pretend to know much about it. There are, I think, six men besides Mr. Gould who know the whole inside truth. They are John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Winslow S. Pierce, Alvin W. Krech, F. T. Gates, George P. Butler, and J. H. McClement. Some or all of these men must know how and why the present situation was brought about. Some or all of them must be responsible for policies which have produced unusual dissatisfaction. You might say that Wall Street, having reduced the responsibility to a few individuals, is now trying to form for itself an opinion of their methods and characteristics, so as to bring the responsibility directly home, but that as the men whom I have named have never been in personal touch with people of the financial community, it is difficult to reach conclusions."

It is said emphatically by some of Mr. Gould's friends that avowed enemies could hardly have injured his prestige and popularity ae it has been injured by persons whom he has regarded ae loyal and trustworthy associatee. "I am convinced," said one man, "that this injury has been deliberately done, for it is simply incredible to me that men of average intelligence should not have known what would result from a given line of action."

INVESTORS' INDIFFERENCE.

Hard to Interest Them in Annual Meetings—Frequently Ignorant of Terms of Their Securities.

One of the difficulties that will have to be overcome in the present contest for the control of the Wabash Railroad is the indifference which so many security holders show toward the affairs of the corporations in which they have their funds invested. It may be aesumed in the case of Wabaeh, as in others where a contest is in progress, that more than usual interest is being taken in the outcome of the election, but ae a usual thing it requires some effort on the part of corporation managements to secure even a majority of proxies for the transaction of business at the routine meetinga of security holders. Probably 60 per cent. on the average is the largest representation at the annual meeting of important railroad and industrial corporations.

In some cases the State laws require more than a majority to form a quorum even for ordinary business, and in some such cases it has often proved a difficult matter to gather together the necessary number of votes. Formerly the lawe of Wisconsin required the presence at annual meetings of two-thirds of the outstanding stock. The St. Paul and other railroad corporations of that State frequently found it difficult to secure such a vote at their meetings. The law has since been amended so that only a bare majority is now required.

It is not only in the matter of voting at meetings that security holders ehow themselves indifferent. An officer of one of the most important railroad systems in the country made the statement last week that his experience in such matters showed conclusively that even capitalists investing large sums were frequently ignorant of the terms governing the securities in which they invested. Sometimes this ignorance proves a costly thing. An interesting case in point was the failure of some of the holders of the old convertible bonds of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul to exchange them for the company's preferred stock, as they were permitted to do under the terms governing the issue of bonds. In a number of cases holders of these bonds permitted them to mature, and were forced to accept par in cash instead of securing par in preferred stock which commanded a premium of more than 80 per cent.

GOLD FROM AUSTRALIA.

Extent of Receipts from That Quarter in Recent Years—Movement Expected This Fall a Normal One.

Reports current this past week that the importe of gold from London are to be supplemented by large shipments of the precious metal from Australia to San Francisco, while not yet confirmed by announcement of actual shipments, have generally been accepted by bankers as correct in the sense that negotiations for such imports ars in progress and may shortly result in shipments to this country. The movement of gold from Australia to the United States occurs annually, though the imports from that quarter have only in a few years during the past decade assumed large volume. Our receipts of gold from Australia in most instances represent nothing else than a shifting of the demand for gold from the London market to Australia, which in ordinary course sends its surplus supply of gold from its mines direct to London. When, during the course of the Fall movement of gold to New York, it becomes more convenient for the European market to curtail the demands upon its stock of gold arrangements are made to have our gold requirements filled from Australia instead of from England or the Continent.

It seldom happens that Australia sends gold to this country as the result of any direct transactions with us. The operation is usually a triangular one between this market, London, and Australia. Indirectly the effect is the same, so far as we are concerned, as a shipment from London. The difference lies in the fact that such shipments do not affect the English bank reserves, and therefore the operation is more satisfactory to the London market than a direct shipment would be.

In 1898 and 1899 we received in each year in excess of $20,000,000 from Australia; in most other years the amount has been considerably below $10,000,000. By fiscal years ended June 30, the receipts of gold from Australia for a number of years have been as follows:

1903	7,792,302	1897	8,404,160
1902	10,492,009	1896	.....
1901	18,079,382	1895	978,265
1900	4,379,306	1894	1,969,487

Because of the facilities offered by the Government for the telegraphic transfer to New York of gold deposited at San Francisco, the shipments from Australia are made available in New York the day they are received in the country. Thus the New York market is benefited to the same extent by shipments to San Francisco as it is by shipments direct to this port.

CURRENCY TRANSFERS.

Manner in Which the Sub-Treasury Sends Funds to the Interior.

Owing to the large transfers made during the past few weeks through the New York Sub-Treasury to the interior, special interest attaches at this time to the manner in which these transfers are made and the Government regulations concerning them. Transfers can be made through the Sub-Treasury to any point in the United Statee at which an Assistant Treasurer is located. There are Assistant Treasurers in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, and San Francisco. The regulations governing transfers to all these points are identical except in the case of San Francisco, to which transfers are made free of cost, whereas a charge is made by the Government for transfers to the other points.

The bank or individual having occasion to send a large sum of money from New York, eay, to Cincinnati deposits the amount at the Sub-Treasury here together with the equivalent of the express company's charge for actually shipping the currency to that city. The Sub-Treasury here then notifies the Treasury Department at Washington by telegraph that such a sum has been deposited here for transfer to Cincinnati, and the Assistant Treasurer at the latter place is in turn authorized to pay out the amount to the individual or institution named by the person depositing the money in New York. The advantage of this method over the actual shipment of the currency is that the time of transmission is saved. In other respects it costs as much whether the currency be shipped or the transfer be made through the Treasury Department.

In the case of transfers to San Francisco, the Government undertakes the service without charge. Originally this arrangement was made merely for the purpose of bringing East the proceeds of new gold from the mines and of sending West funds which the Government might itself need on the Pacific Coast. In other worde, the special regulationa in this case were adopted rather for the Government's convenience than for any other reason. The custom by extension, however, hae been adapted to the convenience of the public as well, and now transfers between San Francisco and New York are made practically at the will of those having remittances to make from coast to coast.

In the case of unusually large transfers, permission must first be secured from Washington, as the local Sub-Treasury is not in a position to know definitely how much it may be convenient for the Government to pay out at any given point. The New York Sub-Treasury, however, will undertake on its own authority the transfer of sums aggregating, say, $250,000 or $300,000 in a day.

Russian Crops.

An official eatimate of the Russian crops for 64 Governments makes total wheat 442,000,000 bushels, against 620,000,000 buahels for the same Governments last year. Rye, 552,000,000 bushels, against 904,000,000 bushels; barley, 256,000,000 bushels, against 320,000,000 bushels; oats, 800,000,000 bushels, against 896,000,000 bushels.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Present Facilities for Trading Not Economical.

NO OFFICIAL RATE

An Exchange for Trading in Bankers' Bills the Most Feasible Solution of the Problem.

PAPER III.

One of the fundamental faults of the present mode of trading in bankers' bills is its utter failure to economize time and energy. It is on a par with the old way of collecting checks and drafts before the Clearing House was instituted. A more inexpedient method could scarcely be imagined than the present one of brokers running here and there between banks in their execution of orders, while the banker waits uncertain as to the outcome of the negotiation. Such facilities are extremely crude and not conducive to expeditious dealing. Besides, this daily routine of brokers coming and going subjects managers to no end of unfruitful interruptions and leavss them neither time nor mood in which to deliberate upon such operations as they may have in mind.

The present method of obtaining rates is also a poor expedient, under which the bankers are not always in touch with the actual market, inasmuch as they have no means of knowing it other than hearing it verbally from brokers as the latter come and go. This verbal market as it is delivered by each successive broker is at no time more than one man's opinion; it indicates only what that broker has personally found and for this reason is not necessarily representative. This method of obtaining the market may answer reasonably well during periods of dulness when rates are of least concern, but its vital defect is shown when activity and fluctuations are greatest, at which critical time it causes the banker to lose touch with his market and thus fails him at the very moment when accurate knowledge is of the highest value. This fact alone should be sufficient to condemn the present method in the minds of all thoughtful bankers and set them about devising a means of insuring closs touch with their market when they need it most.

Another very serious defect in tho present mods of dealing in bankers' bills is the lack of rules framed for the best interests of the business and made effective by an organizetion having ability to enforce them. Trading in foreign exchange is worthy of wise regulations which admit of no misunderstanding, no evasion, no lax administration. To regard it otherwise is to lower it at once to a boyish plane and expose it to the influence of unfit standards. Abuses are frequent enough under the most rigid restrictions; it is, therefore, idle to hope for abatement of even the flagrant ones in the foreign exchange market until at least fundamental rules have been adopted and approved by all parties in interest.

For the purpose of economizing time and energy, expediting operations, fixing the brnker's status and commissions, providing an official rate and putting the banker in certsin touch with his market, hesides affording many other advantages of less importance, the establishing of an exchange for trading in bankers' bills seems to be the most natural and feasible means. This suggestion will no doubt be received with indifference, even doubt, in some quarters, but that attitude is not evidence against its practicability. Many scouted the idea of the Clearing House as impractical and visionary before it was established. No foreign exchange banker should allow prejudice or indifference to prevent his conscientious and thorough consideration of these vital matters; he should be open to weigh this suggestinn fairly in the balance and support any plan which gives reasonable promisc of bettering existing conditions.

It is foreseen that the chief argument against the practicability of this suggested exchange is the diversity of bills to be traded in upon its floor. In forming an opinion as to its feasibility it is natural to compare esch point with the corresponding one on the Stock Exchange, and here one is confronted with the fact that all stocks sold on that Exchange are acceptable delivery to any buyer, while the same would not be true of all bills sold through an exchange for trading in bankers' bills. But it should be remembered in this connection that such rapid and voluminous trading as is common on the Stock Exchange would infrequently, if ever, obtain on such an exchange as suggested above, it being the purpose of the latter to provide a centrs for more orderly and expeditious negotiation of bills than is possible without such a centre. A banker must somewhere choose what bills he will accept, and there is no valid reason why his choice cannot be made upon, or by private telephone communicated to, the floor of an exchange with as little chance of offense as if he makes that choice in his own office. Ordinarily the bills which a banker cannot accept are much less in number than those he can accept; hence, if this fact is not remembered, one is apt to magnify the trouble likely to arise from this source. Bankers, if they have access to their own books, must have a pretty clear idea as to where and in what amounts their bills will be acceptable. Besides, under the régime of an exchange the broker would be in a position to perform his true function in this connection. There is no reason why a broker of integrity and ability should not know in the main what bills and in what amounts his client is open to accept: in fact, that is his logical and most serviceable relation to the banker, and one which does not and cannot obtain at present because of lack of confidence between them.

If a banker preferred not to empower his broker with the choice of bills an exchange would still serve him far more expeditiously than the existing method. By communicating with his broker on the floor he could readily learn what bills were offered, and the time consumed in the transaction would be materially lessened. Or he could simply instruct his broker that he wae open for offere at a given rate, in which case he would increase his chancee of coming in contact with sellers or buyers, as the case might be, because of their being centred in one place. In the choice of bills a broker could safely be given some latitude at least for the purpose of expediting the banker's operations. But even granting that every bill offered for sale on such an exchange should have to be given firm in hand by the selling broker and offered by the buying broker to his client for the latter's acceptance or rejection, an exchange for trading in bankers' bills, leaving out of account any other advantages, would still effect a saving of time, energy, and annoyance sufficient to justify its being established forthwith.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Move Up on the Banks' Good Showing.

Market Responds to Unexpected and Unexplained Gain in Cash—Industrials Active.

All the known facts regarding the movements of currency during last week pointed to a heavy cash loss by the associated banks, and the general belief was that in order to retain the previous reserve, either in whole or in part, the familiar shifting of loans to non-Clearing House institutions would be necessary. As a matter of fact, the bank statement actually exhibited an increase of $1,522,300 in cash, while the decrease in loans amounted to only $1,810,300. The money currents of the week were extremely confused, and it was admittedly difficult to arrive at anything like an accurate idea of the position to be disclosed by the statement, but that an actual increase of a million and a half dollars would result was quite unthought of. The heavy balances, including the large debit of one institution and the even larger credit of another, seem traceable directly to the financing involved in the payments on the Pennsylvania and Atchison bond issues, these aggregating some $40,000,000. It seems reasonably clear that heavy remittances from out of town were made, in one form or another, to the managers of these syndicates here. There were also importations of gold, and an ingathering of funds to meet municipal disbursements and take over the heavy offerings of October cotton, which will doubtless be made to the pool in cotton on Monday. The $2,250,000 gold which came in on Friday night's steamer was too late to appear in the bank statement, which is carried down to Friday's close, unless an unwarrantedly liberal interpretation of the National bank law is made. Whatever the cause of this cash increase the result was an enlargement of surplus reserves to $7,440,025, which compares with $19,913,425 a year ago, $13,937,500 in 1903, and $1,819,260 in 1902.

The stock market was firm before the appearance of the bank statement. Afterward it developed additional strength and activity, closing finally with prices at the best and substantially above Friday's level. The advances were most pronounced in the industrial section of the list, Consolidated Gas gaining 3½ points, and Colorado Fuel and International Paper 2 points each. United States Rubber, Pressed Steel Car, Republic Iron and Steel, American Locomotive, and Cotton Oil all advanced a point or more.

NO GREAT CENTRAL NOW.

The Dayton and Marquette Lines Will Be Part of the Erie System.

It was announced from the Erie Railroad offices yesterday that the name "Erie system" will hereafter include the Erie proper and the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton, along with the Père Marquette. The designation of Great Central, given to the enlarged Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton system by the syndicate that consolidated those roads, will be dropped.

It was said yesterday that there would be relatively few changes in the officials of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton and its allied lines.

Reports were current yesterday that plans were under consideration for the sale by the Erie Railroad to the Pennsylvania Railroad of the Susquehanna and Western and the Wilkes-Barre and Eastern, all the stock of the latter being owned by the Susquehanna and Western. The report could not be confirmed at the Erie offices.

The Susquehanna and Western, before control of the property was acquired by the Erie, had got trackage rights into the Jersey City terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and that arrangement is still in operation.

Representatives of interests closely identified with New York Central affairs denied yesterday the report that the Erie will sell the Père Marquette to the Lake Shore, retaining only the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton proper.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Time money rates, 4½ per cent. for all periods.

Mercantile paper rates, 4½ per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable, 4½@5 per cent. for choice four to six months' single names, and 5½ per cent. for others.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Business on the Stock Exchange last week ran considerably behind the average of corresponding weeks since 1902. The total of stock transactions barely exceeded 3,000,000 shares, whereas in no corresponding week of three preceding years had the total fallen under 4,000,000 shares. Transactions in the bond market were even further behind the average, amounting last week approximately to $12,000,000, as compared with $15,000,000 in the corresponding week of 1904, more than $26,000,000 in the corresponding week of 1903, and more than $22,000,000 even in that of 1902. A large proportion of last week's business was of professional or semi-professional origin. The average commission house contributed very little to it. The public is not trading. Some brokers are bullish and would encourage speculation, and others are bearish and do not believe in the long side of the market; but whether the head of the house is in sympathy with the market or against it seems to make very little difference so far as any outside business is concerned. Houses that are merely conservative and not bearish hold that a break of 5 to 8 points through the active list would improve business. Brokers are constantly saying: "It is impossible to induce our people to enter the market on this price level. They would buy stocks freely enough on a substantial reaction."

Professional activity has been running largely to the high-priced stocks, whereas the public much prefers to trade in low-priced stocks. The prominence of high-priced securities in bullish speculation recently has not been calculated to give the market a wide appeal to the general public. It has served rather to create prejudice, as showing the market to be largely in the hands of a rich speculative element. Wall Street traders have been feeling that way about it. They have been referring to the market for months as a rich man's game, in which the stakes and the limits had grown very high. It is the opinion of some shrewd judges that if there is going to be a big, broad speculation in the market at any time in the near future—a speculation in which the public will take part freely—it will have to be in stocks selling under par.

Referring to the announcement from the United States Treasury that refunding operations will be resumed on Oct. 2, and to the belief that such operations will help to ease the position of the money market, The Financial Chronicle says: "This forecast is based upon the expectation that an increase of the 2 per cents afloat would mean an increase of National bank notes, which, it was claimed, would relieve the stringency. We cannot feel confident of such a result from the cause specified. An enlargement of National bank notes must act very much as would an enlargement of the greenback notes. National bank currency is semi-legal tender, and their increasing issue is a species of inflation. In the present condition of affairs we think it would be more likely to disturb stock values than relieve the money market." The extraordinary increase that has already taken place in the volume of National bank currency in the last few years, and which is still going on, begins to be viewed dubiously by critics who are trying to look over the top of this wave of prosperity.

It is reported that the State authorities will make a more determined attempt to collect the stock transfer tax from bucket shops. This tax is a source of additional revenue to the bucket shops, for they collect it from their clients. In order themselves to evade the tax, they have taken their buckets to New Jersey, as it were, leaving only the handles in New York. The wire systems come to a head in New York as before, but the business, instead of stopping here, goes through to Jersey City, where the executive offices are, and where the books are kept. In the New York offices there is nothing on which to collect the tax. The State might keep a telegrapher in the Wall Street wireroom of a large bucket shop concern, and all that he could say would be that orders to buy and sell stocks were passing back and forth. He would not know where they came from or where they were finally received.

"I cannot express any opinion on that bank statement," said a well-known commentator yesterday in a message over private wires, "unless some large amounts of cash have been locked up and were returned to the banks this week."

Bear speculators received the bank statement with cries of derision, and some good bulls were greatly surprised by the showing it made. An increase of the surplus reserve fund was about the last thing that anybody was looking for. A good half hour before the statement was published a news agency which has been able in the past to make some very shrewd guesses announced that the showing would be very surprising. It made this announcement on the strength of information which failed absolutely, according to its own language, to reflect the heavy loss of cash shown by the Sub-Treasury records. The statement, by this information, would be likely to show a decrease in loans, a gain in cash, and an increase in surplus reserve. Those were the changes it did show.

Several brokers were discussing recently the somewhat unpopular financial methods of a former Baptist minister who is now a man of influence in the affairs of Wall Street. Personally he is not widely known, having remained always in the background of finance, and for that reason alone he is an object of much private curiosity. "I confess that I cannot understand him," one broker said. "His line of action here in Wall Street must be altogether contrary to his teachings as a minister." "Not at all," said another broker. "Don't you know the Bible teaches that it is wrong for us to lay up treasure on earth? Our friend, the minister, has preached that from the pulpit, of course, and now in business he does all that he can to prevent those who are within his reach from accumulating treasure on earth. That's consistent."

***

The popularity of Steel common as a speculation is surprising. Capitalists who have made very few mistakes in the Steel stocks in the past have been buying the common shares on a large scale, even at this price level, and, what is more remarkable still, capitalists who have never before believed in Steel common believe in it now, having somehow been convinced of its great speculative possibilities, and they are buying it. It could almost be said that everybody is bulling Steel common. There has perhaps never been a time before when sentiment was so much one way on the stock. It was not so one-sided in 1901, for then, although the public was very bullish, big insiders were not, and got out of their holdings as fast as they could. Some of those same insiders are buying the stock at this time, or at least they are reported on very excellent authority to be doing so. The Morgan following both here and abroad is particularly bullish on the stock. It sold in the short session yesterday at 38½, which is an eighth higher than the highest previous quotation this year.

***

The announcement of the ore deal between the Great Northern Railroad and the United States Steel Corporation is expected to stimulate bullish interest in Steel common. Why it should help the common stock any more than the preferred is not stated.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—Money is firm and dull. Clearing House loans, 4 per cent.

Street call loans, 4@5 per cent.; collateral time loans, 5@5½; mill paper, 4¾@5; year notes, 4¼@4½; business paper, 4¾@5½; New York funds, par; Sub-Treasury debit, $39,838; exchanges, $26,042,316; balances, $2,678,686.

For the week: Exchanges, $134,516,540; balances, $11,451,828. For the month: Exchanges, $579,253,906; balances, $47,777,656.

There was buoyancy in special copper shares to-day, Tecumseh, for low price, touching 15; Osceola, for the high price, reaching 108. Tamarack gained 2, to 130. Most cheap stocks forged ahead. Calumet actually declined, and Copper Range gained nothing for the day.

The general list was strong and higher.

The Stock Exchange seat of William Basset is posted for transfer to Wesley A. Grove. Seats are now quoted at $25,000 bid, $30,000 asked. The last sale was at $25,000, and the highest price they ever sold at is $30,000.

MORE LONDON GOLD,

Foreign Exchange Says, and Further Shipments Are Expected.

Negotiations were under way yesterday by New York bankers for further gold engagements in London, and additional shipments to this port may be announced on Monday. Foreign exchange was inclined to sag yesterday, a condition that favors a resumption of gold imports.

The opinion now prevails in some quarters that the total imports this Fall will reach large volume.

DAY AND NIGHT

ARE YOU INTERESTED

We have just ordered 50 new Remington typewriting machines for our new Newark School. We are now using half a thousand Standard Remington machines in the Drake Schools, and we consider this a great advantage to our pupils and prospective pupils, inasmuch as 99% of our calls for positions are for Remington operators. Everyone knows that the Remington is the highest priced and the highest class machine on the market, and we believe that our use of this machine is an advantage to both pupils and employers.

We hold that the very best education attainable is none too good for those who are looking for success. The Drake Schools are known to be the cheapest first class institutions in America, with a twenty-one years' record in training young men and women for business. Why not attend a school that has superior advantages? Our seven schools are connected by telephone with our New York employment bureaus.

A Boy That Failed to make progress at a noted New England academy entered the Groff School recently with several having had similar experiences at other large schools. They were all put into Yale and other large colleges the following September without a condition, one year ahead of their former classmates, and their present standing at college is very high. Mr. Groff's experience with these boys is typical of the success he has had for ten years.

THE GROFF SCHOOL,

228 West 72d St., New York,

occupying the most handsome school quarters in New York, is ideal and exceptional as a boarding and day school.

Absolutely individual attention, the number being strictly limited. No very young boys admitted in the main school. Separate department, with special advantages, for boys, 10-14 years old. Handsome study parlors, billiard room, electric elevator, and full and free use of skating rink, bowling alleys, fencing hall, gymnasium, swimming pool, athletic field, etc.

Proper and judicious supervision of the daily life of all students of the school, but all foolish school discipline, military drill, and consequent loss of time eliminated.

EUROPEAN HOTELS.

SAVOY HOTEL

LONDON.

In May, 1904, the extensions and improvements to the Savoy Hotel were completed. Never in the history of hotel life in any country has the appreciation of the public of the comfort and luxury provided for them been shown in a more substantial form. The best travellers from the Continent of Europe and America have pronounced the magnificent suites of rooms with bathrooms to be unrivalled—and their recommendation to friends has resulted in the large increase in business of 1904 over 1903 being greatly exceeded in the present year—thus showing that the more the public become familiar with the comforts and luxury of the hotel the greater is its popularity. The following figures show the increase in business during three months

MONTH.	Increase of Receipts of Hotel and Restaurant in 1904 over 1903.	Increase of Receipts of Hotel and Restaurant in 1905 over 1903.	Occupants of Apartments during month. 1903.	1904.	1905.
MAY	35 per cent.	69 per cent.	4,428	4,478	8,074
JUNE	49 " "	85 " "	4,695	6,033	10,131
JULY	50 " "	108 " "	2,779	5,921	9,681

18,807 more visitors patronized the Savoy Restaurant in May, June and July, 1905, than in the same months of 1903—and during the season space alone has prevented the entertainment of a greater number of guests who have desired to enjoy the finest cuisine in the world.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Several purchases by investors, involving properties of more than average value furnished practically the only new element in last week's trading. Buyers were found for a group of three new apartment houses on 121st Street, near Amsterdam Avenue, valued at between $400,000 and $500,000. Of similar character, no doubt, was the deal for the structure at the northwest corner of Lexington Avenue and 118th Street, while in the rapidly growing mercantile district around Madison Square two buildings, at 41 West Twenty-first Street and 48 West Twenty-seventh Street, changed hands in a transaction amounting to nearly $250,000.

Half a dozen deals of this sort, of course, do not make a market, but they do show a tendency and support the opinion, frequently expressed, that the interest in high grade real estate investments is likely to be greater during the next few months than at any time in several years. With the Subway adding vast areas to the accessible portions of the city and with proposed rapid transit extensions reaching out miles in every direction, it is but natural that the last twelve months should have been an era of unparalleled speculation. New subways will be opened and there will be other "subway booms," but there is just at present a surprising degree of interest in income-producing properties—a condition which promises business of a more substantial character than that provided by the trading in contracts for vacant lots.

Some evidence of what the future will bring forth on Washington Heights and in the Dyckman tract is anxiously awaited by operators and builders. So far as the Heights is concerned the matter is one which to a very large extent depends upon how soon the northerly section of the Subway is opened for traffic. With regard to the Dyckman meadows the situation seems to resolve itself into the question of how favorably that territory can compete with those parts of the Bronx which are just as accessible and in which a higher stage of development has been reached. Will the sentiment about living on Manhattan Island prove to be a factor of any considerable force in attracting tenants to flats in the Dyckman tract?

The investigation of the North Side Board of Trade as to the character of the demand for housing accommodations in the Bronx has been completed. The board sent out inquiries to 200 agents throughout the borough. Its conclusions, based upon the replies, as reported in the Record and Guide, are:

1. There is an active demand for flats and a good supply on hand; the demand for low-priced flats, $16 to $20, exceeds the supply; the supply of high class flats exceeds the demand. Builders and investors who prefer flat property will do well to give their attention to the former. Purchasers do not want steam-heated flats.

2. The greatest unsupplied demand is for one, two, and three family houses, with the two-family house in greatest demand of all. Neither for renting nor selling does the supply equal the demand. Builders and investors will be safer in building this class of buildings than high class flats for the next year or so.

LATEST DEALINGS BY BROKERS.

The Century Realty Company, acting for the Kip's Bay Realty Company, in which it is largely interested, has sold to Mary A. Fitzgerald 1,721 and 1,723 Broadway, together with 232 and 234 West Fifty-fifth Street. The property has a frontage of 50 feet on Broadway and 40 feet on the street.

The Broadway lots were recently leased to the Ford Motor Company as the site for a garage, for a term of ten years, at an annual net rental of $11,000. The sale was negotiated through Mr. Wanser of the brokerage firm of James A. Dowd & Co. Winthrop E. Dwight represented Mrs. Fitzgerald. Mrs. Fitzgerald already owned the southwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-fifth Street. Her purchase gives her a plot fronting 103 feet on Broadway and 106 feet on the street.

Island Sold for $625,000.

The property known as Crooke's Island, adjoining Bergen Beach and having an area of 515 acres, was sold yesterday for $625,000. The purchaser was Hugh V. Roddy, Jr., who represents a syndicate which intends to improve the property for commercial and manufacturing purposes by dredging out the creek around the north and south sides of the island. There are dredges working now on the adjoining property, where several manufacturing plants are about to be constructed. It is the intention of the buyers to provide a suitable docking place for large vessels, thus facilitating the delivery of building materials to all the southerly parts of Brooklyn, where so much new construction is going on.

The McNulty & Fitzgerald Company negotiated the sale and is also interested in the syndicate.

Godfrey B. Moore has bought for a client a tract of about 500 acres at Deer Park, L. I., for about $150,000.

THE AUCTION ROOM.

With offerings of Bronx and Dyckman tract properties, this week's schedule at the Real Estate Salesroom presents for the first time in four months some items of real interest to the speculative fraternity.

The Bronx sale, to be conducted on Tuesday by L. J. Phillips & Co., is that of the Varian estate property, consisting of 181 lots. Projected rapid transit improvements and the proposed electrification of the railroads reaching the Grand Central Station have created within the last few months a greatly increased demand for lots in the northerly parts of the Bronx. In point of situation—close to Jerome Avenue and the Mosholu Parkway, midway between Bronx and Van Cortlandt Parks—the Varian property possesses many attractive features which should command attention among homeseekers and small buyers fully as much as among operators.

An offering announced for Wednesday by Bryan L. Kennelly ought to afford an instructive test as to the market's disposition with regard to the Dyckman tract. The properties to be sold include the block front of about twenty lots on the north side of 211th Street, between Broadway and Tenth Avenue, and plots on Vermilyea Avenue, between Academy and Hawthorne Streets, and on Broadway, near Hawthorne Street.

Auctioneer Kennelly will also sell on Wednesday a plot of eight lots, running through from 151st to 152d Street, 225 feet west of Broadway.

Among the private dwellings in the week's list are 58 West Forty-ninth Street, a Columbia College leasehold, to be sold on Tuesday by Lounsberry & O'Connor, and 80 East Seventy-ninth Street, which will be put up on Tuesday at the stand of Herbert A. Sherman.

MORTGAGE FILINGS FOR WEEK.

There were recorded last week 270 mortgages, for $2,600,794; of which 191, for $1,853,179, were at 6 per cent.; 34, for $362,900, at 5½ per cent.; 36, for $556,515, at 5 per cent., and 6, for $98,600, at 4½ per cent. INCREASED BUSINESS ACTIVITY ON EAST TWENTY-THIRD STREET BLOCK.

Subway Station Benefiting Area Between Broadway and Fourth Avenue—Store Rentals Show Higher Tendency—Recent Transactions and Prices.

One of the many instances in which small, well-defined localities in the central part of the city have benefited through the operation of the Subway is to be found on Twenty-third Street, between Broadway and Fourth Avenue.

A good deal of the property on this block is strongly held, and there has been little opportunity for improved conditions to be reflected in higher prices, but rentals have shown a decided tendency to advance, and the rapid tenanting of the stores in the big Mercantile Building, at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street, has demonstrated the enhanced value of the block for retail purposes since the Subway was opened. It had been intended originally to rent all of the ground-floor space in this building to a single tenant. The failure of this plan through two renting seasons showed, however, that there was practically no demand for a single store of such dimensions in that neighborhood, while since May 1, when it was decided to subdivide the store into a number of small shops, the entire floor has been tenanted. Stores on this block now command from $5,000 to $6,000 a year, and in the case of all recent leases for a term of years a scale of increasing rentals has been provided.

There is nothing at present to indicate any great speculative possibilities on Twenty-third Street east of Broadway, but future tendencies, based upon projected transit improvements, all seem likely to give to the easterly part of this crosstown thoroughfare a greater degree of importance. The proposed Third and Lexington Avenue subways will add still further to the increase in its traffic, so apparent since the opening of the Fourth Avenue line, while, if Fourth Avenue itself achieves one-quarter of the prominence which a good many shrewd speculators have prophesied for it, the adjacent blocks on Twenty-third Street should be benefited in no small degree. One unfortunate feature of the street so far as its future growth is concerned is that for a couple of blocks or so east of Broadway it is to a marked extent one sided—that is, a large proportion of pedestrian travel in its desire to avoid the wide, dangerous crossings at the lower end of Madison Square, naturally seeks the southerly side of the street.

Since the completion of the Mercantile Building, at Fourth Avenue, there has been but one new building operation on the Twenty-third Street block shown in the accompanying diagram. At 36, four doors west of the Mercantile Building, a new nine-story structure is being erected by Frank W. Seaman. That there has not been more new construction on the block can only be accounted for by the fact that, even with its improved business possibilities, resulting from the operation of the Subway, the increased demand for space is practically confined to ground floors. The big building of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and other new structures around Madison Square have kept the supply of office space fully abreast of the demand in that section. On the other hand, while there is no lack of tenants for ordinary loft buildings anywhere in the central part of the city, land values on Twenty-third Street, between Broadway and Fourth Avenue, are considerably too high to encourage this form of improvement.

The most recent transaction on the block was the auction sale of 30 East Twenty-third Street, something over a year ago, the buyer being Nathan Glasshelm, and the price $103,550. In 1900 Susan W. Grand d'Hauteville, owner of the Hotel Bartholdi, bought the American Art Galleries property adjoining, 50 by 98.9, together with the abutting parcel at 7 East Twenty-second Street. The consideration was $350,000, about $... a square foot for the entire plot, or, say, $60,000 for the Twenty-second Street lot and $290,000 for the Twenty-third Street end of the property.

The site of the Mercantile Building was bought in 1901 by Flake & Dowling and the Central Realty, Bond and Trust Company from the Young Men's Christian Association for $700,000. The plot contains about 15,900 square feet, making this price at the rate of $43 a square foot. For the Academy of Design property at the northwest corner of Fourth Avenue and Twenty-third Street the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company paid $440,000, or between $55 and $60 a square foot. In this connection some of the company's purchases, made fifteen years ago, at the Madison Avenue end of its block are interesting. The corner, 1 Madison Avenue, 44 by 125, was bought for $2..,000; the adjoining house, 3 Madison Avenue, 30 by 125, for $150,000, and 5 Madison Avenue, 24.8 by 125, for $100,000.

LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE. | LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE. | LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE. | LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE.

$18 WE ARE NOT $54 KNOCKERS.

A LOT. ¼-ACRE.

The world is wide. The field of investment is large and in and around the greatest city on the American Continent are millions of acres of land being rapidly bought and developed, constantly cut up by the thousands of realestate operators, many of whom are most reputable and worthy of the name of a real estate speculator and developer, and whose purposes are to do good to the fellow-man and endeavor to place the hard earnings of the wage earner into channels of improvements and welfare. But there are many real estate dealers who are knockers and take a great delight in trying to discourage the public from placing their investments with any other dealers. Some of these knockers had displayed advertisements in the columns of the New York newspapers on last Sunday.

We believe the profitable field of operation to-day is principally on Long Island.
We believe there is ample room for thousands of real estate operators on Long Island.
We believe there is a golden harvest on Long Island for the large or small investor.

In the virgin fields in Long Island there is a brilliant sunshine showing the glorious future to-day on every foot of land from Montauk Point to Brooklyn, and no matter who the man or woman is, that has the least spark of ambition, or has the least desire to own a plot of land to make money or secura a bome, be or she cannot possibly make a mistake by buying anywhere on Long Island from any real estate operator, no matter where the land may be.

We, who are and who have been the largest owners and developers of Long Island land in the past six years, would welcome to-morrow a regiment of 1,000 real astate developers to assist us to make known the merits and the many opportunities of the richest field of investment in the United States to-day. The millions of money which have already been secured to apply to the development of this particular territory will be expended in the next five years, but has not been practically assigned as yet; but when it is assigned it will create the greatest stir, the greatest boom and the greatest excitement in real estate which has ever taken place in the history of this country, and now is the time to get in and buy, while you can buy cheap, for the opportunities to-day for investment in real estate are much brighter than they were twenty-five years ago.

WE ARE SPENDING $60,000 A YEAR ADVERTISING IN THE NEW YORK PAPERS,

Possibly more money than any real estate firm in America spends for the sale of suburban real estate, and the columns of these papers reach every quarter of the globe and make known to the numerous investors in other countries of the strides and prosperity of New York, the greatest city in the world in finance, in manufacturing and in development—a strenuous city which is a giant of prosperity.

It has only been in the past five years that the New York reading public, the buyer of the penny paper, practically the wage earners of this great community, are buying lots and plots of land for homes and investments, and if the same ratio of buyers in the past five years will continue for the next five years, you will find that 50 per cent. of the 4,000,000 of people who now live in Greater New York will be owners of their own homes in and around New York City. This is but a fair prophecy, and safe to make the prediction, and those who live to see the prosperity of New York City in 1910 will say that the William H. Moffitt Realty Company were absolutely correct in everything that they said.

Now a few words about ourselves and the various properties which we own and have for sale on Long Island.

We know and believe we have the cheapest property.
We know and believe we have the lowest prices, on your own terms.

We are owners of an area covering over 5,000 acres of land, one hour from New York City, at a commuting fare of 18 cents each way, which wa have baen developing and selling from and which has been our study for more than four years past.

There has never been a month that we have not added from one hundred to two hundred acres addition to our possessione in thie beautiful territory, whioh for health, comfort, and convenience cannot be surpassed by any othersuburban point around New York City, and which will prove a profit maker and worthy of your opinion to conelder it the ideal paradise and finest residential section you find in any direction from New York City.

Bayside Park Attracts Homeseekers

Aside from the innumerable attractions that have recently centred interest on Bayside Park, the transportation problem is one of the most gratifying features of this ideal Sound resort. Quick and efficient railway transportation now brings one within twenty-two minutes of the charming and picturesque place, and with the completion of the Pennsylvania tunnel it will be within ten minutes of Thirty-fourth Street.

At Bayside Park

one may find all the attractions of a combined seaside and inland resort. Boating, yachting, and golf clubs, with schools, churches and all the conveniences of a settled community—with proper restrictions to safeguard the place against undesirable developments—are features strongly appealing to all who visit Bayside Park. Building plots can now be bought for as little as $250, while a $5,500 house can be bought of the North Shore Realty Co. for $500, the balance in monthly installments of $30. Great numbers from Manhattan have already found in Bayside Park their ideal home spot, and the inducements now being offered by the North Shore Realty Co. appeal irresistibly to every visitor.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

JACOB LEVINE.—Deputy Sheriff Altman has received an execution against Jacob Levine, manufacturer of cloaks and suits at 29 East Tenth Street, for $670 in favor of Moritz Jurkovitz for money loaned. The Sheriff removed all the stock and put it in a storage warehouse. Mr. Levine has been in business since February, 1903, and in January last said that he had a capital of $10,000. His liabilities are reported to be about $7,000.

G. J. NEWWITTER.—Specifications of objections to the discharge from bankruptcy of Garson J. Newwitter, who did business as the Imperial Silk Mills at 463 Broome Street and at Astoria, L. I., have been filed by Putney, Twombly & Putney, attorneys for the following creditors: Jardine, Matheson & Co., E. Paladini, and Ernest Graund, whose claims aggregate more than $30,000, and Nathaniel S. Smith, referee in bankruptcy of 68 William Street, will hear the issues in the case. It is alleged that in the specifications he concealed his true financial condition by omitting to enter on his books or records indebtedness to his wife of $30,000, to his wife's stepfather, Edward French, $5,000; to Edward E. Rosenfield, $1,500, and $3,287 proceeds of the sale of some silk veilings. That in August, 1904, shortly before he went into bankruptcy, he drew $18,700 out of the business and transferred it to his wife, and also transferred $5,000 to Edward Friend, all without consideration and while he was insolvent. Also that he transferred property in Denver to his wife. Mr. Newwitter filed a petition in bankruptcy on Aug. 31, 1904, with liabilities of $123,760 and nominal assets of $105,656.

It is alleged that the company, which is a West Virginia corporation, is insolvent, and allowed Howard J. Corwin to obtain a preference by which Deputy Sheriff Plunkett is to sell 25 pounds of Tungsten ore to-morrow.

ROBINSON OFFICE SPECIALTY COMPANY.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against the Robinson Office Specialty Company of 10 Warren Street, by the following creditors: Frederick C. Wackenhuth of Newark, $5,000, money loaned on July 5; August W. Holmberg, New York, $67, for merchandise, and Charles E. Builenkamp, $31, merchandise. It is alleged that the company is insolvent, and on Sept. 21 admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts. It is said that there is a contest for control of the company. Its liabilities are $5,700, and assets $8,000, and business is good, according to President Robinson.

BANK STATEMENT SURPRISE.

Gain in Cash Shown—Day's Balances at Clearing House Break all Records.

Though prepared by the showing of the bank statement for recent weeks to expect almost anything of that document, Wall Street was genuinely surprised at the results reported yesterday. Loans were reduced and so were deposits and both were in regular order. The surprise was in the cash showing. Friday it was estimated that during the week the banks had lost about $8,000,000 cash. The bank statement showed a gain of $1,522,300. As a result of a gain in cash and lessened reserve requirements the surplus showed an increase of $2,204,975. Representatives of some of the larger banks admitted that the showing was a surprise to them. The only explanation offered was that the high money rates toward the close of the week tempted the trust companies to loan out their cash reserve. Trust companies are not obliged to carry any specified amount as are the banks, and when rates advance sharply the trust companies, besides drawing down their bank balances by loaning the money out themselves, make loans out of the actual cash in their vaults. Thus additional cash would find its way into the banks to offset the loss to the Sub-Treasury reported during the past week.

The heavy shifting of funds incident to the financing of October first interest and dividends and other payments that fell due at the close of the week, including the Pennsylvania and Atchison bond issues, resulted yesterday in the largest balances at the Clearing House ever recorded. The total of credit balances amounted to $33,995,793. The National Bank of Commerce individually had a credit of $27,355,000, and the National City Bank a debit balance of $17,578,000. Both of these balances exceeded all records for debit and credit balances of individual banks. The heavy credit of the National Bank of Commerce was believed to be due to the payments made to that bank in connection with the Atchison and Pennsylvania bond issues.

MR. ROCKEFELLER TELLS A NAUGHTY BOY'S DREAM

Created a World with No Sunday School and Was Sorry.

LOUD APPLAUSE FOR THE TALE

Met a Press Agent and a Chorus Girl —A Little Joke at the Expense of Christian Science.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—For the third time since his stay in Cleveland this Summer John D. Rockefeller was the central figure to-day of a large public gathering. He made an address at the Sunday school rally of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church. He said when he emerged from the church at noon, "This has been one of the happiest days in my life."

Accompanied by Mrs. Rockefeller, he arrived at Sunday school in his new automobile half an hour late. Mrs. Rockefeller walked directly to the Sunday school room, but her husband, spying two urchins in ragged clothes standing on the sidewalk in front of the church, approached them, and leaning over, asked them their names. They were brother and sister. He patted them on the back, gave each a dollar, and invited them into the Sunday school room. Bashfully they refused, although he urged them.

The rally was in progress when Mr. Rockefeller entered the auditorium, hundreds of children and many older persons being present. As Superintendent of the Sunday school he made his address. He wore a frock coat and gray trousers, with a flower in his coat lapel. The wig he adopted a few weeks ago was on his head. He was in even a more genial mood than usual.

All of the younger children were gathered directly in front of him, and to them he addressed his remarks:

"Well, boys and girls, I welcome you back again up here with the older folks," he said as he put his hand upon the edge of the pulpit. He leaned on his left elbow and, stooping slightly, smiled at the little ones.

"Here we are all here together. We're all welcome, all of us, aren't we? We welcome Dr. Hagar [the assistant pastor] from his vacation, and we welcome all the others of our friends who haven't been with us.

"We must welcome Mrs. Rockefeller, too. You know she has been sick and couldn't be with us for almost two years. I don't know very much about Christian Science, but I do know that she has been taking absent treatment, that for two years she has thought of us every day, and I'm sure we've thought of her.

"Now, after we have extended a welcome to all I want to ask the reason why we come to Sunday School every Sunday. Is it to play marbles, boys? Do you girls come to sew baby clothes? Now tell me.' The speaker stooped a little lower and became more confidential.

"Now, I'm going to tell you a story. There was once a little boy, just like you down there in the front row, who did not like things as they were. He dreamed one night that he had made a world where there were no Sunday Schools. He thought that he liked it. He thought in his sleep that it was a beautiful place. But soon he began to miss something. There was something lacking. He took the matter to heart. Somebody asked if he had made that world.

"'Yes,' he answered tearfully, 'but I'll never do it again.'

This story brought down the audience, old and young alike. The applause was enthusiastic. The children jumped up and down in their seats and stamped on the floor. Mr. Rockefeller stood, laughing heartily at the demonstration. The noise was stopped by the older members of the school, and Mr. Rockefeller resumed his address.

"Why do we come to Sunday school?" he asked. "Why did the little boy miss it? Why, we come here to learn how to love each other and show that love to the world. Isn't that it? That is what Jesus did for us and for every man and woman on the face of the earth. It was his mission, and we are carrying it out."

With these words Mr. Rockefeller sat down. Again there was loud applause. Every one was smiling.

The Rev. Dr. Eaton, pastor of the church, said:

"I've seen a most remarkable thing. I've see the contribution plate pass Mr. Rockefeller. That's something I've never seen before. But we'll waylay him later; perhaps at the door."

These remarks were greeted with hearty laughter.

Just before he boarded his automobile for home Mr. Rockefeller was accosted by a press agent and a musical comedy show girl. The press agent introduced the actress to Mr. Rockefeller, who bowed and said:

"I am glad to meet you. I am always glad to see people of your profession at church."

Again bowing, he begged to be excused, and climbing into his machine hurried off for home.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., MAY GIVE UP

Probably Will Not Return to His Bible Class This Season.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., may not be able on account of the condition of his health to lead his Bible class at the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church this season. This was announced at the meeting of the class yesterday by the Rev. W. H. Richardson, the assistant pastor of the church. He said to the class:

"I am not authorized to make any definite statement. I can only say that he is improved in health. I cannot give you any definite time when he will be with us; in fact, I cannot tell you that he will be with us at any time during the season. Let us hope that he will, that he will soon be with us again as our leader."

When Mr. Richardson was informed after the meeting that his announcement gave some of the class the impression that Mr. Rockefeller might not return to the class again he said only:

"Mr. Rockefeller will return to his class here as leader about the same time that he is able to take up the activities of business life again."

Mr. Rockefeller is at his home in Pocantico Hills. He spent the Summer in the Adirondacks. Mr. Rockefeller's ailment is a nervous trouble.

A rumor had got around yesterday that Mr. Rockefeller might refer at the meeting to his plan for improving the tenements of the poor in New York, a plan which was suggested to him by the benevolent bequests made for that purpose by Baron Rothschild and which he investigated while he was in Paris last Spring. Coupled with this rumor was a story that there had been a disagreement on the subject between Mr. Rockefeller and his father, the son urging that his father donate money with which to imitate the Rothschild plan.

The story that this tenement subject might be taken up brought several women to the church, among them Marcella J. K. Zarembska, who said she had spent her life and fortune to further the scheme of improving the tenements of the poor. All she needed, she said, was some money to carry out her plan. She was very much put out when she could not join in the services of the class.

It was also said that Mr. Rockefeller disliked the notoriety his leadership provoked.

STONE 2,000 PRAYING JEWS.

Bridge Laborers Fell Many at Worship at the Foot of Pike Street.

Some 2,000 Jews were attacked on the Pike Street Recreation Pier on the East River front yesterday afternoon by two-score Italian and Irish laborers. They were pelted with stones and several were hurt. The assault was kept up until the arrival of the police, when three of the assailants were arrested and locked up. There appeared to be no reason except hoodlumism for the attack on the Jews.

They had gone to the river front to observe the Tishla, an ancient ceremony which occurs on the second day of the Jewish New Year, and consists principally of the recitation of a prayer. They left the east side synagogues shortly before 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and had scarcely begun the ceremony at the meeting place when the assault took place.

The Manhattan Bridge, commonly known as No. 3, will have its terminal near Pike Street, and on the foundation structure already built there a skeleton bridge has been constructed to facilitate the work. Two freight cars are used on it to carry the material used in the construction. From this point a gang of bridge laborers hurled showers of stones upon the Jews.

A panic followed when other laborers cut off the retreat of the worshippers and stoned them from the approach to the pier. As one after another was struck and knocked down the confusion increased.

The cries for help were heard by the passengers on a Belt Line car three blocks away. Special Policeman Henry Kizowitz, who lives at 5 James Street, East New York, was on the car and ran to the pier. He drew his club and laid about him until the attacking party began to scatter. Before they all got away a dozen policemen, headed by Detectives Delaney and Wuschur of the Madison Street Station, arrived.

The assailants had started to run, but the detectives arrested two Italians who said that they were Frank Cotso, 20 years old, of 146th Street and Eighth Avenue, and Salvatore Mogocro, 34 years old, of 44 Oak Street. Policeman Louis Levy also caught Louis Rosso, 16 years old, of 88 James Street, after a chase of several blocks.

The more seriously injured are Jacob Baumm, 47 years old, of 520 East Houston Street, who had his arm cut and his nose broken, and Harris Brooks of 249 Cherry Street, whose jaw was dislocated. Others injured are Aaron Bonerantz of 9 Eldridge Street, Frank Libochoz of 40 Essex Street, Joseph Lubit of 126 East Broadway, and Joseph Rich, a coal dealer, at 240 Delancey Street.

An ambulance call was sent in to Gouverneur Hospital, and Dr. Smith drove to the pier and dressed the wounds of the injured.

AUTO BLOWN UP IN PARK.

Two Men and Two Women Jump Out Just in Time.

Policeman Doyle was on the West Drive in Central Park at 11:30 o'clock last night, when he saw a big automobile speeding along the driveway leaving behind it a trail of sparks and fire. In the car were two men and two women. Doyle shouted to the chauffeur that his car was afire and told him to stop.

The chauffeur brought his machine about, and ran it up against a steep rock on the roadside. The policeman rushed forward, assisted the two women out, and told the men to jump. It was not a moment too soon. They had scarcely time to land and run to safety before the tank of the machine exploded with a crash that could be heard for blocks.

The tonneau was shattered and the top of the machine was blown off. Policeman Doyle ran to the nearest fire box. Two hook and ladder companies and one engine arrived and put out the fire. The firemen towed the automobile, nearly a complete wreck, out of the Park.

The man who acted as chauffeur told the policeman that he was P. M. Green of 231 West Forty-seventh Street, and that the machine was the property of Dr. Oscar M. Lelser of 243 West Forty-fourth Street. At that address Mrs. Lelser said last night that her husband was out of the city, but that Dr. P. M. Grausman, who lives at their house, had the privilege of using the motor car. The names of the women in the party were not learned. None of the passengers was hurt, but one of the women had her coat burned.

RAILROADS AID SCALPERS.

Brokers Testify That They Got Tickets at Low Rates.

Special to The New York Times.

DENVER, Oct. 1.—"The railroads themselves condone the selling of tickets to brokers at lower rates than the people buy them," is testimony given by E. D. Odlorne before the District Court at Pueblo. "I have bought tickets, singly and in blocks, from Drury, Milner, Schmidt, and Thompson of the Burlington, Ridgeon of the Union Pacific, Cummack of the Colorado Midland, and McClellan and Burch of the Denver and Rio Grande. I have a secure understanding with all these agents that I can sign any name to signature tickets."

Odlorne supplied the attorneys and the court with information that surprised persons in court. Odlorne said that he used such names as "A. Man," "A. B. Good," and "S. O. Easy" in signing tickets.

C. C. Bishchoff, a ticket broker, of Denver stated that he had a three-year contract with the Missouri Pacific for tickets at less than tariff rates, and that many times he had ten to twenty tickets validated in the office of the Denver and Rio Grande, the Colorado and Southern, the Union Pacific, the Colorado Midland, and the Missouri Pacific without trouble, and that validating stamps of other cities were often used in the offices when the tickets should have been stamped outside of Denver.

DARING RESCUE FROM THE ALABAMA'S DECKS

Three of the Flagship's Men Save a Fourth from Death.

HE SANK WITH THE ANCHOR

Anderson Came Up Under the Vessel —She Quickly Backed Away and His Mates Leaped to Rescue.

A rescue which the officers of the battleship Alabama declare was one of the most heroic that has occurred in the navy in many years, was effected by three seamen of that battleship off Provincetown, Mass., Saturday afternoon.

The man who was rescued after an experience that has few parallels in the history of the navy is Andrew Anderson, a seaman, who is soon to be promoted to coxswain, while the men who saved him are Edward Wagner, William Brannon, and E. C. Anderson.

The Alabama is the flagship of the Second Division of the First Squadron of the North Atlantic Fleet, which arrived here yesterday. The officers of the flagship tell this story of the rescue:

It was about 1 o'clock when the order was given to the Alabama to weigh anchor and proceed to New York, and the men quickly got to work to execute the command. When the anchor was about six feet above the water, however, the chains fouled the stock, and somebody had to be lowered to untangle them. The job fell to "Andy" Anderson. A bow line was made fast to the seaman's waist and four sailors lowered him to the anchor.

Anderson rested on the arm of the anchor and got to work. The job was the hardest one the big sailor had been confronted with in a long time, but he didn't grumble, and set manfully to work.

He was getting along all right, when, for some reason, the man holding the controller of the drum, around which the anchor chain was to be wound, let go the controller. A minute later the anchor had sunk in twelve fathoms of water, and Anderson went down with it.

The sailor never lost his head for a moment, and, realizing his predicament, managed to free himself of the rope that was tied around his waist, fearing that in the manoeuvring of the ship, that he knew would take place immediately, the rope might get tangled in the anchor chains, thus sealing his doom.

Once free of the rope Anderson tried to rise to the surface. Instead of doing so, he struck the bottom of the Alabama. The bottom was covered with barnacles and sea growth, and as he struck them his head and face were lacerated. Three times the sailor tried to rise, but each time his way was barred by the steel plates on the bottom of the battleship. Then he lost consciousness.

While all this was going on, Capt. W. H. Reeder of the Alabama, who was on the bridge, had signaled to the engineers for full speed astern, and in less than two minutes after Anderson had gone down the ship was churning the water as she backed away.

As soon as the Alabama had cleared the spot where Anderson had gone down the form of the sailor appeared on the surface of the water. Wagner was the first of the sailors to see him. He plunged into the sea and swam to where the sailor was.

He caught the unconscious man around the neck, and swimming with one hand, held his head above water, awaiting the assistance that he knew would immediately follow. Brannon saw Wagner dive overboard, and realizing that his comrade had more than one man's work to do, jumped in after him. He was still in the air when E. C. Anderson (no relation of "Andy") followed suit. Then each of the three men got a firm grip on their shipmate and held him above water until the lifeboat came alongside and picked them up.

Surgeon Becker was in the lifeboat and went to work on Anderson. In less than an hour after he had been hauled back on board the seaman was as well as ever with the exception of his bruised head and face. Yesterday he was among the first to get shore leave by order of Capt. Reeder. The three men who so gallantly rescued him will each be recommended by Admiral Evans, it was said, for a medal for the brave act.

Six of the battleships of the North Atlantic fleet, under Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, arrived yesterday afternoon. The vessels are the Maine, Missouri, Alabama, Illinois, Massachusetts, and Iowa. The other two vessels, the Kentucky and the Kearsarge, went to Norfolk and Philadelphia, respectively.

Admiral Evans came ashore as soon as his flagship Maine anchored off Forty-fourth Street in the North River. The report that Admiral Evans was ill, was denied by all the officers. Admiral Evans said his only trouble was a touch of rheumatism.

The ships will remain in New York ten days, and will then proceed to the Hampton Roads drill grounds, where the welcoming squadron that is to meet Rear Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg of the British Navy and his squadron of cruisers will assemble.

The welcoming squadron will consist of all the first-class battleships in the North Atlantic Fleet and the armored cruiser division of the same fleet, under Rear Admiral Willard H. Brownson.

Prince Louis is expected about Nov. 1, and after visiting Annapolis, his squadron will come to New York. It is due here about Nov. 9.

Yesterday it was said that the battleship squadron had had preliminary target practice off Provincetown, and that the results were believed to have surpassed the record made at the battle of Santiago.

FROM CAR INTO MANHOLE.

Conductor Falls Off Running Board and Is Rescued from Sewer.

Henry Griffin, a conductor employed by the Union Railway Company, was accidentally knocked off the running board of his car at Sedgwick Avenue, near Mott Avenue, last evening by a man who jumped on the car. Griffin struck the temporary cover of a sewer man hole and he plunged head first to the bottom, ten feet below.

The motorman called Policeman Standish and lowered the policeman into the manhole. Standish found Griffin unconscious. He lifted the injured man up until the motorman could reach him, and then he was lifted out. He was found to be severely bruised about the head and shoulders.

RUSSIA WANTS ENGLISH AID.

It Is to Her Interest to Come to Terms with the Senior Ally in Asia.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 1.—I am in a position to state the Russian view of the Anglo-Japanese treaty.

First of all, Russia thoroughly realizes that she alone is the cause if not the object of the Anglo-Japanese alliance. "Eliminate Russia from Asia, and the whole treaty becomes superfluous," said a highly placed personage.

But the Government does not consider the alliance indicative of an offensive policy. The inspired Russ remarks that such a policy would be incompatible with the apparent desire of Great Britain to conclude an agreement with Russia, and adds that the alliance by no means precludes such an agreement.

This means that Russia, being confronted with a powerful Asiatic partnership, finds it to her interest to come to terms and prefers, for sentimental as well as material considerations, to deal with the senior partner. This preference is not bereft of arrière pensée. His help may prove useful in case of an eventual dispute with the junior partner. Indeed, it may be said that from Japan Russia expects little or nothing.

The Novosti's advocacy of a Russo-Japanese agreement betrays a lack of knowledge of what is going on behind the scenes. There were some hopes in this direction, but they were rudely dispelled by stories of Japanese cruelties in Kamchatka and Sakhalin.

The Russian Minister at Tokio, who is already designated, will not carry any instructions other than those called for by the resumption of diplomatic relations.

GOV. HERRICK HELD UP.

Ohio Executive Was Speeding Auto—So Can Johnson Now.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Mayor Johnson will have the privilege of driving his big red auto through the village of Euclid at a break-neck rate of speed during the rest of the campaign by reason of Gov. Herrick's promise, exacted by the Marshal of that village this afternoon.

Marshal P. J. Cooney was in Euclid Avenue when a big green automobile flashed past him at a law-breaking rate of speed. The Marshal noted the machine, and when it returned he stopped it and was about to arrest the occupants when he discovered that one of the two men was Gov. Herrick.

"I was just going to arrest you for violating the speed ordinance, but being the Governor I suppose I cannot do so," said Cooney.

The Governor smiled and told the Marshal that he did not know he was going so fast. He invited him into the machine, and talked the matter over. The Marshal told him that he would not take any action, but he made the Governor promise that if Mayor Johnson, the political opponent of the Governor, broke the speed ordinance while on one of his campaign trips in that part of the county he, too, should be immune from arrest.

ADDICKS HOPES TO CONTROL.

Delaware Union Republican Committee Will Have a Fight To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 1.—Followers of J. Edward Addicks say they will control the meeting of the Union Republican State Committee to-morrow in Dover with ten of eighteen members. This, they say, will rout Senator J. Frank Allee, who expects eleven of the eighteen votes.

It is believed by friends of Addicks that some of the regulars are laying plans to elect ex-Senator L. Heisler Ball to his former position. It is asserted by these that unless Allee and Ball can accomplish this purpose they will have nothing to do with harmony, and the fight between the factions will continue.

The appointment of the delgates will be the issue which, it is believed, will balk the present plans for harmony. Ball and his friends will insist on choosing the number of delegates according to voting population. Allee's followers will insist upon the present Union Republican apportionment. This issue was the real cause of the first split in the party.

CARS OVER EMBANKMENT.

Passenger Killed and Many Injured in Train Crash at St. Paul.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 1.—A Soo Line passenger train from the East leaving the Union Passenger Station at 9:05 this morning collided with a Chicago Great Western fast stock train at the Fourth Street viaduct. The force of the collision sent five of the passenger cars down a twenty-seven-foot embankment. One woman was killed, and five other passengers were seriously and a score slightly injured, the latter including Frank Martin, Cyrus Berglund, C. J. Keenan, and Miss Crughlin of New York.

The direct cause of the accident was the failure of the air brakes on the stock train to work, this train hurling the Pullman coaches of the passenger train over the embankment. The wreckage caught fire, but the flames were promptly extinguished by the St. Paul Fire Department.

SUIT OVER A WABASH DEAL.

Lawyer Wants $100,000 for Selling Pittsburg Terminal Property.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 1.—A suit has been entered by Thomas A. Noble, a lawyer, against Charles Donnelly and F. F. Nicola to recover $100,000 alleged to be due him for bringing about the sale of the Pittsburg Terminal and Railroad Company to the Wabash syndicate. The suit may bring out the inside history of the deal.

Noble alleges that he interested the syndicate in the property. He brought about a meeting in New York, in November, 1903, between George Gould, Joseph Ramsey, and Louis Fitzgerald, representing the syndicate, and Charles Donnelly for the Pittsburg Terminal Company. Gould at that time said the syndicate was taxed so heavily in getting an entrance to Pittsburg that it did not care to purchase additional property.

Mr. Noble then offered the property to the New York Central, Erie Railroad, and Pittsburg and Lake Erie. Gov. Herrick of Ohio interfered for the Wabash and got better terms. What these terms are Mr. Noble does not say. Noble contends that the sale was the result of his efforts.

CLUB CANAL WORKMEN TO FORCE THEM TO LAND

Shipload from Martinique Prefer Death to Panama's Terrors.

SAY THEY WERE TRICKED

Of 650 Laborers on Board, 150 Resist Panama Police Until Beaten Into Submission.

COLON, Oct. 1.—Laborers from Martinique who arrived here on the French Line steamer Versailles are giving much trouble. They refused to disembark or to submit to vaccination, which is imperative under the American sanitary regulations, and clamored to be taken back to Martinique, asserting that they had been misinformed as to the conditions here, which they said were intolerable and deadly.

Five hundred were with difficulty persuaded to disembark yesterday morning, and these were sent to points along the line of the canal.

One hundred and fifty remained on board and declined to leave the ship under any consideration. These were forcibly ejected from the vessel this afternoon by Panama and canal zone policemen, but not until nearly every one of them had been clubbed and several were bleeding from nasty wounds.

All of yesterday and last night the Versailles was guarded by Panaman policemen. Early this morning the French Consul at Colon, M. Bonhenry, appealed to the men to listen to reason, explaining that they had left Martinique under contract with the Canal Zone emigration agent guaranteeing the payment of their passage here, and that while working on the canal they would have, in addition to their wages, the guarantee of free quarters and free medical attendance.

The men, however, were not amenable to this reasoning. Notwithstanding the efforts of the Consul and of the Panaman and American officials, and despite the information given them by several of their countrymen that health and other conditions on the Istbmus were satisfactory and that the terms of their employment would enable them to save money, they persistently refused to leave the ship, baring their breasts and invoking death in preference to going ashore.

The Captain of the Versailles, who all through the trouble displayed an extraordinary amount of patience, told the men that he was ready to take back to Martinique all those who were able to pay their passage, but the men argued that the French Government would be willing to reimburse the steamship company, and that they themselves were penniless.

Before noon, at the instance of M. Raven, the agent of the company, and of the French Consul, a squad of twelve Panaman police went on board the vessel and told the men that force would be used if they persisted in their refusal to disembark. Seeing that the police were armed with bayonets and guns, the men again bared their breasts and said they would die rather than be taken ashore.

Gov. Melendez, Mayor Andron, the Chief of Police, and others argued with the men, but again without effect. Ten additional policemen arrived at the wharf, but the Governor, wishing to avoid bloodshed, and considering that the police force was insufficient, telegraphed to President Amador asking permission to use the Canal Zone police, to which the President consented. In the meantime twelve policemen from the zone had arrived at the dock and were being held in readiness.

At 2 o'clock the laborers were informed that they would have two hours to reconsider their decision. At 4 o'clock three of them consented to disembark, the others still holding out. Then the Panaman police, armed with clubs, approached, and when the men refused to quit the ship the policemen clubbed them right and left. The zone police a few minutes later assisted in the clubbing, but with better judgment and less indiscriminately. About fifty of the laborers leaped into the sea. All of them were able to swim, but the Captain lowered a boat, which picked them up. Nearly every man had received blows, and several of them were bleeding from ugly wounds.

Seeing that resistance was useless, the men yielded, came ashore, and began to eat the food which had been placed on the dock in sight of them for several hours. Many had not eaten since Saturday. At 5 o'clock all the laborers, who were in a pitiable condition, were placed on board a train which left for Corozal, where they will be put to work.

ARRESTS IN JEWEL ROBBERY.

Two Men Caught in Tenderloin—A Consulate Was Looted.

Charged with stealing diamonds worth $2,500, two men were locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Police Station last night. They were registered as Henry Lane of 223 Eighth Avenue and Joseph De Marce of 183 Stagg Street, Brooklyn. Both were indicted on Aug. 29, but Capt. Dooley's men had been unable to apprehend them until last night, when they were found at 400 Sixth Avenue.

The diamonds were in thirty-three-odd pieces of jewelry stolen from Manuel Walls of 236 Fifth Avenue. Capt. Dooley was not inclined to talk much about the arrests.

"Walls is connected with one of the South American Consulates," was all he would say. "We have got most of the stolen jewels and the pawn tickets for the rest, and we'll get them, too."

DOWIE LOCKED IN CAR.

Members of His Party Admit His Illness at El Paso.

EL PASO, Texas, Oct. 1.—John Alexander Dowie and party arrived here today en route to the proposed Zionist colony at Tamaulipas, Mexico.

Members of the party deny that Dowie has been stricken with paralysis, but they admit that he is ill. He has been locked in his private car all day, and all inquirers were denied admission.

The Alameda Filling.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 1.—The Oceanic Steamship Company's steamer Alameda, which went on the rocks near Fort Point yesterday, is still hard and fast on the reef. She now has about twenty-four feet of water in her hold, and it is believed that it will be impossible with the facilities at hand to float her.

She lies in an easy position, but in a location that will be extremely serious in a heavy sea.

JAPANESE STORES BURNED.

Supposedly Incendiary Fire at Hiroshima—Loss May Be $5,000,000.

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—A fire that started in an army storehouse at Hiroshima at 1 o'clock this morning and was still burning at 1 P. M., destroyed twenty temporary buildings, together with their contents, consisting mostly of provisions and clothing. Seven other buildings, containing fodder, were burned. There was no loss of life.

Although the buildings were constructed of light material, they contained an enormous amount of stored goods, and, the structures being of an inflammable nature, the flames were difficult to extinguish, despite the desperate efforts of the troops.

The loss is variously estimated at from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000.

MINE DESTROYS A STEAMER.

Coasting Vessel Sunk Off Shan-Tung —Fifteen Persons Drowned.

CHE-FOO, Oct. 1.—The coasting steamer Hsiesbo, plying between Shanghai and Tien-Tsin, struck and was totally destroyed by a mine ninety miles south of the Shan-Tung Promontory yesterday morning.

Fifteen persons on board the vessel were drowned, included among them being Engineers Mauchan and Muir.

The foreign passengers and some of the crew of the Hsiesbo were rescued by two passing steamers.

STRIKE ON THE BIG FOUR.

Two Hundred Freight Handlers Go Out —Wanted Higher Wages.

INDIANAPOLIS, Oct. 1.—Two hundred freight handlers employed by the Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad (the "Big Four") went on strike to-day.

The men sent a committee to the company, asking for an increase in wages from 15 to 17½ cents an hour. Instead of granting the increase the company inaugurated the tonnage or piece system. This, it is said, is the main cause of the strike.

20 SCHOOLMA'AMS AGROUND.

Many of Them Became Very Ill Before They Were Rescued.

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 1.—The sailing yacht Viking, Capt. Gale, while out with a pleasure party this afternoon went aground on a bar at the Inlet.

The pleasure party consisted of twenty high school teachers. When the yacht grounded they became frightened and hysterical, and the rocking and pounding of the yacht made many of them ill. Some of them had practically collapsed when the life savers from the Atlantic City Station reached the yacht in the surfboat and took them off. When the passengers were off the yacht floated free.

PRESIDENT CALLS MITCHELL.

Head of United Mine Workers Invited to the White House.

SCRANTON, Penn., Oct. 1.—By invitation President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers will on Tuesday next call on President Roosevelt. He does not know particularly what the President wants to see him about, but it surmised here that it is to look over the possibility of avoiding a strike in the anthracite region next Spring.

Mr. Mitchell leaves early to-morrow morning for New York to attend a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Civic Federation. To-morrow night he will leave New York for Washington to keep the appointment with President Roosevelt.

BANKER CAUGHT SPEEDING.

Cincinnati Man in an Auto Gives a Policeman a Mile Chase.

After a chase of more than a mile in Bedford Avenue, Williamsburg, a bicycle policeman overhauled an automobile, in which were William J. Odell, a banker of Cincinnati, his wife, a guest, and Orion Saule, the chauffeur, who lives at 850 West End Avenue, Manhattan. The policeman said the automobile was making twenty-one miles an hour.

The chauffeur was arrested and bailed out by C. E. Lynch of 929 St. Mark's Avenue. Neither the chauffeur nor the Odells were in the Lee Avenue Court when the case was called. Magistrate Higginbotham forfeited the bail bond. It was said that the Odells had left for Cincinnati.

ROCKEFELLER FRUIT GUARDED

Robbers Have Been Carrying It Away by the Wagon Load.

TARRYTOWN, Oct. 1.—John D. Rockefeller's estate is now regularly patrolled by special officers, and will be until the last of the fruit has been gathered. For years Mr. Rockefeller's orchards have been robbed.

No objection was ever made to persons who happened to be passing the place and picking up apples or pears, but when fruit was carried away in wagonloads to be hawked about the management of the estate resolved to put a stop to it.

Application for the appointment of employes as special officers was made, and they have been sworn in. They will guard the fruit now, and later will keep the huntsmen off.

SUES A UNION FOR $100,000.

Printing Company Asks Damages for Interference by Strikers.

The Jersey City Printing Company has brought suit for $100,000 damages against Typographical Union No. 94 and Kenneth Forbes, Allan Ball, and Forrest A. Rice, its officers. The summons, which was served on Saturday, is returnable before Justice Gummere at Trenton on Oct. 10.

The company's employes quit work in a body about a month ago because their demand for an eight-hour day was refused. Non-union men were employed in their places, but the company alleges they were enticed away by the three defendants and other members of No. 94 generally. This the defendants deny. They say they have no fears as to the outcome of the suit.

PLATT, BACK, RAPS HIGGINS AND ODELL

He's Sore at the Governor for Keeping His Hotel Dry.

AND AS FOR MR. WOODRUFF

Not Talking About Relations with Him —Municipal Ownership Only an "Odell Vagary."

Senator Platt came to New York yesterday afternoon from Washington, where he had been for a few days following his Pacific Coast trip with Mrs. Platt. The Senator and Mrs. Platt were driven to their new home, the new Hotel Gotham, Fifty-fifth Street and Fifth Avenue, where almost palatial quarters had been arranged for the Senator by the builders. The Senator expressed himself as feeling excellent, and he looked it.

But the coming to his new home was not without a shadow. The bright rays of the scores of lights in his apartments couldn't dispel it. The Hotel Gotham is "dry," and all because of Gov. Higgins, according to Senator Platt. Herculean efforts were made in the Legislative session of 1905 to get the hotel exempted from that provision of the excise law which prohibits liquor selling within 200 feet of a church.

The bill to exempt the hotel was pushed through both Senate and Assembly in the regular session only after some effort. Then Gov. Higgins refused to sign it. To that incident the senior Senator paid attention last night. From it he rapidly led to other things.

The way the senior Senator came to talk about Gov. Higgins was this:

"Senator, how do you like your new quarters?"

"I am delighted with them. The house is a beautiful one; there is only one trouble—it's awfully dry."

Then the Tioga chief jammed straight into politics. "I am against Gov. Higgins for another term," he said, with energy. "I am against him on that proposition under any and all circumstances. I never asked him but one favor, and that was his approval of the bill that would allow this hotel to have a license."

"Did the Governor promise that he would approve the bill?"

"No, he didn't promise, but he led me to believe up to the last minute that he would do it. Then he vetoed it."

The last sentence came from the Senator's lips with a snap. He continued:

"The Governor forgot, I guess, that I wrote more than 37,000 letters in his behalf in the campaign of last year."

The discussion switched to the New York City situation. Senator Platt smiled and said:

"Yes, that was my interview all right that Washington interview. I told what I thought about McClellan."

Then he said he didn't take the William R. Hearst boom for Mayor very seriously.

The Senator was asked if he believed Timothy L. Woodruff would run for Mayor on the Republican ticket. He answered:

"I would advise him to accept the nomination."

Questioned more closely, he said: "Yes, I think he ought to run."

Reference was made to the possibility that Chairman Odell might tempt Woodruff with the nomination for Governor in 1906, and so get him to take the Mayoralty nomination, and the Senator was asked if he thought Woodruff's nomination now would make him especially eligible for the higher honor next year.

"It wouldn't make any special difference, even if he should take the nomination for Mayor, so far as I can see," said the Senator.

Asked whom he favored for the Gubernatorial nomination next year, he answered: "I can't discuss that now."

"But you were for Woodruff last year; have your relations with the Kings leader become less friendly?"

"I don't care to discuss that."

"What about the Republicans' prospects for next year, Senator?"

"I think they have a very good chance."

"Suppose McClellan should be elected Mayor by 100,000 and then become the Democratic candidate for Governor next year?"

"That does not enter into the question. Many Republicans will vote for him for Mayor who would not vote for him for Governor."

The Senator said, "I don't know," when asked if his friends would vote for McClellan for Mayor. Senator Platt said he was for Robert C. Morris for United States District Attorney to succeed H. L. Burnett. He said that he was for him "First, last, and all the time." That was what he said last December when Senator Depew was a candidate to succeed himself.

Senator Platt said that he had been informed by President Roosevelt that Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg was not a candidate for the place that Morris seeks. James R. Sheffield was the only other candidate, as far as he knew, he said. Senator Platt said he was not familiar with the "insurance situation." Asked if the Republican State Committee had got any insurance companies' money he said, "Not that I know of." This question was then put:

"What did you mean by saying that it would be worth while to live to see the State campaign?"

"You all know as well as I do," was the answer.

The Senator said he believed the sudden shifting of the Republican organization from fusion and municipal ownership was "another one of Odell's vagaries."

He said as to the proposed Odell-Woodruff agreement:

"It is a question whether Odell could guarantee that; and, even if he could, whether he could keep the guarantee."

MR. FRICK'S MOTHER DEAD.

Financier Hurried on to See Her Before She Succumbed.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 1.—Mrs. Elizabeth Frick, mother of H. C. Frick of Pittsburg, died at 10 o'clock to-night at her home in Wooster from the effects of a stroke of paralysis. She was 86 years old. She had been an invalid for more than a year, and during the last few months was blind.

Mr. Frick came on from New York to see his mother. He left late this evening for New York, where he is to meet his wife and daughter on arrival from Europe.

NO PLACE FOR FORNES ON TICKET---MURPHY

Room Must Be Left for the Irish, Tammany's Leader Says.

A CHAIRMANSHIP FOR HIM

Hearst Men Call for One Municipal Ownership Conference, C. Augustus Haviland for Another.

Charles F. Murphy, the leader of Tammany, allowed a few questions to be fired at him at the Democratic Club yesterday. The Hearst men issued a call for a municipal ownership conference, and so did C. Augustus Haviland of Brooklyn on his own account. The Citizens' Union and the Republicans were not heard from.

At the Democratic Club, Leader Murphy conferred with half the district leaders besides several dozen Tammany figures of varying weights and sizes. Some got thirty seconds, others a minute, and a few as long as they really needed.

The leader of Tammany Hall came in at 4:30 o'clock, and was promptly escorted by Secretary Smith to the circle of newspaper men who had been told to be on hand.

"Well," said Mr. Murphy after a short bow and a grin.

He was asked what he had to say about the Democratic slate.

"Nothing," was the answer. He continued:

"I don't know anything about it except the place of Mayor. We may not be able to tell until the convention meets."

"Mr. Murphy, it is understood that Charles V. Fornes will be Chairman of the City Convention."

"Yes, Mr. Fornes will be Chairman if he will take it, and we believe that he will. The Committee of Five appointed to arrange for the convention has not yet reported about it."

"What's this to be, Mr. Murphy? Mr. Fornes's obituary? Will he be allowed to sing his swan song? It looks that way, does it not?"

"Why, if Brooklyn insists on the nomination of Metz for Controller as now appears probable, how can we put Fornes on the ticket? We couldn't well put on more than one German."

"You mean room must be left for the Irish?"

Mr. Murphy nodded.

"How about the nomination for President of the Board of Aldermen? Will it go to Francis Burton Harrison?"

Mr. Murphy waved his hand as if to brush away the query and said:

"Don't know, don't know. That hasn't been decided yet."

"Mr. Murphy, there are some who believe that Mayor McClellan would lose ground if he should be elected for a four-year term and at the end of a year take a nomination for Governor. What do you think about it?"

"Oh, that's a year off."

"But Tammany Hall is believed to have such plan in view—"

"That will be a question for the Mayor to decide when the time comes."

"Will Tammany nominate Jerome!"

At this Mr. Murphy shook his head and began to refer to the Committee of Five on Arrangements for the City Convention of Thursday.

Tammany's City Convention will be held Thursday night at Carnegie Hall. Mayor McClellan will be within call, as will be the nominees for the next two offices. All three will come before the convention and make short speeches.

The City Convention will consist of 698 delegates, Manhattan and the Bronx will have 408, Brooklyn 228, Queens 47, and Richmond 15. The Manhattan and Bronx delegates will be on one side, the three sister boroughs' envoys on the other, with Brooklyn in front, Queens next, and Richmond in the rear. Murphy will sit at the head of the Maohattan delegation, Haffen at the head of the Bronx men, McCarren in the best seat apportioned to Brooklyn, with Cassidy and Muller holding the most conspicuous places among the Queens and Richmond cohorts.

All organizations believing in municipal ownership of public utilities are invited through a document put out yesterday to send two delegates to a conference to be held to-morrow afternoon at 4 o'clock at 238 Fourth Avenue, when a platform and candidates will be discussed. The invitation was signed by John Martin and F. E. Shober of the New York Municipal Ownership League, Alfred J. Boulton of the Workingmen's Municipal Ownership League, A. H. Stebbins of the Citizens' Union, and M. J. Flaherty of the Brooklyn Municipal Ownership League.

The document put out by Mr. Haviland invites a conference of municipal ownership organizations to meet on Wednesday at 4 P. M. at Haviland Hall, 399 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn. To this meeting Mr. Haviland invites the Municipal Ownership League of Greater New York, the Municipal Ownership League of Brooklyn, the Germano-American League, the Radical Democracy, and the Allied Boards of Trade.

QUEENS DEMOCRATS ASTIR.

Local Campaign to Open with Clubhouse Cornerstone Laying.

The Democratic side of the local campaign in Queens is to open with the laying of the cornerstone of the new Democratic Club house in Long Island City. The building will be in Anable Avenue, opposite the ruins of the Queens County Court House, and will be three stories high. The foundation is under way and the contractor is being urged to lose no time so that the cornerstone can be laid a few days after the Democratic County and Borough Convention, which will be held in the Astoria Schuetzen Park Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The convention will name candidates for Borough President, District Attorney, and two Coroners. There will be a parade of Democratic clubs preceding the cornerstone ceremony.

It was learned in Long Island City yesterday that every effort is being made to get a large force of men at work on the Blackwell's Island Bridge. A letter from Bridge Commissioner Best to a public official in Queens said that the bridge work would be pushed rapidly. It is reported that within ten days sufficient of the steel work will be erected on the island to prove to the people of Queens that the bridge structure is to be rushed ahead.

BRIDE-TO-BE FLED TO RIVAL.

Disappointed Gathering in Church and Was Married on a Train.

Special to The New York Times.

SYDNEY, Iowa, Oct. 1.—Ellis Judd, a wealthy young man of this city, is mourning the loss of his intended wife. Miss Maude Gruwell, daughter of State Senator C. O. Gruwell of Montana, left him almost at the altar and was married to Everett B. Ferris on a train which was speeding toward Livingston.

The guests were assembled in the church when the bride-to-be stole across the street to a store where Ferris was a clerk. The young man seized the opportunity and carried her away.

LINER'S OFFICER MAULED.

Brown Did It, Says Wounded Man—Religious Quartermaster Gone.

August Johnson, a quartermaster on the American Line steamship New York, lying at Pier 15 North River, was taken from his berth last night to the Hudson Street Hospital, suffering from eleven severe scalp wounds, concussion of the brain, and a possible fracture of the skull. All he would say was:

"Brown did it."

The police were looking last night for Quartermaster J. L. Brown, who disappeared from the ship after Johnson's plight was discovered. Quartermaster Christian Clemensen walked into Johnson's stateroom, and found Brown wiping blood from the head of the injured man. Brown at once left. Brown's reputation on the ship is very high. He was deeply religious, and attended every service possible when in port.

Johnson said he had been attacked with a belaying pin, but none was found near him.

FIGHT McCARREN'S PLAN.

Two Districts Threaten Trouble—Ebstein on the Fusion Slate.

Republicans, Democrats, members of the Citizens' Union, and of the Municipal League in Brooklyn are in a ferment over the nominations to be made at the County and Borough Conventions soon to be held. The Republican and Democratic Conventions are to take place next Saturday, and the Citizens' Union will hold its conventions to-day.

The greatest anxiety is displayed by members of the Democratic organization because of the character of the slate proposed by Senator P. H. McCarren. Three of the candidates proposed are not acceptable to Assembly district leaders, who have made the fight for McCarren's leadership, and a rupture is imminent if he proceeds to carry out his plan. Two of the candidates are especially objectionable.

They are Edward Kaufmann, the present County Clerk, and Matthew E. Dooley, Register, whom McCarren evidently means to have nominated to succeed themselves. At least, he seems to have intended to until now. In each instance the men fought the election of McCarren's district leader, Kaufmann opposing Henry E. Cochrane in the Seventeenth Assembly District and Dooley being defeated in his fight for leadership of the Twelfth District by Michael E. Butler.

Those who side with McCarren declare that the nomination of these two men would be a clever move and that it would harmonize all of the warring elements in the party. On the other hand Butler and Cochrane have rallied friends around them who declare that such nominations would be an insult. If McCarren persists in jamming these nominations through the convention the delegates elected from the Twelfth and Seventeenth Districts assert that they will leave the convention. Furthermore, they promise that the delegates to the County Committee will resign.

It is believed, however, that Senator McCarren will be prevailed on before the conventions are held to withdraw the names of these two men and substitute others.

The other candidate whose nomination, it is promised, will cause discontent is ex-District Attorney James W. Ridgway, who, it is expected, will be nominated for Borough President. When he ran for District Attorney he was opposed and assailed by pulpit and press. Despite this he carried Kings County by a substantial majority. He is a good campaigner, his friends say. Mr. Ridgway's most popular adversary is Arthur J. O'Keefe, at present Superintendent of Sewers for the borough. While many of the Kings County Republican leaders oppose any Fusion scheme within the county, it is generally believed that some move in that direction will be made. It is expected that Major F. H. E. Ebstein, who was Deputy Police Commissioner under Mayor Low, will be nominated for Borough President by the Republicans and indorsed by the Citizens' Union.

SAW PAID FIREMEN RUN.

Supplanting of Staten Island Vamps Marked by a Blaze and an Arrest.

The Second Battalion, Borough of Richmond, is the title of the first force of paid firemen to be put in service in Staten Island. It comprises seven companies, each consisting of eleven men and a Captain. Their duties began yesterday. The battalion's territory extends from Mariners' Harbor to Tompkinsville.

Chief William Guerin, who has been moved from the Fifth Battalion, Manhattan, to the new command, will have charge also of two volunteer companies, one at Graniteville and the other at Kreisherville. The seven paid companies and the two volunteer companies replace the twenty-three volunteer companies.

Eight o'clock was the hour fixed for the change. There had been many predictions that it would be marked by alarms and fires. Ten minutes before the hour there was an alarm from Mariners' Harbor. The fire did not amount to much, but an arrest was made for incendiarism. While the volunteers were hurrying to Mariners' Harbor, Chief Croker and Chief Guerin met Chief William Sink of the retiring volunteers, who turned the keys over to them.

Chief Croker then started on a tour of the district. The first news he got was that "Old Cataract," the West Brighton engine, had blown up. The change had shifted the engine to the house at Mariners' Harbor, where Herman Decker, the engineer, started to test it. He had only 125 pounds of steam up when the apparatus exploded. Decker narrowly escaped serious scalds.

At 4:50 o'clock Chief Croker and his party started for the ferry to return to Manhattan. As he passed through New Brighton the men at an engine house signaled to him to stop, and told him that an alarm was ringing. It proved to be from the neighborhood of Columbia Street, West Brighton. The Chief's automobile broke the local speed records on the way to the fire.

An unoccupied building had been apparently set on fire in order to see the paid men work. There was a crowd on hand. The Chief heard many jokes about the runs the paid men would have to make during the night. He went to the Eighty-first Precinct Station House and after a talk with the Captain, put himself in communication with Mulberry Street, with the result that all the boxes which it is possible to open without going to a house for a key are being guarded by men in plain clothes.

The final alarm for the volunteers proved to be for an unoccupied shed in Central Avenue, back of Harry Hughes's Hotel. Hughes said that a little before the fire was discovered Charles Van Horn entered his dining room and had a drink. Hughes said Van Horn then went to the shed and set fire to a bundle of excelsior. Detective Sullivan arrested Van Horn, and later Magistrate Croak held him in $2,000 bail. He was locked up.

TWO BAND STANDS COLLAPSE.

Accidents in Massachusetts Towns—Boy Fatally Injured.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Oct. 1.—Three members of the Banda Roma of Boston were seriously hurt, while nearly every other member of the band was cut and bruised, by the collapse of a band stand here to-night at a street celebration by the parishioners of the Italian Church of the Madonna del Rosario.

The accident was caused by the breaking of one of the supporting posts of the stand, allowing the structure to fall and precipitating the members of the band to the ground. Most of the instruments were ruined.

FALL RIVER, Mass., Oct. 1.—During the celebration of the feast of St. Michael at the Italian Church of Our Lady of the Rosary, in Flint Village to-day, a band stand in front of the edifice collapsed. Edward Mullin, aged 9, was fatally hurt, and William Mahan and Albert Borden, his companions, were slightly hurt. The bandsmen were not injured.

BICYCLIST HITS CAR.

Two Lads Racing in the Street, One Gets His Skull Broken.

John Dello, a porter at 305 East Twenty-ninth Street, was bicycling with a companion in Thirtieth Street last evening when they started to race. At Second Avenue Dello was slightly ahead of his friend. A south-bound car was coming down Second Avenue, and would have cleared the bycicist but for an extra burst of speed on Dello's part. The front wheel of Dello's bicycle caught in the rear fender of the car, and Dello was thrown on his head.

The lady's skull was fractured. When his companion saw what had happened he fled. Dello is in Bellevue Hospital in a critical condidtion. He is 16 years old.

No Clue in Brooklyn Kidnapping.

Although they had made three arrests on suspicion the Brooklyn police yesterday did not develop much to clear up the case of Antonio Maracandina, the Italian boy who has been missing for a week, and is supposed to have been kidnapped. They feel convinced that his abductors are holding him prisoner in one of the Italian settlements in Brooklyn. Simonetta Picona, the woman who was suspected of knowing something of the kidnapping, has been released. Her husband, Salvator Lafata, is still in jail.

HAS FORMED A LEAGUE TO OUST JOHN A. M'CALL

Preacher Denounces N. Y. Life's Head, Also Perkins.

SLINGS POETRY AT DEPEW

Hopes to Compel the First Two to Make Restitution and Hints at Criminal Action.

After denouncing President John A. McCall and Vice President George W. Perkins of the New York Life Insurance Company by implication in his sermon at the Riverside Baptist Church last evening, the Rev. Dr. A. Lincoln Moore, pastor of the church, invited reporters into the vestry and announced to them that he is forming a league of policy holders to compel the resignation from the company of the two officials, and to prosecute them if such a step be found feasible. J. Judson Hyatt of 45 Nassau Street, the Rev. Dr. Moore said, has been engaged as the league attorney.

Dr. Moore said that he was moved to take this step through the receipt of fifty or more letters from policy holders more or less important who felt that he could help them in the matter. He gave the names of some of those who had sent letters as C. H. Venner of 33 Wall Street, James A. Allen of 33 Wall Street, and Miss Lulu Spankenberg of 417 East Seventy-first Street.

The sermon which preceded this announcement was a sharp arraignment of dishonest methods in general, and more particularly in life insurance. Senator Depew came in for a share of criticism.

"As a result of the insurance revelations," said Dr. Moore, "men who stood high in the political and business life have fallen in the dust. We might apply appropriately to a certain United States Senator the words of the good Quaker poet:

"So fallen! so lost!
The light withdrawn which once he wore,
The glory of his grey hair gone forever more."

Dr. Moore got the inspiration for his sermon from Deuteronomy, xxvii. 17. The subject of the sermon was "Cursed is He that Removeth His Neighbor's Landmark; or, God's Anathema Upon Dishonesty."

At some length the preacher pointed out a few of the landmarks in life which it was sinful to remove. He mentioned that it was wrong for any man or body of men to take from his fellow-man light, air, time, property, and so forth.

He held that every man had an inalienable right to all these things, and that it was not right for any man or syndicate of men to filch them from him. When he reached property he soon came to life insurance. Then he said:

"He who steals another's property, whether it be the millionaires' securities or the widows and orphans' pittance, removes a neighbor's landmark—that is to say, he steals.

"The former theft is at present very popular, as is evidenced by the recent disclosures in insurance circles. These revelations have not had a tendency to increase the confidence of the policy holders in particular or that of the public in general in the officers of these great companies. Indeed, it would appear that the high officials in them have been animated by an unholy scramble for dollars, forgetful of the fact that they were handling trust funds.

"One result of the investigation proves conclusively that $100,000 a year solely will not secure integrity and character. President Roosevelt receives only $50,000 a year, and he gives to the country conscience, ability, and character."

Dr. Moore went on to point out other men who did not get one-tenth of the salary of high insurance officials, but who had to give much more in return for it.

"The men who should have conserved the interests of the policy holders have been guilty of betraying a most sacred trust," he said, and he read a clipping from a Philadelphia paper which declared that insurance officials were "not common thieves, but uncommon ones."

"The President of the New York Life," he continued, "had no right to give a large sum of the policy holders' money for political purposes, and his statement that the election of the Democratic candidate would have been furthered, and the gold standard jeoparded if the contribution had not been made, and thus the value of the stocks and bonds of the New York Life lowered—that is no excuse."

"How fallacious is such a theory. There was never, in the last campaign, as everybody knows, danger that the Democratic candidate would be elected, and the gold standard was not discussed. We can earnestly indorse the words of William Jennings Bryan, who said of one of these officials: 'The man was so anxious to preserve the honor of the Nation that he forgot his own.'"

"A certain wit recently remarked that by grafting they had been able in the West to produce a seedless apple, but that insurance officials in this city by grafting have come very near to producing a cashless company. I agree with that wit."

POLICY HOLDERS SAFE.

View of The London Times on the American Insurance Scandals.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Discussing the life insurance scandals in America, The Times to-morrow in its financial supplement will express the conviction that the losses which have occurred through mismanagement will affect only the bonuses or dividends payable to policy holders at the end of distribution periods.

"Some policy holders," says The Times, "especially the small ones, who are least able to bear the loss, have been abandoning their policies and taking cash surrender values. Policy holders who take this course are in the majority of cases ill-advised. They are abandoning a large part of the premiums paid for future protection and are incurring the risk of not being able to insure elsewhere owing to impaired health and the certainty of having to pay for other insurances the higher premiums required by increased age.

"Whatever scandals may be revealed by the insurance inquiry, there can hardly be doubt of the capacity of the three great American companies known here, the Equitable, the New York Life, and the Mutual of New York, to meet at their face value all contracts. Bonuses or dividends are in another category, and may probably be much impaired."

YEARNS FOR SOLDIER SON.

Mrs. Ball of Brooklyn Hasn't Heard of George Since the Spanish War.

Mrs. Zelina Ball of 64 Conselyea Street, Brooklyn, is trying to find her son, George Ball, who was an enlisted man in the first regiment of immunes sent to the Philippines in the Spanish war. He enlisted as a cavalryman eighteen years ago, and went to Oklahoma. There he was known, his mother says, as George Dakin, as was on duty as a Sergeant when the Oklahoma lands were thrown open to settlement.

Mrs. Ball says he married Miss Mary Wilkinson of Enid, and lived in that town several years. His mother has heard nothing from him since the immune regiment was mustered out. She is old and very poor, and is practically homeless.

NEW ORLEANS FEVER REPORT.

Twenty-three New Cases and Three Deaths the Total for Sunday.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 1.—The yellow fever report to 6 o'clock this evening is as follows: New cases, 23; total, 3,023; deaths, 3; total, 391; new centres of infection, 4; cases under treatment, 227; discharged, 2,405.

The Sunday record would have been the lowest this season but for the report of a nest of infection in another convent and asylum, the attending physician reporting six cases among the girls in the Mount Carmel Institute Asylum, on Piety Street. Another case is reported from the French Asylum on St. Anns Street.

Among the dead is Sister Mary Edith of the Convent of Perpetual Adoration, on Marais Street. She was 18 years of age, and had only recently taken her vows. She was a Miss Petronille Nigel.

News from the country was meagre today. The following reports were received: Kenner, one case, two deaths; Mandeville, one new case; Tallulah and vicinity, thirteen new cases.

BAD IDEALS PAGAN—HADLEY.

But If a Man's Work Aids Others His Purposes Are Christian.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 1.—"Double standards in college and business life" were discussed to-day by President Hadley of Yale in his annual address to the students at the opening of college. In the course of his address he said:

"A selfish purpose, like ambition, may protect a man from the temptations of idle pleasure just as effectively as an unselfish purpose, like devotion to public service; but it may at the same time result in a man's so misusing his life that from the standpoint of his fellow-man it is worse than wasted. How can we guard against this?

"If a man's purposes and ideals are such that he is seeking to attain them for himself at the expense of his fellowmen they are pagan ideals, and the man is likely to grow bad as he grows older. If his ideals are such that each step toward their realization means the advancement of those about him his purposes are Christian.

"What is the pagan ideal of sport? To win whether you play fair or not. What is the Christian ideal? To play the game fairly for all it is worth, and win if you can. If we held the former ideal every game we play is a training for fraudulent business, bad politics, and an unchristian civilization. If we play with the latter purpose in view every game is a training for that public service in Church and State for which Yale College was founded."

FIANCEE'S COSTLY WHIM.

Because of It Aged Iowa Banker Sacrifices Realty.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLES CITY, Iowa, Oct. 1.—G. B. Eastman, one of the wealthiest men in Northern Iowa, has just disposed of all his real property, amounting to more than $500,000, to satisfy a whim of his fiancée, Miss Wood of Minneapolis, whose acquaintance he gained through answering a newspaper advertisement. So hurriedly did he sell the property that he accepted the first offer made by some local capitalists, who are said to have obtained it for three-fourths of its actual value.

Eastman has been a resident here for forty years, and was the first banker in Northern Iowa. He is a widower, childless, and about 83 years old.

PRICE OF SOFT COAL UP.

Scarcity of Cars May Cause an Advance to $2 a Ton.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 1.—Because of the scarcity of cars, soft coal has advanced to $1.25 a ton at the mines. Prominent operators say that unless relief comes within the next few days the wholesale price will reach $2 a ton.

Representatives of nearly every coal company in the city have called at the general office of the Pennsylvania and Reading Roads and urged greater supplies of cars to fill orders now on the company's books. No relief is promised by either railroad, for every available car is in service.

Not in months has there been such a demand for bituminous coal as at this time. Large companies are storing every extra ton they can buy, and retailers are insisting that they be served in order to take care of regular customers.

Notwithstanding the unusual demand, the larger operating companies say there is more coal above ground at this time than three years ago, when the last strike was pending. They attribute the activity to a scare which has taken possession of consumers.

SUIT CASE MYSTERY ARREST.

Boston Clerk Held—Said to Have Talked of Cutting Up a Body.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—The first arrest in connection with the finding in the harbor near Winthrop on Sept. 21 of a suitcase containing the torso of a woman occurred to-day, when the local officers took into custody on suspicion of being an accomplice in the case William A. Haynes of 52 Chambers Street, West End, this city. Haynes is a clerk in a shipping office. The arrest is stated to have been made on statements by Samuel A. Wingfield, a clerk in a grocery store, who told the police that he had a friend who had cut up a body.

Haynes was examined at length by the police and denied the accusation, affirming that his friend had become mixed about what he had told him of his experiences while serving on a Coroner's jury. He was locked up and Wingfield was also held as a witness.

The authorities, while declining to make a specific statement regarding the arrest, indicate by their manner that they are far from confident that the right man is being detained.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 1.—The family of William Allen Haynes, arrested in Boston on suspicion in connection with the dress suit case murder mystery, are residents of this city. Haynes left Richmond about fifteen years ago and went to Newport News, where he was employed by the Old Dominion Steamship Company. He married a woman of that city. He then drifted to Boston, and two years ago he and his wife separated. She is still living in Newport News, and there are two children, aged 13 and 5, respectively, who are with their mother.

COST UNIONS $75,000.

Amount Paid by Chicago Federation to Defend Strike Prisoners.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—It was revealed at the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor to-day that the Federation has expended $75,000 since last May in defending union men charged with "slugging" and other violence.

About $50,000 of that amount was paid out in defraying attorneys' fees and court costs in the teamsters' strike.

HELD COURT IN A TENT TO TRY AUTO VIOLATORS

Trap Set for Speeders on the Vanderbilt Cup Course.

A BARON FIRST IN THE NET

He Couldn't Speak English, but W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Acted as Interpreter—Only Racers May Speed.

MINEOLA, L. I., Oct. 1.—District Attorney Coles declared war to-day on the automobilists who have been violating the speed law on the Vanderbilt Cup course. An eighth of a mile was measured off on the Jericho Road, the finish being in front of the judges' stand for the Vanderbilt race. Justice George C. Tatem opened court at the fair grounds in a tent which he had occupied all week during the fair. Deputy Sheriffs Hoffman and Clough were posted at the finish.

The first car to shoot across the finish line faster than the law allows was that of Baron Purkeim. He had with him George Augler. The machine made the distance in sixteen seconds. The Baron spoke no English and the Justice no French. The Baron talked fast and excitedly, but no one understood. At last it was made out that he was some one of importance, and as he used William K. Vanderbilt's name, Mr. Vanderbilt was telephoned for. He hurried to the tent of the Justice in a machine. Some one also telephoned to Chairman Morrell, who also responded.

Mr. Vanderbilt, who acted as interpreter, offered to pay the fine for the Baron, but the offer was declined with much bowing. Judge Tatem suggested that Mr. Vanderbilt go on the Baron's bond, and later there could be a trial. Mr. Vanderbilt declined. He would pay the fine, but would not go on a bond. Then, through Mr. Vanderbilt, the Baron asked to be paroled. He was allowed to go in custody of a Constable. The Constable soon returned with $25, the amount of the fine.

It was not long before F. O. Ostericher, an Englishman, who did the eighth in twelve seconds, was haled to the tent of justice. He was good natured about it, and after having the law explained, paid his $25 and said the experience was worth the price.

C. A. Tolston, who said he was from New York and France, and only two weeks from Paris, did not believe he was traveling an eighth in 11 seconds, but if the deputies said so it must be so, and he paid. He got a receipt for the money, which he said he would frame. He promised not to make himself liable to the double fine and imprisonment that goes with a second offense.

The next victim said he was Thomas Williams. He had his wife with him and went the distance in fifteen seconds. When signaled to stop, Williams slowed down and was moving easily as he approached the deputies. Then he realized what it meant, and apparently tried to send his machine leaping ahead. Hoffman hurled himself at the machine.

He was angry because another man had got away just before, and caught hold of a lever in an effort to land himself in the machine. The result of Williams's throwing on full speed and Hoffman's leap was to bring the automobile up short almost on end. The spectators expected to see the machine tumble over and crush all three persons.

Williams said the machine belonged to Borough President Joseph Cassidy of Queens. He insisted that Cassidy would do things to the police until he was informed that he was not in Queens, but in Nassau. Justice Tatem, desiring to befriend a friend of President Cassidy, sent for ex-Supervisor Girdel V. Brewer, who is in charge of the Brooklyn Water Works ponds in this county. He said he didn't know Williams, and refused to vouch for him. Mrs. Williams deposited enough jewelry with the court to insure the payment of the $25 fine.

The Justice wrote several letters to-night to ascertain the names of the owners of the machines which escaped. The patrol will be continuous hereafter. The finishing point will be shifted to various places on the course, so that violators may be trapped. No speeding will be allowed at any time except by the racers, and by them only at specified hours.

The action of the District Attorney and Justice Tatem is approved by Chairman Morrell and Mr. Vanderbilt.

AUTO RACER ARRESTED.

Tracy, Who Was Second in Elimination Trial, Exceeded Speed Limit.

Joseph Tracy, who finished second in the Vanderbilt Cup elimination race, in the Thomas Locomobile, was arrested on the Merrick Road, near Farmer Avenue, Jamaica, yesterday afternoon, while driving the racing car, which is entered in the race on Oct. 14. He was taking it to Bridgeport, where he was to have speeded it to-day. The car was running between thirty and forty miles an hour, according to Policeman August Siegert. Tracy furnished $100 bail, and will have to appear in the police court to-day to answer to the charge of excessive speeding. With Tracy, when he was arrested, was his mechanic, Albert J. Poole, who rides with him in the races.

The committee having charge of the Vanderbilt Cup race notified all contestants not to violate the speed law on or near the cup course. Special notices were issued announcing certain hours for speed trials; it was also stated that drivers guilty of exceeding the speed laws would do so at their own risk. The committee is using every effort to have the law respected, and expect the assistance of the competitors in their efforts. This is the first arrest in connection with the cup race.

Dr. Angell Warns Them Not to Let Their Morals Take a Vacation.

Special to The New York Times.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 1.—President Angell of Michigan University in his annual opening address to the students to-day warned the entering freshmen of the dangers of demoralization in college life. He said:

"All the restraints of your home life, the care of your parents, and the good opinion of your neighbors, are no longer present, and it is very easy to fall into ways that you would never adopt if you had remained at home. Don't let your morals take a vacation, as many students do when they first enter here. You may come across some comfortable, jolly fellow who may ask you to go into a saloon, a thing which you would not do in your own village or town. Have the strength to resist. Be careful of the companions you choose.

"In the great cosmopolitan gathering which composes any big university there are men who are not desirable companions. If you fall in with these during your first few weeks here it is very hard to break away later. Your whole life may be determined by the friends you make during the next month. This is the greatest moral crisis you will probably be called to go through."

Dismissals for College Hazing.

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 1.—During the past week there has been a fresh outbreak of hazing at the State Agricultural and Mechanical College, as a result of which five students are on the point of dismissal. Ten days ago two sophomores were expelled for hazing.

Boulder Crushes Huntsman.

WINSTED, Conn., Oct. 1.—While climbing a fifty-foot hill here to-day James G. Maddrah, Jr., who was on a hunting trip, stepped on a big boulder which toppled over and both man and rock were hurled down a fifty-foot embankment. At the bottom the rock fell on Maddrah and killed him instantly, and his crushed body was found by his son.

Pay Rent on a Piano and Own It

WHY BUY a "cheap" piano because the terms are made easy for you?

THE monthly terms of purchase offered, particularly in "cheap" pianos, have been so low that many people are induced to buy one rather than rent a good piano at the usual charges of from $5 to $10 monthly.

We manufacture high-grade pianos only, and realizing the evil effect that the use of the "cheap" pianos must have on the musical training of the young, now offer a number of new-looking on such reduced payments that you are thus enabled to rent a high-grade piano at a smaller sum monthly than is required as payment in the buying of a "cheap" instrument.

WE WILL ALLOW ALL RENT PAID US WITHIN ONE YEAR TO APPLY AGAINST THE PURCHASE PRICE.

Especially the "Oneita" seconds, for in nearly every instance the defects are carefully mended. Main Floor.

Once in a while in the manufacture of underwear a stitch is dropped or a thread broken. Ordinarily the imperfect garments would go right in with the others, for the defects are scarcely noticeable.

But with the "Oneita" it's different. It is the policy to allow only absolutely perfect goods of this celebrated underwear to go out at regular prices, and once a year the "seconds" are shipped to us for our annual sale. Of course we get them at a big reduction, and the accounts for the above unusual prices.

HAY DEFENDED LOOMIS, THE PRESIDENT DECLARES

Secretary Said Bowen's Charges Were Against Himself.

SEVERE WORDS FOR BOWEN

Head of State Department Called Venezuelan Minister Treacherous and Disloyal, Mr. Roosevelt Asserts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—In correspondence between President Roosevelt and Assistant Secretary of State Loomis, made public here to-night, the President says that Secretary Hay disagreed with him on "even the mild censure" of Mr. Loomis in the Taft report on the investigation of the charges brought by Mr. Bowen, the former Minister to Venezuela, and adds that Secretary Hay very strongly condemned Mr. Bowen's course. The President quotes Mr. Hay as declaring that most of the charges were really against himself (Mr. Hay) and "not against Mr. Loomis at all," and that Mr. Bowen knew that. The statement made public is as follows:

"In order to make known the real facts concerning a widely current misapprehension respecting certain views of the late Secretary of State, Mr. Hay, the following correspondence was given to the press to-day:

"'Department of State, Washington, D. C.,

"'Sept. 25, 1905.

"'Dear Mr. President: For some time past there have appeared in various newspapers, including some of the journals published in New York, statements more or less direct, to the effect that grave differences of opinion existed between yourself and the late Secretary of State, Mr. Hay, concerning both myself and the action to be taken by you upon the findings and report of Secretary Taft in the matter of the charges made against me by Mr. Bowen, a former United States Minister to Venezuela. I will cite a case in point:

"'Not long ago a responsible New York paper, to which I am reliably informed upon the best of authority Mr. Bowen has been freely offering material for use, printed the following paragraphs:

"'Practically the last official act of Mr. Hay's life was to visit the White House for the purpose of urging the President not to dismiss Bowen and to dismiss Loomis, but learning that the President's mind was made up he went away with his message unspoken. Mr. Hay thoroughly disliked and distrusted him (myself,) and told the President so, but was unable to produce any effect on the President's mind.

"'Similar suggestions, more or less circumstantial in form, have so frequently appeared in the public prints that I am constrained to inquire whether, in so far as you are aware, they are supported by any basis of truth?

Hay's Opinion of Bowen.

"'I do not know what private conversation may have taken place between yourself and Mr. Hay concerning me and my course of conduct while connected with the public service, but I do know from Mr. Hay's own lips something of his opinion concerning Mr. Bowen, and I know full well both the unfailing courtesy with which Mr. Hay received my many suggestions concerning departmental matters and the personal cordiality which he always manifested toward me.

"'In December last I went to Mr. Hay's house and told him that I expected to resign from the department within the course of the next eight or nine months. He was good enough to say: "I am extremely sorry to hear this. I have always hoped you would remain in your present position as long as I remained in the Cabinet."

"'On other occasions, both before and since that time, Mr. Hay accorded me seemingly convincing proof of his confidence.

"'It may interest you to know that at Mr. Hay's request I spent at his home what proved to be practically the last hour of his life in Washington. Having upon that occasion indicated to me fully and lucidly, as was his wont what he wished my two colleagues and myself to do in the lines of departmental action and policy to be carried out during his absence, he referred to the then recent Bowen episode with much feeling. Among other things he said that he was disgusted with Bowen beyond expression; that vanity appeared to be a disease with him, and that he was both disloyal and untruthful, and had been treacherous not only to him, (Mr. Hay,) but to the country.

"'In view of this conversation to which I have adverted in the briefest possible manner, it is difficult for me to believe that there is any truth in either of the foregoing paragraphs which I have quoted, or any others which have been printed of similar import.

"'As I am very soon to retire from the public service, I trust you will not feel that I am unduly or improperly trespassing upon your time with this rather personal matter.

"'Respectfully and sincerely yours,

"'FRANCIS B. LOOMIS.

"'The President.'

"The President responded to this letter as follows:

"'The White House, Oyster Bay, N. Y.,

"'Sept. 27, 1905.

"'My Dear Mr Loomis: In answer to your letter of Sept. 25 I desire to state in the broadest and most emphatic manner that the statement you quote as appearing in certain newspapers, and especially in certain New York newspapers, as to the supposed differences of opinion between myself and the late Secretary of State, Mr. Hay, in respect to the action taken by me regarding Mr. Bowen in connection with the charges against you, is not merely without foundation in fact, but is the direct reverse of the truth.

"'You were appointed Assistant Secretary of State upon Mr. Hay's suggestion and request. He never spoke to me about you save with respect and cordial appreciation of the services you were rendering, and he expressed to me very great regret that you were going to leave the service and stated that he had hoped that you would stay in as long as he did and that he would find it difficult to get any one in your place whom he would like so much.

What Hay Told the President.

"'Mr. Hay expressed himself very freely on the ocasion of his last visit to Washington, including the last occasion when I ever saw him alive, as regards the action taken by me on the report of Mr. Taft concerning the charges made by Mr. Bowen against you.

"'Not only did he express himself about Mr. Bowen to me in the language you quote him as having used at about the same time to you in speaking of Mr. Bowen, but he also condemned Mr. Bowen in much stronger terms than those which you quote him as having used, and dwelt particularly upon the fact of what he called the treachery and disloyalty of Mr. Bowen to the Government and to him, (Mr. Hay.) repeating again and again that most of the charges Mr. Bowen made were really not charges against you at all, but against himself, (Mr. Hay,) and that Mr. Bowen, of course, knew this.

"'Moreover, Mr. Hay used about Mr. Bowen stronger language of condemnation than I have ever heard him use about any other man who had served under him. But this was not all. Mr. Hay then did what he very rarely, indeed, did. He expressed his strong dissent from the action I had taken in indorsing Mr. Taft's report as regards even the mild censure of you which it contained, stating that he disagreed with both Mr. Taft and myself on this point and felt that you were in no way whatever censurable and that the only action that had been called for was the dismissal of Mr. Bowen and the announcement of your entire vindication. Very truly yours,

"'THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

ERIVAN, Oct. 1.—Firing between Tartars and Armenians began here at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the boulevard in front of the Governor General's quarters. The troops were at once active and the Governor General went on foot through the town.

Thanks to the vigorous measures taken, order was immediately restored, and all was quiet again in one hour. The number of killed was small. The origin of the outbreak is unknown.

The general tension is great.

DISTRUST CZAR'S PROMISES.

Russian Reformers Are More Determined Than Ever.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 1.—The Moscow Congress is destined to wield an enormous influence on the forthcoming elections, thanks to its coalition with the Peasants' Union and its adoption of an advanced programme on land endowments.

The vast majority of reformers are more determined than ever to fight to the bitter end for freedom, not believing that the Government intends to fulfill its promises. The Moderate Party has lost strength.

KONDRATENKO'S BODY HOME.

Great Demonstration at Odessa—Czar to Attend the Burial.

ODESSA, Oct. 1.—The body of Major Gen. Kondratenko, commander of the Seventh East Siberian Rifles, who was killed last December at Port Arthur and who is honored throughout Russia as the foremost hero of the war, arrived here to-day on a steamer from Port Arthur.

The body was received with a great civic and military demonstration, in striking contrast with the indifference displayed on the arrival of Lieut. Gen. Stoessel. Deputations brought wreaths from many cities and from the Russian Army in Manchuria.

A special train to-morrow will convey the body in state to St. Petersburg, where in the presence of Emperor Nicholas it will be interred in the Alexander Nevsky Monastery, the resting place of the empire's most celebrated men, including Russia's militant saint and national hero, Alexander Nevsky; Suvaroff, the celebrated Field Marshal, and the composers Tschaikowsky and Rubinstein.

Five hundred Russians from Port Arthur arrived on the steamer, which also brought the body of Paul Lessar, who died while Minister at Peking.

England Investigating Latest Massacre with View to Action.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Noel Buxton, M. P., Chairman of the Balkan Committee, wrote to Foreign Minister Lansdowne with reference to the massacre by Turkish troops in the Macedonian village of Konopnitza, suggesting the enforcement of European control of Macedonia if necessary by the aid of a naval demonstration.

Lord Lansdowne has replied to the effect that the Government is already investigating the incident with a view to diplomatic representations to the Porte, and adds that he has ascertained that the Turkish authorities have sent a commission to the scene, the report of which is awaited.

BUDAPEST PARADES BARRED.

Prefect Forbids Them—Rival Parties Set Them for Another Day.

BUDAPEST, Oct. 1.—The Prefect has issued an order prohibiting the torchlight processions which the Coalition parties and the Socialists announced yesterday for Oct. 3.

Both parties have postponed their proposed demonstrations to Oct. 10, the anniversary of the execution of Count Louis Batthyanyi, who was the Premier of Hungary in 1848, and who was arrested and executed by the Austrians the following year. The Coalition parties intend to make a demonstration at the grave of Batthyanyi.

There has been no change in the political situation.

MANY HURT IN BRUENN RIOT.

Several Police Stations Partly Wrecked in German-Czech Clash.

BRUENN, Austria, Oct. 1.—A collision occurred here to-day between rival meetings of Germans and Czechs, resulting from the agitation by the former against the proposed establishment of a Czech university here.

Troops were compelled to intervene, but before order was restored 160 persons were more or less seriously injured, several police stations were partly wrecked, and hundreds of windows were broken.

DEAD-LOCK IN THE RIKSDAG.

Result of Elections for Lower House Means Its Continuance.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 1.—The elections for members of the Second Chamber of the Riksdag have just been concluded.

The dissolution of the union of Norway and Sweden exercised little influence during the campaign, the predominant questions being the extension of the franchise and the adoption of proportional representation.

The result shows a decided majority against the latter proposal, indicating that there will he another dead-lock in the Riksdag, as the First Chamber stands committed to the proportional system.

The members of the Left have a small majority in the new Chamber. The Socialists hold fourteen seats, having gained several.

Swedish Ships Collide; 20 Drowned.

FINDS JAPAN'S MUSIC BUILT FOR THE FUTURE

Old Standards Abandoned, Prof. Carl, the Organist, Says.

HE WENT WITH TAFT PARTY

Accounts of Their Welcome Not Exaggerated — Filipinos' Aptitude for Music—Impressions of Togo.

William C. Carl, the organist of the First Presbyterian Church, at Twelfth Street and Fifth Avenue, who went to the Far East several months ago to study the music of old and modern Japan, and who was a member of the Taft party from Tokio to Manila, got home yesterday afternoon. Last night at his hoe, 34 West Twelfth Street, Prof. Carl talked at length of his trip, his musical studies, and his experiences with and the wonderful welcome accorded to the party of Secretary Taft.

"Naturally," said Prof. Carl, "my interest was centred in the musical achievements of the Japanese, and from a musical standpoint my visit to that most interesting of countries was a great success. However, there were other pleasant experiences, including the reception to Secretary Taft and Miss Roosevelt, the latter being called Princess Alice by the Japanese, and the welcome home to the Prince and Princess Arisugawa by the Japanese fleet under Togo. This event I was fortunate enough to witness at the time, being a passenger on the same vessel as the Prince and Princess.

As for the welcome to Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Taft and the members of their party generally in Japan, the genuineness of the welcome, which was one of the most remarkable ever accorded foreigners by those people, could not be mistaken. At the garden party tendered by Minister Griscom in Tokio the Imperial Band played modern music in splendid style, and Miss Roosevelt was assisted in receiving by the daughters of the Mikado. At the dinner tendered by Count Katsura the music was by the Imperial Orchestra, while the reception at the Maple Club was purely a Japanese affair, the music being Japanese music rendered on the ancient Japanese instruments.

"Everywhere the welcome by the people was magnificent, and it was surprising to note how even the coolies knew much of America, and the party who were the objects of the 'banzais.' For instance, at the Shimbashi Station, in Tokio, when the Taft party departed, there was gathered a crowd of at least 30,000 people. In that crowd was a coolie who could speak a little English, who turned to me and said, 'Twenty-five years ago Gen. Grant he come, and Japanese give him great welcome; now Secretary Taft he coms, and he, too, warmly welcomed; Japanese like Americans.'

"It was this way everywhere in Japan, the people from the highest to the lowest doing everything in their power to show their appreciation of the visit. Miss Roosevelt was acclaimed everywhere, was overwhelmed with flowers, and the stories of the gifts to her have not been exaggerated.

"At Manila there was another wonderful demonstration. Secretar Taft, you know, is revered and loved by the natives more than any other man, and naturally to him they did all they could to show him how glad they were that he had come back. Here I will allude to a pleasant surprise that was mine on the Lunetta, the fashionable promenade of Manila, one afternoon. Everybody in Manila goes to the Lunetta in the evening. The day I was there I was surprised that the music was by a native band of sixty pieces, and as I drew near I was surprised to hear the strains of the 'March of the Grail Knights from 'Parsifal.' The selection was played in perfect time, and the conoductor was an American negro named Loving, who had picked up his performers along the docks and in the streets of Manila, trained them for eight hours a day until they had reached this perfection.

"At the Governor General's reception to Mr. Taft a native orchestra played the ballet music from a Filipino opera, which was a very creditable piece of work. I heard afterwards many of the native bands, and in each instance it was surprising how quickly they had learned the modern ways of doing things musically.

"It was on my way to Kobe from Hongkong that I saw Admiral Togo. On the steamship with me were the Prince and Princess Arisugawa, who were returning from the wedding of the German Crown Prince. As we neared Nagasaki a Japanese squadron of eight vessels, under Togo, steamed out to welcome the Prince and Princess. As soon as we anchored Togo came aboard. As he stepped on deck there was not a sound made. Togo walked past with a salute, was with the Prince for a few moments, left the ship, and went back on the Mikasa. His was the strongest face I saw among the Japanese. Exceedingly kind, yet indicating, as has been proved, a man of remarkable courage under any and all circumstances."

Prof. Carl, speaking of his musical researches, said:

"At Nikko, the City of Temples, I discovered in the Temple Iegasu a bamboo organ over 700 years old. It is very curious in construction, in that the pipes are made entirely of bamboo and in appearance resemble to a remarkable extent the modern organs of Europe and America. The organ is called a 'sho,' and has seven notes, which can be played in harmony or singly. Unlike the organs of Europe, this one is played as a wind instrument with a mouthpiece. The scale cosists of five notes, but no one would tell me what they were. In Tokio I asked an organ manufacturer, who learned his trade in Brooklyn and who turns out excellent modern instruments, what they were, ad he replied, 'I don't care nothing to know about the scale. We care nothing of the past. The future in all things is what we are looking after just now.'

"The native music varies in many ways. In the temples it is descriptive of the service; the music of the geishas is depicted in pantomime by the geishaa, while in the theatres it plays as important a part as the play itself. The actor recites one line, the next is in music, the actor interpreting its meaning in pantomime. In tragic situations it is very uncanny. The flute plays an important, characteristic phrase to the accompaniment of drums. The actor recites a stanza, which is rendered most dramatic by a sharp staccato tap of the drum like a pistol shot. This is done to arrest attention, by punctuating each stanza. The Japanese in their time have had a poet who to them is a Shakespeare, and his works are the most prominent of the native productions. The European play is coming into vogue, however, and this Summer there was rendered in Tokio 'Othello,' 'Hamlet,' and 'Monte Cristo,' a performance of the latter being one that I witnessed."

SAYS ARMY IS UNDERPAID.

Paymaster General, However, Shows Soldier Put Money By.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The report of Francis A. S. Dodge, Paymaster General of the Army, for the past fiscal year, points out that the enlisted men have now every chance to put away money by the deposit system, which guarantees absolute safety. During the year the amount deposited by the men was $1,531,020, making the total amount since the establishment of the system $26,294,326.

Gen. Dodge states that the present law against permanent appointments in the staff corps and departments will result in course of time in all the grades in the pay department being filled by officers detailed from the line. He recommends that the law be amended so as to limit details to vacancies occurring in the grade of Captain, for which Captains of the line should be selected as now, and that all grades above Captain should be made permanent appointments.

The amount expended on account of the pay of the army during the year was $31,361,132.

The last complete pay schedule for the army was passed by Congress thirty-five years ago, and the report contends that it is not sufficient for the demands of our times. The fact that the army is underpaid, the report adds, makes it impossible to recruit out of such classes as might be wished. That economy has been the watchword for the army for the last twenty years, Gen. Dodge says, is shown by the fact that, whereas the cost per capita for officers and men in 1875 was $902, it was during this year $987.

MARRIED TEACHER SUSPENDED

And Another Because She Is Going to Marry—Both Have Resigned.

Three young women school teachers are expected to appear before the Committee on Elementary Schools at Tuesday night's meeting of the Board of Education, when their suspension by District Supt. John L. N. Hunt will be considered. One of the teachers is suspended because she is married; another because she is going to get married.

District Supt. Hunt would not discuss the suspensions, saying that it was nobody's business but the committee's. Chairman Wilsey of the committee said that the suspension of the two teachers was not because they wanted to marry, but because they did not report their intentions to the board in time for substitutes to be put in their places.

"My sister told the Principal of her school, which is at First Avenue and Eighty-fifth Street, on the first day of the session that she would be absent several weeks while she was preparing for her marriage. She thought everything was all right, but in a day or so she received a note from Supt. Hunt saying that she was suspended, and that she would be brought before the board to answer charges of dereliction of duty.

"She employed an attorney to look into the matter. But she has resigned now, and the suspension doesn't make any difference. It will be all right; we know her resignation will be accepted."

It is officially stated, however, that Miss Strutz gave notice of her intention of resigning the first day of school.

Miss Cora Wyler of 207 West 118th Street, a teacher in School No. 70, married in the Summer, and, it is charged, gave no ontice of the fact so that her place might be filled. She has resigned since being notified of suspension.

Miss Rachel Phillips of 62 East Ninety-third Street, a teacher in School No. 190, was suspended by Supt. Hunt, as a matter of discipline. Her suspension is for a slight infraction of the rules, which has nothing to do with matrimony. Friends of the three Harlem teachers are much incensed at District Supt. Hunt, whom they characterize as over-punctilious. It is feared that the suspension of the teachers may prevent them from getting work at any time within the three-year limit ordinarily allowed to ex-teachers, and many of the friends will attend the board meeting on Tuesday.

REVOLUTIONARY RELIC SHOW.

Held in a Revolutionary Cottage at Quaker Ridge.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Oct. 1.—At Quaker Ridge, which is central between Greenwich and White Plains, at the Revolutionary cottage owned by Dr. F. E. Hyde of New York, the women of the North Greenwich Church, among whom are the Phelps Stokeses and other well-known New Yorkers, yesterday held an exhibition of Revolutionary relics. Over a thousand articles, each with a history, were exhibited and will be shown again next Saturday. All were collected in the district about Quaker Ridge, which is particularly rich in historical associations.

The cottage itself was erected in 1667, and, though it has been somewhat modernized, the original beams remain and the portholes through which the Tories were watched are intact. Among the exhibits is a jacket worn by Deacon Obediah Mead when he was killed by Tories on his way from the house to the barn. It is riddled with bullet holes and stained with blood.

A large white platter has been handed down from Miss Adrian Day, keeper of a tavern on Murray Street, New York, who served roast pig on it on Evacuation Day to Gens. Washington and Lafayette. Miss Day raised the American flag just previous to the evacuation, and defended it with a broomstick so vigorously that Provost Marshal William Cunningham, who attempted to take it down, beat a china, furniture, flint firearms, Quaker wedding gowns, men's satin trousers, &c. There is also a bed on which Lafayette once slept, tick and clothes all being handspun, and the canopy being the work of the three wives of one Quaker Ridge settler. Begun by wife No. 1 in Italy, it was continued by the second wife in London, and the third wife finished it in America.

PIERCE STILL IN CHARGE.

Mrs. Jordan, Who Succeeds Him, to Wait Until Oct. 15.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, Oct. 1.—Although the Westchester Grand Jury recently made a presentment recommending that the services of Supt. James W. Pierce of the Westchester Temporary Home at White Plains be dispensed with, after investigating two alleged charges of cruelty made by boys, and though the Board of Directors announced that Mr. Pierce would be deposed on Oct. 1, he was still in charge of the home to-day.

Mrs. Robert Jordan, who it was announced, will be the new Superintendent of the home, was also in the building, but she said that she haa not yet assumed control of the institution, and she declined to say when she would.

Supt. Pierce held a religious service for the young inmates. Asked if he intended to leave the home. he said: "I don't care to say anything to-day."

From another source it was learned that Supt. Pierce intends to quit about Oct. 15.

Mrs. Jordan, who is to be the new Superintendent, is of middle age and gray haired. It is said that when she assumes control of the home she will adopt a new mode of discipline and that flogging will be abolished.

"I am simply a figure behind the scenes just now," she said. "Mr. Pierce is still Superintendent, and I don't know when he intends to leave."

Mrs. Jordan was for more than a year Assistant Superintendent of the Bedford Reformatory for Women. She was able, it is said, to handle all the hardened women that go there without resorting to severe discipline.

Village Artillery Ready for That Dog.

RIVER EDGE, N. J., Oct. 1.—Since the Grand Jury refused to take any action on the complaints against Charles A. Billings's St. Bernard dog, Mayor Brohel has issued seven permits to citizens to carry revolvers. The charge is made that the dog is vicious and a menace to the village. Folks are predicting trouble for the animal if it appears on the streets again.

Representative O. W. Underwood Ill.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 1.—Representative Oscar W. Underwood, of this Congressional District, was taken suddenly ill at his home in this city yesterday and his condition alarms his friends. The attending physicians say his ailment is a general nervous breakdown, superinduced by overwork. He is resting easily to-night.

BIG LOSS IN REVEN E ON TOBACCO FROM UBA

Mysteries of the Trade Tha Puz- zle Washington Offici s.

SOME INCENTIVES TO RAUD

How 400,000,000 "Clear Havan " Are Made Out of 20,000,000 Pou s of Cuban Tobacco Unexplai d.

Special to The New York Tim

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The assifi- cation of tobacco at the Ports ? New York and Tampa, which has be made the subject of investigation by t Treas- ury Department, is a question sc volved and so little understood by the eneral public that it may be interesti to re- view the conditions which have rought the department tacitly to admit t there is a loss of revenue of almost $ 0,000 a year in the collection of duty or rapper tobacco imported from Cuba.

There are 400,000,000 cigars k wn as "clear Havana" cigars—that is, Cuban filler and Cuban wrapper—man ctured in this country each year, and th umber is steadily increasing. Accordin to the testimony of the manufacturers these cigars before the Ways and Me s Com- mittee when the Dingley bill w being framed, it takes about four p nds of Cuban tobacco to wrap 1,00 cigars, whereas, Sumatra tobacco, beir lighter in weight and more elegant in exture, will wrap about two pounds to thou- sand. According to this estima there- fore, to wrap 400,000,000 cigars w Cuban wrappers would require 1,600,0 pounds of wrapper tobacco.

Yet in the fiscal year ended une 30, 1904, the amount of Cuban wr per Im- ported was, according to the orn In- voices, only 42,764 pounds! Her s a dis- crepancy of more than 1,500,0 pounds, on which the duty is $1.20 mo than on plain filler leaf, so that had the ll wrap- per duty been collected it w d have amounted to nearly $2,000,000 ditional revenue. The profit on "clear avana" cigars is not very great at best nd it is easily plain that if one manufa rer can get in his wrappers as filler l he has $6 per thousand, the best of his mpetitor who pays the wrapper duty.

No one denies, the Treasury D artment and the tobacco trade least o ll, that here is one of the greatest in tives to fraud to be found under the er e tariff, and the opportunities as demor rated by the fact that the Government fects the wrapper duty only on about or fifteenth of the amount used are almos mitless

Judging tobacco is like tas tea; it can be done only be experts. nd their opinion often honestly varies. f a bale contains 14 per cent. wrapper d 86 per cent. filler, duty is paid on a rcentage basis, but if the experts hold t it con- tains 16 per cent. wrapper and per cent. filler, the entire bale must p wrapper duty, a difference of more th $100 per bale. The margin between 14 d 16 per cent. is small, and the differe in duty is large, and the rate of du depends entirely on the classification, dich is a matter of opinion. The oppo inity for fraud and the resultant prof re alike great.

This is not the first time t Tampa has been under suspicion. The eturns at tampa indicate the manufactu there of approximately 200,000,000 cig per an- num, presumably all of the lear Ha- vana" type. In 1897, when Dingley act was passed, the output wa 0,408,000; in the calendar year of 1904 had in- creased to 196,961,000, while the first six months of this year it r hed 104,- 450,000 cigars, and the total ou t for the current year is estimated at 2 000,000.

In the fiscal year of 1904, t last year for which figures are as yet a lable, the total importation of Cuban l was 19,- 063,500 pounds, of which Tam although manufacturing almost one-h of the "clear Havana" cigars ma in this country, imported but 4,336,45 ounds of filler, or less than one-fourth the total importation, and imported ly 7,213 pounds of wrapper leaf, or ly about one-sixth of the total. 15,000,000

In other words, it took nea Havana of filler to make 200,000,000 c factories, cigars in New York and oth nake ap- and only 4,336,000 pounds t Tampa. proximately the same number rers else- Simultaneously, the manufa where paid duty on 37,000 pou of wrap- per tobacco, while Tampa per with 4,212 pounds, although prod ng about the same number of cigars.

As far as the consumer is c erned, he will be interested in knowing h It is pos- sible to wrap 400,000,000 cigar lth 42,000 pounds of wrapper at the r of four pounds to the thousand, and it is used to wrap these cigars, if not c an wrap- pers; also, if it takes ten or tv e pounds of tobacco to make 1,000 cig how do they produce 400,000,000 "cle Havana" cigars out of 20,000,000 poun of Cuban tobacco?

97 Regal Stores Now

All selling just one kind of shoes!

It's the new Regal customers that make new stores necessary all the while but it's the regular Regal customers that keep them busy.

Mighty hard to interest a Regal wearer in any other shoe. Because the average citizen knows pretty well when he's getting his money's worth. And every man who has bought one pair of Regal shoes knows he is wearing shoes as good in every way as anybody's money will buy.

$6 a pair won't buy better shoes, for the Regal is just the best shoe that can be built by good old-fashioned bench workmanship from the finest leathers ever tanned,—a $6 shoe, but sold direct, at the wholesale price, from "tannery to consumer."

$3.50 (Special Custom Bench-Made, $4.) Some of the new Regals have been made up to meet a demand from many of our old and new customers for a shoe built in a little more expensive way than the regular Regal line—an evidence of the same desire for fine-finished apparel that creates the demand for full silk-lined overcoats. The advantages of the special $4 models over the $3.50 Regal are in their extra custom features. All of the leathers and other materials in them are the BEST of the BEST; they have a little more hand-work; a little more silk stitching; round-cornered top; calfskin lining inside the backs; wide, gold-lettered leather top facing; plain black straps; special custom-finish on the sole, etc. They are bench-made shoes that represent the finest handicraft of the most skilled New England shoemakers—and few genuine custom-made $12 shoes equal their handsome appearance. Their extra features are more than worth the small additional price.

SAXON (Special Custom Bench-made, $4.) An out-and-out English shoe, copied directly from a made-to-order model which has been made popular in London. Made of genuine Imported Cordovan leather—full calf-lined.

Send for Style-Book. Mail Orders Promptly Filled.

Sold direct from Tannery to consumer. The largest retail shoe business in the world. 97 stores in principal cities from London to San Francisco.

HOUSEKEEPING NOBLE.

Dr. Peters Says Society Is Doing Wrong in Requiring Little of It.

Dr. Madison C. Peters of the Baptist Church of the Epiphany, Madison Avenue and Sixty-fourth Street, preached last evening on "Marriage and the Home." Speaking to young men, he said:

"Let there be no mercenary motive in the choice of your wife. Such heartless schemes have been the curse of many a family. If you marry for beauty, let it be that beauty which must be known to be appreciated—which gleams from a thoughtful mind, springs from a loving heart, and from the owner of a soul. Good nature is the choicest gift that woman can bring to the home. The high art of successful housekeeping, homemaking, is the secret of domestic happiness. It is a sad day for society that it has grown so lenient, that it requires little or nothing in a profession where the highest interests of mankind are at stake."

Miss Roosevelt Leaves Shimonoseki.

TOKIO, Oct. 1.—Miss Alice Roosevelt arrived at Shimonoseki this morning and went aboard the steamer Minnesota without going ashore. The Minnesota left for Yokohama at 11 o'clock. Miss Roosevelt was welcomed by numeroua steam launches decorated with Japanese and American flags, and the harbor presented a lively appearance until after the Minnesota cleared.

POLITICS CHESS NOW.

Nominations Not Everything—Verbal Encouragement for Jerome.

One of the Tammany district leaders visited the headquarters of District Attorney Jerome in the Gilsey House yesterday to pay his respects and express his good wishes.

"Even if you don't get a nomination from Tammany Hall or the Republicans, Judge," he said, "don't let that discourage you. There was a time in politics when the man who didn't have a party nomination didn't have a chance to get in the money. But politics was different in them days. We knew just what we could do then; there wasn't no moral principles mixed up in the game.

"But you can't discount an election now as you used to could. Politics was checkers in them days, but now it's chess."

Jusserand Dines at White House.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt to-night had as guests at dinner Ambassador and Mme. Jusserand.

The President spent a very quiet Sunday, remaining at the White House during the day, except when he attended service at Grace Reformed Church in the morning. The pastor, the Rev. John M. Schick, delivered the sermon. The church was crowded. The President walked to and from the church unattended.

FIGHT ARMED ITALIANS IN A DARK TENEMENT

Police Rush in to Quell a Shooting and Are Attacked.

AT LEAST SIX MEN WOUNDED

Three Italians were shot in a fight at 44 Oliver Street last night at the close of a party that had been going on merrily since early in the evening. Immediately following the shooting there was a battle between policemen from the Oak Street Station and Italians.

One policeman was stabbed twice in the shoulder, while two detectives were knocked down and pounded before they had a chance to draw their revolvers. Several policemen finally forced their way into the room where the shooting had taken place and succeeded in getting the man who is alleged to have fired into the crowd of merrymakers. The injured are:

NICOLO PAVANO, shot in neck and forehead.
MAPTO PAVANO, shot in forehead and left side of neck.
GIUSEPPE BATTALTO, shot in neck and head.
DIOSI ZAPPETTA, cut about head and face.
GIUSEPPE CASSODINO, scalp wounds and cut on face and head.

Nicolo Pavano was celebrating his birthday, and with him were his brother Mapto and his uncle, Battalto, who helped him entertain the guests. Diosi Zappeta and Giuseppe Cassodino were regarded as the guests of honor, because they had only recently arrived from Italy.

Many cans of beer were carried into the house during the evening, and just when the celebration was at its height an argument arose as to who would go for the next can of beer. A fight started at once. Some one drew a razor and slashed Zappeta across the right cheek, and in a jiffy he had drawn a long barreled revolver and fired rapidly, wounding the Pavano brothers and their uncle, Battalto.

Policeman Reilly rushed into the tenement and to the third floor, where the row was in progress, while others in the house became panistricken and the hallways became crowded with excited Italians. When Reilly got into the room a concentrated rush was made from all sides. Men stumbled over the prostrate forms of the wounded Italians and tried to get at Reilly. The policeman beat them back with his club as best he could. One of the Italians drew a knife and slashed at Reilly. The first lunge he made was futile, the blade of the stiletto ripping Reilly's coat. The second and third blows, however, reached his shoulder.

Detectives Roy and Maher, who ran in, were set upon by three Italians, the lights were put out, and a pitched battle ensued in the darkness. The detectives managed to draw their revolvers, and the Italians stopped fighting.

Hurry calls were sent for surgeons to the Hudson Street Hospital, and Dr. Cherry responded. The police reserves of the Oak Street Station had to beat the Italians back with their night sticks in order to make a way for the surgeon to get in. The Italians started another fight in the hallways. With the additional policemen, however, the odds were against the Italians, and they were driven out of the building, while the injured men were examined and removed to the hospital.

It was thought that Nicolo Pavano was in a dying condition, but early this morning the surgeons said he had a fighting chance. All the others will recover. Policeman Reilly had his injuries dressed at the hospital and was taken home. Zappeta was locked up in the Oak Street Station for felonious assault.

CHURCH WEDDING STOPPED.

Bridegroom Is Charged with Having a Wife and Then Arrested.

Just as one of the priests in the Polish Roman Catholic Church in Seventh Street, between First Avenue and Avenue A, was to pronounce the words of union in a marriage ceremony yesterday morning, two men in the congregation arose, and one of them called out:

"That man has a wife and three children in Poland. According to the laws of the church, we command you to stop!"

The bride screamed and fell fainting. The bridegroom denied that he was married, but was later arrested on a serious charge under promise of matrimony. He said he was Joseph Witeh, a cement worker, of 157 Attorney Street. The disappointed young woman was Miss Catharine Sarrana, who was a servant at 92 Ridge Street until a few days ago, when she gave up her place, and using her savings, furnished a little two-room flat at the Attorney Street address. She had ordered a lot of refreshments and had invited a party of friends to help her celebrate.

The priest told Witeh that he must bring witnesses to disprove the charge made against him, and that if he did so he would go on with the ceremony at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. At that time the young woman returned to the church. She insisted that Witeh would appear and confound his enemies. But after a wait of two hours she was escorted to her home. Later in the day some of her friends found Witeh in the street.

"I had a wife in Poland, but she is dead," he said. "The proof? How can I prove it? I have not the witnesses."

While he was giving this explanation one of Miss Sarrano's friends called in a policeman from the Union Market Station.

"I have lost my man. I have lost my job," Catharine sobbed. "Now, I have spent all my money for this little home. Oh, I wish I could die!"

TEXAS NEGRO HUNTED DOWN.

Man Suspected of Killing Woman and Children May Be Burned.

Special to The New York Times.

EDNA, Texas, Oct. 1.—A mob and bloodhounds are closely on the trail of "Monk" Gibson, suspected of the murder of Mrs. Condit and her three children, and news of his capture may be looked for at any moment.

The negro is known to be on the Navidad bottom, between crossings less than two miles apart. The river bottom at this point is from a half to one mile wide, and the limits are well surrounded.

Two packs of bloodhounds, one from Wharton and the other from Richmond, were taken off at Ganado and at the stock pens, two miles above Edna.

The officers, it is believed, will never be allowed to take possession of the negro. He will undoubtedly be brought to Edna as soon as caught. He may be held for a very brief period in order to procure evidence from him, but the general opinion here is that he will meet death at the stake before daylight Monday morning.

BARON JAILED IN JERSEY.

Also A Count—Both Accused of Beating Atlantic City Hotels.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 1.—Two hotels here took simultaneous action last night against two men whom they accused of trying to violate the New Jersey law against hotel beats. Those proceeded against are "Baron" R. P. de Caverly, who gives his address as New York, and "Count" Hugo Baith, who says he is of the Bavarian nobility, but is also registered from New York.

De Caverly and his wife have been at the St. Charles since early in July. The woman started for New York after her husband's arrest, promising to send him money to settle his bill. They declared that delayed remittances from abroad caused their trouble.

The Count's name has graced the register of the Hotel Rudolph for eight weeks. Passports found indicate that he also used the name Isidor Bouchler. He asked the management to wait until he received money from home, and cabled to somebody, but no reply was received.

SO-CALLED BEAUTY CONTEST.

"Physical Culture Show" Begins in Madison Square Garden.

There was a preliminary examination of men and women last night in the concert room of Madison Square Garden for a coming physical culture contest. Representatives of both sexes were there in fleshlings or union underwear to exhibit their proportions before a committee of "artists, sculptors, physicians, and athletes."

The men wore sandals of the stage sort, fleshlings up to the waist, and above that nothing at all. Rarely has there been a sight of so much superfluous muscle. It bulged out as if it would rend asunder the enfolding skin. That any one of them could have done a hard day's work in a hayfield was doubtful. To the practiced eye of a prizefighter, recently defeated after many victories in a battle in San Francisco, the twenty offered such a temptation for his fists in a grand rally of revenge against fate that he was restrained with difficulty.

Previous to the contest there was another part of the elimination necessary for a fair representation of the physical beauty of New Yorkers. All the bow-legged men and hollow-chested women who sought the chance to exhibit themselves were shown to a lower door, leading toward the benches in Madison Square. One man with legs that were bent under the weight of his thick chest and broad shoulders waited outside of the garden for revenge, but was persuaded by the temptation of free liquor to remove himself.

At the close of the examination and acceptance of a lot of men who knew how to fold their arms across their chests so that the biceps and pectoral muscles stood out in bold relief, the women were brought in. They did not seem abashed as they stood in a row to be examined. Some of them tied their sashes a little tighter; others arranged their hair. There was a Swedish woman, a well-known artists' model; a black-eyed sylph with musoles of steel, a fighting eye, and a brogue; a chunk of a woman with muscles like those of a man, and many others; also an actress, fully dressed, who on the entrance of the female contestants arose in her wrath to tell the press agent of the exhibition that the invitation to her to compete was an outrage.

"I am a lady even if I do wear fleshlings in a comic opera," she cried. "I am physically the superior of the whole bunch, and so is every girl in our show. I would not have hesitated to appear in opera costume, but not in this way. For shame!"

Five of the women were selected to represent New York in the coming show. The Venus from Sweden said she had acquired her physical proportions by churning in a dairy. Good, hard work with the broom was the receipt given by the supple person with steel muscles. Another exhibit ascribed her proportions to roast beef, and the chunk of an athlete said she was a vegetarian.

WARDEN HURT IN RUNAWAY.

Henry Stone of Essex County Prison Meets with a Serious Accident.

Special to The New York Times.

CALDWELL, N. J., Oct. 1.—Warden Henry Stone of the Essex County Penitentiary and his wife had a narrow escape from serious injury late yesterday afternoon while driving through Verona.

They had driven from the penitentiary in Caldwell to Montclair early in the afternoon. On the return trip they proceeded along Bloomfield Avenue, and had just gone over the top of the mountain west of Montclair when their horse took fright at a steam stone crusher. Making a sudden forward spring, the animal broke the harness, and an instant later was beyond the control of Mr. Stone. After running a short distance at a furious pace the animal made a short turn and capsized the carriage, throwing both the occupants out on the roadway. Mr. Stone was unconscious.

Dr. H. B. Whitehorn of Verona was called and had the Warden taken to his apartments in the administrative building of the penitentiary. Mr. Stone was put under the influence of an anaesthetic while the physicians dressed his wounds. These consisted of a number of small cuts and bruises about the head, a long, deep gash over the left eye, and several cuts and bruises on the legs and about the lower part of the body. Beyond a few bruises and a severe shaking up Mrs. Stone escaped injury.

BATTLE IN POLICE STATION.

Three Men Arrested for Fast Driving Use Their Fists with Effect.

Bicycle Policeman Kerrigan saw a buggy going at top speed down Broadway last night and called to the driver, Daniel O'Brien, to pull up. O'Brien lashed his horse and urged him on to a still livelier gait. Kerrigan overtook the buggy in front of the Hotel Astor. He arrested the three occupants and ordered O'Brien to drive to the station house.

While standing before the Sergeant one of the trio, William J. Willett, 23 years old, of 453 West Fifty-third Street, struck Kerrigan a blow in the face. Kerrigan went to the floor and the three prisoners began pummeling him when the reserves in the watchroom rushed out. In a few seconds there was a free-for-all fight. The prisoners fought desperately, landing right and left, and drawing blood from some policeman with nearly every blow.

But Roundsman Brady, Policemen O'Grady and Moran, and Doorman Sullivan, and Kerrigan in the end proved too much for the battling trio. In the melée they fought all over the drillroom, and when the colors were struck the hospital corps drew up and carried the injured to the cellroom.

O'Brien was charged with reckless driving, while his companions will answer today to charges of intoxication and assault.

NEW MOVE TO END LOCK-OUT.

Strike to be Called on the Independent Builders.

The unions which are still locked out by the Building Trades Employers' Association have started a new campaign either to get recognition or smash the arbitration agreement. Their plan is to order strikes against unions the members of which are employed under the agreement by independent contractors. These men are employed principally in the Bronx, where the demand for plasterers and plumbers exceeds the supply.

The Brotherhood of Painters, which is working under the arbitration agreement, made a complaint yesterday to the Central Federated Union that the locked-out unions of plasterers and plumbers are driving them from one contract to another by threatening strikes unless they are discharged.

The question of the arbitration agreement came up at yesterday's meeting when Delegate See of the Amalgamated Carpenters' Society asked if the central body wanted to be a party to a general disruption in the building trades.

A report had been made by a committee appointed to investigate a complaint of the Brotherhood of Carpenters that the Amalgamated Wood Workers had made an agreement with the Manufacturing Wood Workers' Association on a fifty-hour-a-week basis. The Brotherhood of Carpenters work under a forty-hour basis. The report of the committee directed the woodworkers to repudiate its contract with the firm. This brought Delegate See to his feet.

"If this body wants to have labor disrupted again and to have another lockout, it can go ahead," he said. "I, for one, will vote to the last in favor of the observance of contracts."

Despite the protest, the committee report was indorsed.

MOUNT VERNON PIONEER DEAD

Uncle Joe Tomlinson, Who Was 83 Years Old, Settled There in 1851.

MOUNT VERNON, Oct. 1.—Joseph Tomlinson, better known as "Uncle Joe," one of the oldest residents of Mount Vernon, died to-day at his home, 13 South Sixth Avenue. He was eighty-three years old. Mr. Tomlinson was one of the charter members of the Homestead Association that settled Mount Vernon in 1851. For twenty years he had been sexton of the First Methodist Church. He leaves a widow.

SOLDIER HAD A DRINK, THEN WENT TO MURDER

I've Sworn to Kill McIntyre, Said Artilleryman, and He Did.

STABBED HIM WITH BAYONET

Then Snyder Stood on the Barracks Stairs at Fort Totten, Shaking His Fist.

"Gimme a drink of whisky, and be quick about it, for I'm in a hurry. I've got a murder on my hands. I've sworn to kill 'Pete' McIntyre before midnight."

The bartender in Sullivan's saloon at the edge of the United States Army reservation at Fort Totten, near Willets Point, L. I., looked with amusement that changed to wonder at the customer who made this request late Saturday afternoon. Half a dozen patrons in the dingy barroom paused with their glasses in midair, put them down again, and started in amazement at the man who had spoken, for he seemed to be sober. The buzz of conversation ceased.

The man who wanted a drink so quickly wore the uniform of an artilleryman. He met the bartender's gaze firmly as he put his coin down on the bar. When the drink was served he gulped it down and left the saloon.

"That man had something on his mind," said one of the customers after the soldier had left. Murphy, the bartender, only shook his head. "The bark of some dogs is worse than their bite," said he.

Not until long after Sullivan's saloon had suspended business for the day did it become known there that Private William Snyder, a private of the One Hundred and First Company of the Coast Artillery had stabbed and killed Peter McIntyre, another private in the same company.

Just what led to the murder is not clear. Snyder is thought to have harbored a grudge of long standing against McIntyre. Both went outside the reservation on Saturday afternoon. They were seen walking together along one of the roads leading from the fort. It is supposed that they met by accident, renewed their old quarrel, and then parted, and that subsequently Snyder determined to kill his comrade.

McIntyre returned to the fort early in the evening, but Snyder remained behind and id not appear at the post until after 6 o'clock. He passed the sentries at the gate in silence, and does not appear to have spoken of his intention to anybody inside the post.

The murder was committed a little after 7 o'clock on Saturday evening. McIntyre was walking up stairs to his dormitory in the barracks of the company. Snyder was seen to start up directly behind him. What took place between the two on the stairs is not known, but a moment after both had started a scream was heard.

Several members of the company who had been loitering on the ground floor end in the dormitories rushed to the stairway. There they found McIntyre, who had fallen upon the steps. A bayonet had been plunged into his shoulder from behind. The weapon had penetrated his lung and severed his jugular vein. He was rapidly bleeding to death. Snyder stood calmly beside the body of his dying comrade shaking his clinched fist in his face.

He submitted to arrest without a struggle, while McIntyre was rushed to the post hospital, where he died within an hour.

McIntyre bore an excellent reputation. He was serving out his second enlistment, although he was only twenty-five years old. His parents live at Newburg. They have been notified of their son's death.

Snyder was at once ordered under arrest by Col. Murray, Commander of the post. After being disarmed, he was taken to the guardhouse, where two soldiers with loaded rifles are keeping watch on him.

A MAFIA AMONG POLES.

Man mortally Shot Knew Beforehand He Was Doomed.

BUFFALO, Oct. 1.—Louis Kubynski, a Pole employed at the Lackawanna Steel Company's plant at West Seneca, was shot and mortally wounded to-day. The police are looking for another Pole known to his fellow-workmen as Peter Kelly.

The facts thus far brought to light indicate that the shooting was the work of some secret society. Yesterday, it is learned, a relative warned Kubynski that he would be shot to-day and advised him to leave town. "It would do no good," Kubynski is said to have replied. "They will get me wherever I go."

To-day a Pole, whose identity has not been clearly established, called at Kubynski's home. When Kubynski came to the door the stranger drew a revolver and shot him through the abdomen. Kubynski refuses to give any information to the police.

Czolgosz, the assassin of President McKinley, lived for a time in the Polish settlement where to-day's shooting occurred.

Dr. G. Parsons Nichols to Retire.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Rev. Dr. G. Parsons Nichols this morning resigned the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, which he has held since he came to Binghamton from Milwaukee twenty-four years ago. Poor health, resulting from a slight stroke of paralysis a year ago, led him to resign. He will probably be made pastor emeritus of the church.

BATTLE IN THE DARK WITH AN ARMED BURGLAR

BUT HE TAKES THE PLUNGE

Police Get Coal Dealer's Assailant After a Chase—He Had Two Pistols and a Knife.

A burglar armed with two revolvers and a hunting knife gave Rudolph Reimer, Jr., a wholesale coal dealer of Brooklyn the fight of his life yesterday morning. If it hadn't been for Mr. Reimer's athletic training at college the burglar would have thrown him out of the window, as he threatened to do. As it was, the burglar had to leap from the window himself to escape. He was captured later by the police after an exciting chase.

The Reimer house is at 124 Williams Avenue and stands back some distance from the street. In the rear is a garden and an old-fashioned grape arbor, which runs up to the second floor of the house. It was so warm Saturday night that Mr. Reimer did not close the window of his bedroom, on the second floor, but put up a wire screen instead.

Awakened by a noise about 3 o'clock, Mr. Reimer first thought it was the wind. But when it was repeated he sat up in bed and through the gloom saw the outline of a man.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

The burglar, for an answer put his hand to his hip pocket, but Mr. Reimer, divining his intention, jumped from the bed and pinioned the intruder's arms. The two men fought all over the room. The burglar was trying to shake Mr. Reimer off so that he could draw a pistol, and the coal dealer was calling for assistance at the top of his voice.

"Let me go, or I'll throw you out of the window," the burglar said, as he began to force Mr. Reimer toward the window.

The household by this time had been aroused, and the burglar knew that he would be captured in another minute if he did not loosen Mr. Reimer's hold. He struck him a blow in the face with some blunt weapon and then dived out of the window.

The grape arbor broke the burglar's fall and probably saved his life. Attired only in his pajamas, Mr. Reimer ran down to the street. The first man he saw was Policeman Hand, who had heard the cry for help. They ran into the garden, but the only sign of the burglar there was his hat, which he had left behind.

The two men then ran down to Liberty Avenue, where they saw the burglar running toward the Long Island Railroad yards. Policeman Hand, after calling to him to halt, began shooting. Policeman Haucke heard the shots and, turning around, saw a man running toward him. He stepped back into the shadow of a doorway, and as the burglar passed he knocked him down with his club.

Before he had a chance to draw a weapon the two policemen were upon him. The burglar was in his stocking feet, but his shoes were found in his pockets. At the Liberty Avenue Station he admitted his guilt, and was identified by Mr. Reimer. He was Jacque Burckhardt, 20 years old, of 504 Bradford Street. In his pockets were found two revolvers, a hunting knife, and a set of burglar's tools. He was held for trial in the Gates Avenue Court.

MORE LAND FRAUD CHARGES.

Grand Jury Indicts Four Men in Oregon for Conspiracy.

PORTLAND, Ore., Oct. 1.—The Federal Grand Jury returned yesterday an indictment against Charles A. Graves, Erwin N. Wakefield, Ora L. Parker, and Robert D. Foster, charging them with conspiracy to defraud the Government of its public land.

Graves is the surveyor of Crook County; Wakefield is the former partner of Congressman J. N. Williamson and Van Gessner, and Parker and Foster are two entry men mentioned in the Williamson indictment.

The four men are accused of having conspired on Oct. 2, 1902, with Williamson and Gessner to defraud the Government. It is alleged in the indictment that they each filed on claims on July 10 of this year, and also induced Serah F. Parker, Laura A. Foster, and Monia Graves to file on the same date. It is further alleged that they swore falsely in regard to the character of the land and their intentions, the value, the timber, and the intended disposition of the claims.

Dead Man on the Cowcatcher.

William Luhrs of Far Rockaway was struct by a Long Island Railroad train at the Black Stump Crossing in Jamaica yesterday morning and killed. Neither the engineer nor anyone else on the train knew of the accident until the train reached Hicksville, when the body was found on the cowcatcher. The mans hat was found at the crossing in Jamaica.

Women's Correct Dress. Eminently a Picture Season.

Never Before Has There Been Such A Variety of Beautiful Styles.

Of course, the Empire Period has influenced styles that predominate. One must hark back to that time for the strikingly picturesque. Because of the radiant beauty and variety of styles obtainable, the season is a real delight to the woman who seeks that which is most attractive.

Our Stocks Are So Ample That Style Has No Boundary Line.

There is infinite variety, whether the best be for a stunning costume or a fashioned tailored suit. The woman who goes to the Siegel Cooper Store to select her dress may do so with the assurance that, while obtaining something equally stylish, she is going to wear something entirely different from what her neighbor has purchased.

As we have said, the Empire styles but second in favor are the new Princess Dresses, carrying with them a dignity and beauty all their own. And then come in pleasing order Fashion's jaunty Eton Suit, the stylish Blouse Suits, the comfortable and always desired Coat Suits in assortments never before equalled in New York, and comprising Box Suit Coats, Short and Three-quarter Length and Tight-fitting Coats in every length from 26 to 54 inches long, styles handsome and immensely popular colors as grey, red, green and the purples.

Evidence of the comprehensive character of the stocks is indicated by these special offerings for to-day:

SIGNAL BOXES QUICKLY LAND A MURDERER

Negro Locked Up in 45 Minutes After a Double Killing.

THE NEW SYSTEM DID IT

Alarm Sent to 125th Street Station Puts Thirty-five Men on Fugitive's Trail in Fifteen Minutes.

The efficiency and value of the newly installed police signal box system was demonstrated yesterday when fifteen minutes after a negro had committed a double murder, thirty-five patrolmen began a hunt for the murderer and captured him within three quarters of an hour.

James Clayton, the murderer, was well known to the police as a bad character as were his victims, Lucy, his wife, and James Hannon, a mulatto, whom Clayton is said to have attempted to shoot last week.

Returning home unexpectedly at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning, Clayton was told by a friend that Hannon was in his flat. Getting a ladder, Clayton put it against the rear wall of the tenement, and entering his own rooms through an open window found his wife and Hannon there.

Without a word of warning Clayton drew a revolver and as Hannon made a leap at him he shot the man. Hannon sank to the floor dead. Clayton fired another shot at the body, then turning the weapon upon his wife he fired two shots at her, both of which took effect. She died instantly.

The shots aroused everybody in the house, and were heard by Policeman Stockhaus, who entered the apartments just in time to see Clayton disappear over a fence into 133d Street. Stockhaus called up the West 125th Street Police Station and asked for assistance. As it happened, the report was received just at the time the patrolmen were reporting from their various posts. Each got an accurate description of Clayton, and in fifteen minutes there were thirty-five policemen searching for him.

Detective Lenahan and five of the reserve force went to the scene of the shooting, and Rose Thomas and Joseph Clayton were arrested as witnesses. Every house on the block was searched from cellar to roof, and it was learned that Clayton had crossed Seventh Avenue and entered the flats on the north side of 135th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues.

Believing that the murderer would try to reach the elevated station at 125th Street, Lenahan and Stockhaus hid in a doorway. They had only been there a few minutes when Clayton ran from the cellar of a flat near by and made for the station. They ran out and grappled with him as he was about to mount the steps leading to the station. Beating them off the negro drew his revolver.

Before he could shoot Stockhaus hit him with a night stick and knocked him down. Clayton clung to the revolver, however, and it was not until an expressman named Murphy came to the assistance of the policemen that the weapon was wrenched from the negro's hand. Clayton fought all the way to the station-house and arrived there at 7:15, just three-quarters of an hour after he had fired the shots.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

Further General Improvement—Shipbuilders Exceptionally Busy.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"The conditions of trade have still further improved, and in the manufacturing districts business shows a considerable increase. In many cases it is impossible for manufacturers to guarantee delivery at a near date owing to the pressure of work on hand.

"The grain markets have shown a firm tone, and closed generally higher. Seeds advanced in sympathy with the improvement in seed oils.

"Cotton has been to a large extent under the influence of advices from America and nervousness regarding the outcome of the October deals there. The trade demand has been small. In yarns there has been more doing, but the cloth market has continued quiet.

"The initial advances which wool obtained in the London sales have been firmly upheld, and consumers are now more anxious to secure supplies. Business in woolen goods continues to show marked improvement.

"Business in all the metal branches shows a further marked improvement. The prices of iron and steel have been raised in most centres.

The Coward Shoe

Coward Arch-Supporting Shoe.

This special "Coward" is designed to give the needed support at the precise point where so many feet are weak—the arch.

Built into the shank, and entirely concealed (but for the three rivets appearing on the under surface) is a fitted metal support which holds the shoe snugly up into the instep.

For Men, Women and Children.

DISCUSS SUNDAY OBSERVANCE

A Catholic Believes Baseball Harmless—Rabbi's Reply to Dr. Potter.

Bishop Potter's criticism of the observance of Sunday in America, in his charge to the Diocesan Convention, aroused much interest among religious leaders here. The Bishop's plea for a movement looking to a return to a more Christian observance of the day was generally approved. A marked difference of opinion, however, was shown as to the best way to keep Sunday sacred.

"We and all Christians will regret with Bishop Potter," said the Rev. Dr. Hayes, Chancellor of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York, "any tendency to deprive the laborer of his day of rest, or any encroachment upon the observance of Sunday. But, of course, there is a large difference of opinion as to what constitutes a desecration of the Sabbath.

"The Catholic Church has little or no difficulty in getting its people to Mass on Sunday mornings. From 6 to 11 there is Mass at every hour and Sunday school for the children. These morning services are obligatory and our churches are never without a full attendance.

"The Catholic Church, however, does not condemn the taking of legitimate recreation on Sunday afternoons, and considers baseball, for those boys who cannot find recreation in the streets of New York, a clean and healthful sport that cannot detract from the sanctity of the Lord's Day."

Rabbi Silverman of Temple Emanu-El took exception to Bishop Potter's statement that the Hebrews are "a race who do not hold to Sunday at all."

"There are about 1,500,000 Hebrews in this country," he declared, "and 99 per cent. of them do no work on Sunday. Those who do work are mostly compelled to do so by their Christian employers. With us Sunday is kept as a civil day of rest. There are eighteen Jewish congregations in the United States—two of them in this city—that hold supplementary services on Sunday.

"The Jews, however, are not so puritanical as some Christians in the practice of some mild forms of recreation on the Sabbath. The latter with us is considered a day of holiness and spiritual enjoyment. On account of existing commercial conditions there is, nevertheless, an unfortunate laxity among Jews as to Sabbath observance. Those who are able observe the day according to strict traditional lines.

SPEEDWAY BRUSHES AFFORD FINE SPORT

Nathan Straus Takes First Honors with Ida Highwood.

FAST HALF MILES THE RULE

James Shevlin Prominent in Many Trials Against Invader, The King, and Other Favorite Steppers.

Speedway brushes took on some of their old-time flavor yesterday, the fast trotters and pacers affording lively sport from early morning until afternoon. They moved ceaselessly up and down the famous drive and tried out their speed at every challenge. There were always two or three horses speeding down to the mark above Washington Bridge.

The performances of Ida Highwood (2:09¼) held the interest of the thousand sport lovers who lined the curb and hung over the railing upon the embankment. The honors of the day went to the courageous little mare, as, guided by her owner, Nathan Straus, she handily won three times down the stretch from Ackley C. Schuyler's Mona Wilkes, whose mark has never been officially posted.

The first time down both of the trotters were on even terms to the quarter-mile post. There Mona Wilkes seemed to lose her footing, and Ida Highwood drew ahead. At the end of the half mile Mona Wilkes was beaten by half a length.

After some little time the pair got off on their second trial. Their start gave neither the advantage, and right up to the half-mile mark the game Schuyler mare led. But within a few yards of the finish she again broke badly, and Ida Highwood flashed past a winner for the second time.

In the third trial Ida Highwood was as steady as could be, while Mona Wilkes broke midway to the finish and lost by two lengths.

Several brushes between Invader and The King divided interest with the Ida Highwood-Mona Wilkes trials. Invader (2:10) was in fine trim, but once The King, (2:10½,) driven by Monroe L. Simmonds, proved too much for him, when the fast pace forced such a bad break that The King distanced him to the mark. The tables were turned in the second brush, Invader winning by an open length.

The King was seeking opportunities to show speed everywhere and traveled many heats in the day. One of his best, although defeat was his reward, was against James Shevlin. Shevlin beat him to the mark by a throatlatch in a stirring finish. Shevlin also tried out Invader, but Invader did not get away well, and when half way down to the mark broke with a kick and a plunge. Shevlin had it all his own way after that. Shevlin then engaged George Huber's Marie Pandit and Rhythmic, Jr., the latter driven by R. Clark. Marie Pandit showed a clean pair of heels to the others, Rhythmic, Jr., coming in second, and Shevlin bringing up the rear. Marie Pandit also won from Col. W. C. Greene's Cobre Grande.

A brush that caused the mounted police some fearful moments was that in which Mercury Wilkes, driven by F. G. Schmidt; Bessie Thompson, the fast bay trotter, driven by her owner, Commissioner Isaac A. Hopper; Alice Drake, driven by A. Cone, and an unknown chestnut tore down the Speedway, threatening disaster to some of the light wagons along the route. They went the distance without any damage, and finished in the order named. All of these horses, with the exception of Bessie Thompson, are pacers.

NEW ROWING COURSE NEEDED.

Local Clubs Anxious for Pelham Bay Project to Mature.

President James Pilkington of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen has been busy perfecting the preliminary plans for the proposed rowing course at Pelham Bay, and will in a few days present his report to local oarsmen for approval. Mr. Pilkington has recently received many requests to hurry the call for the first meeting. The Atlanta and Friendship Boat Clubs are particularly desirous of securing the necessary approval of the authorities, as they are compelled to move from their present location, and do not want to build expensive boat houses opposite the Speedway only to tear them down and move to Pelham Bay in a year or so. That all the Harlem River boat clubs will transfer their headquarters to Pelham Bay as soon as the course is constructed is admitted, and the Building Committees want to avoid a double expense of moving or refitting the clubhouses. Mr. Pilkington realizes the importance of this, but has been compelled to go slow in the matter so as to avoid future trouble. The question of the jurisdiction of the Park Commissioners was a serious one, as valuable time might be thrown away if it were afterward found that their authority did not extend to the stretch of water it is proposed to use for regatta purposes.

The project is receiving support from all quarters, and the projectors will receive valuable assistance from the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen. Henry Whiting Garfield, who is one of the best posted officials in the National Association, is enthusiastic over the new course, and said: "In the hands of some enthusiasts this project might seem merely chimerical and visionary, but promoted by so eminently practical a man as the President of the National Association I see no reason why united effort and patient perseverance with the proper authorities should not result in success. It is certain that rowing was never so popular in and around New York as it is to-day, and never was the need of a good course so urgant. All the rowing water in the neighborhood of New York is unfair and inadequate and every day grows worse."

PRESIDENT TAKES UP RATES.

Congressman Townsend Visits Him—Expects a Violent Fight.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The President will take up the subject of rate legislation promptly, both as a leading topic in his message to Congress and also as a practical problem in statecraft to be worked out in the ways that are adopted when there is a difference between him the legislative branch.

Representative Townsend of Michigan arrived here to-night, called to consult with the President in regard to the measure prepared by him and John J. Esch, which was passed by the House and smothered in the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce last session.

Mr. Townsend had no explanation to give of his errand here, and said that he had no modifications of his bill to make. He expects the fight to be begun all over and fought with greater violence if anything.

OVER A FENCE FROM AN AUTO.

Philadelphia Family Thrown Fifty Feet When a Tire Came Off.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, Oct. 1.—L. E. Weber, a Philadelphia buyer, his wife, child, and mother-in-law, Mrs. Miller, with their chauffeur, Clarence L. Clegg, were thrown fifty feet to-night from their touring car on the Freehold road five miles from Hightstown and badly bruised.

The machine was going at a good clip, when in turning out to pass a carriage the tire of a hind wheel skidded and came off. The occupants of the machine were thrown over a fence into a field and the automobile was wrecked. Their injuries were dressed at Hightstown and the party except the chauffeur went back to Philadelphia to-night by train. He is badly injured and is at a hotel here attended by a physician.

The Meaning of Cash or Liberal Credit in Cowperthwait & Sons' Stores

Whoever will take the trouble to examine carefully the Cowperthwait & Sons' goods and prices—marked in plain figures—will be convinced that the firm sells superior merchandise at low prices and gives credit besides.

Great quantities of furniture are bought at the factories in the West and the South, paid for in cash, less the trade discount, and are shipped in carload lots at the lowest possible rates of freight—a big item in furniture expense.

Then the larger volume of business done enables this house to turn over the goods promptly, thus avoiding loss of time in the storeroom,

Buyers are entitled to credit at the marked prices, and without any extra charge, paying for the goods in weekly, fortnightly or monthly portions, suiting their own convenience.

THOSE WHO PREFER TO PAY CASH ARE ALLOWED A DISCOUNT of TEN PER CENT. FROM THE FACE OF THE BILL.

All Oak Extension Table, $6.75

The dining-room has much to do with the sunny side of life. The better it is furnished the pleasanter are the hours passed around the board.

A better table than this cannot be had at the price.

Six feet long when extended; castered, and has an extra leg to give support in the centre, which makes it unusually firm.

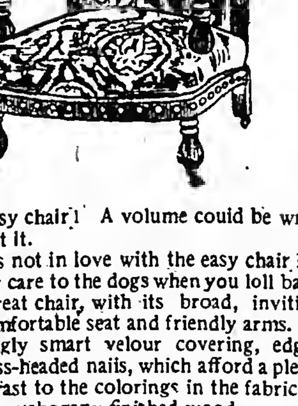
It will matter little how he may bluster if you have this "Old Reliable Stove" in your home.

Heavy castings throughout, nickel rails, base, top, swing cover, door, skirt and every other good stove requirement.

The reduced price includes, besides the stove—pipe, elbows, ring, damper, poker, shovel, coal hod and a piece of zinc 26x26 inches. Burns coal or wood. Nowhere else in New York can you get so much for so little.

Large Easy Chair, $27.50



The easy chair! A volume could be written about it.

Who is not in love with the easy chair?

Throw care to the dogs when you loll back in this great chair, with its broad, inviting back, comfortable seat and friendly arms.

Strikingly smart velour covering, edged with brass-headed nails, which afford a pleasing contrast to the colorings in the fabric.

Oak or mahogany finished wood.

The cabinet-maker and the upholsterer have done their best, and we have done our best by making the discount price $27.50.

Mertes Makes Sensational Catch and Saves Champions from Defeat.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Oct. 1.—By winning the first game of the double-header from the Cincinnatis in the tenth inning to-day the champions clinched the championship. Ewing's wildness was responsible for the defeat, although Mertes saved the game for his team in the tenth inning by making one of the most sensational catches ever seen on the local grounds. He was switched from left to centre field by Manager McGraw, as Donlin, owing to the sun, had lost two fly balls, never seeing the sphere until it had fallen on the ground.

With one run to the good in the tenth inning for the visitors, and after two were out for the local team, with Barry on second, Steinfeldt was sent in to bat for Mowery. He caught the ball squarely and sent it flying to left centre for what looked to be a sure home run. Mertes chased after it, and while going at full speed put his ungloved hand into the air, and the ball stuck, thereby giving the New Yorks the game. Overall outpitched Wiltse in the second game, which only lasted four and a half innings, being called on account of darkness.

CHICAGO BEATS QUAKERS TWICE.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The Chicagos won both games from Philadelphia to-day, outfielding the visitors and making all of the hits for extra bases in both. Schulte stopped a home-run hit off Bransfield's bat in the ninth inning of the first game by a great jumping catch against the left field bleachers, injuring himself badly. Lungren allowed but three scattered singles, and struck out eight men in the second game, scoring an easy shut-out. Scores:

GREATER NEW YORKS BEATEN.

Manhattans Batted Goode Hard and Score a Victory by 7 to 5.

There have been large crowds at Olympia Field, 166th Street and Fifth Avenue, than that of yesterday to see a Sunday baseball game, but the 3,500 "rooters" who saw the Manhattans defeat the Greater New Yorks by a score of 7 to 5, with "Tim" Hurst as umpire, was a record attendance at 50 cents admission. To present a strong front against the American Leaguers the Manhattans were reinforced by Barry of the Paterson Club; Oldring, short stop of the Montgomery Club of the Southern League, and Foxen of the Hartford Club of the Connecticut League, who yesterday pitched under the name of Jones. This combination, with the pick of the regular Manhattans, proved too much for Griffith's men, who were considerably changed about, and were handicapped by the ground conditions pertaining to hits. The score:

Fultz's Jaw Is Broken.

The collision between David Fultz and Norman Elberfeld in the first game of the double-header between the Greater New York and Cleveland teams on Saturday developed yesterday into a more serious accident than was expected. Fultz was suffering so much from shock that it was not until yesterday morning the surgeons at the Washington Heights Hospital were enabled to make a thorough examination of his injuries. It was discovered that his jaw was broken. This, with the cuts on his face and the jar he sustained in the collision has left him in an enfeebled condition. However, it was stated at the hospital late last night that the centre fielder was resting comfortably, but it would be several days before he would be able to leave the institution.

Elberfeld, in addition to a bruised body and a badly scarred face, has a broken nose and suffered considerably from the injuries yesterday.

He breasted the tape one yard ahead of Eissen, who showed a good burst of speed at the finish. The two-mile run went to William Boyle, who was on the 160-yard mark, after a bruising contest with Fairclough. Summaries:

BELMONT PARK OFFERS NEW TANGLES IN FORM

ARTFUL'S FALL ENGAGEMENTS

Filly Is in All the Important Stakes, but There Is Doubt of Her Running Again This Year.

The place of racing will change to-day to Belmont Park for the first Fall meeting ever held on that course of right turns and reverse running. Since May all the horses that have been racing on the metropolitan tracks have been trained and have run with the turns to the left, and the possibilities of the change in conditions when they get to Belmont Park are such as to fill horsemen with apprehension, for it is agreed among trainers that matters will be even more complicated at the Fall meeting than in the Spring, when the fields were comparatively light and two-year-olds were receiving their first experience in racing.

The two-year-olds now are as much accustomed to running with the rail to the left as are the older horses, and there is no reason for hoping that there will be any less disposition on the part of the horses and riders to swing to the outer fence, and clear across the broad stretch, that there was in the Spring.

Since the May meeting at Belmont Park there have been a number of alterations in the arrangement of the track's equipment, the most notable of these being in the changed position of the judges and stewards' stand, from the line between the grand and club stands inclosures to a point nearly a sixteenth of a mile further up the stretch, thus putting the finishing post in front of the grandstand. The work on the track occupied the entire Summer, and resulted in an entire new surface being laid, the course thus having been improved to a point where it is expected to be the fastest in the country. It has been in no way out of the ordinary for moderate class horses training there to gallop miles just around 1:40, even while slower time was winning races at Sheepshead Bay, Gravesend, and Brighton Beach.

Valuable stakes are scattered liberally through the two weeks of the meeting, three stake fixtures being set for each of three days, two each for seven other days and one each for two more days. The chief interest will be in the stakes for two-year-olds, for, as racing has gone, the better class horses among the three-year-olds and upward have been greatly reduced in number, and in point of fact about all the real stars of the season are in practical retirement. Sysonby had no stake engagements at Belmont Park, and his retirement for the season had no effect on the racing prospect, but the next most notable horse of the year, Harry Payne Whitney's filly Artful, is engaged in all the big events, while her stable companion Tanya is in two events to be run at the meeting.

The illness which kept Artful out of the Brighton Cup Preliminary and the Brighton Cup race has ceased to trouble her trainer, but in view of the long let-up that the filly had it is a matter of doubt now whether she will race again this season, especially as her engagements, with the single exception of the Belmont Park Weight for Age Race are in handicaps. Both Artful and Tanya are in the Hunter Handicap for fillies, one mile to be run Thursday, and the same two fillies are in the Municipal Handicap, one mile and three-quarters, for three-year-olds and upward, to be run Saturday. Accepting 126 pounds as the top weight for the Hunter Handicap, the stake looks to be at the mercy of the Whitney stable if either of the fillies is ready for the race, but Tanya, too, suffered from the sickness that broke out in the Whitney stable on the return from Saratoga, and suffered a serious setback, and it may be that both will pass the race, the oldest filly stakes in American racing.

The Municipal Handicap, with thirty-three entries, is remarkable chiefly for the number of good horses among its nominations that have either gone wrong or been retired for the year, these including The Picket, Beldame, Hermis, Stalwart, Caughnawaga, and Bryn Mawr.

The two stakes for two-year-olds, on the other hand, give excellent promise, and though the most valuable of these are handicaps, there is every likelihood that some of the smartest and best two-year-olds of the season will be among the starters in the Nursery and White Plains Handicaps and the Champagne Stakes, the entries for the latter race including the Futurity winner, Ormondale; the Whitney crack Burgomaster, Oaklawn, Running Water, Whimsical, Accountant, Kuroki, Voorhees, Vendor, and the high-priced Oak Duke.

The steeplechase stakes also are attractive, in that they have plenty of fair material, even though the star jumpers have dropped away almost as rapidly as did the best-class handicap horses.

The Brook Club has decided to increase the value of the Gold Cup, which it offers for the three-mile handicap steeplechase to be run at Belmont Park on Saturday next, to $3,000, instead of $2,500, as originally proposed. This steeplechase is expected to give perfect line for the Champion, which will be run on the following Saturday. The Brook Cup will be to the Autumn meeting what the Whitney Memorial was to the Spring. In addition to the Brook Cup and the Champion, there will be run the Harbor Hill, a new steeplechase for three-year-olds exclusively. The giving of this stake, which had the effect of engaging in this branch of the sport high-class young horses, was the idea of Clarence H. Mackay, who donated $3,000 and a silver cup exclusively for the race. On Saturday next, when the Brook Cup will be run, the thirty members of the Brook Club will attend in a body, and will dine in the old Mannice mansion, now the permanent home of the Turf and Field Club.

Vogel Brothers' Cravenettes a Different Kind from the Ordinary Sort.

First and foremost look at the illustration of one of our cravenette models alongside and you will understand why we say ours are better and different than the rest of their kind—note the dash and grace, the knacks of style it reveals. Then listen to this: "Cravenetting" is simply a successful process for waterproofing. The cheapest cloth can be and is treated to it. We are the makers of our cravenettes—buy the cloth for them as we do for every other garment in our house—it is the best the mills can loom. This cloth is then cravenetted and we fashion and tailor it into handsome overcoats that may be worn for rain or shine.

At $15—Here's a cravenette of exceptional value, modeled on generous lines, 52 inches long, in Oxford gray worsted, like cut alongside.

Other cravenettes of Scotch plaids, fancy cheviots, and the new light and dark gray worsteds in long tourist and paddock models—up to $30.

CYCLERS HOLD CARNIVAL.

Jersey Riders Contest Races at Old Guttenberg Track.

Old Guttenberg race track was the scene yesterday of the cycling carnival of the New Jersey Division of the Century Road Club of America, and a thousand spectators gathered there and witnessed an interesting series of events.

C. F. Hanson of Jersey City carried off first honors by a victory in the closed five-mile race for members, and by taking second to Frederick Peterson of Newark in the open five-mile. The handicap over the same distance was won by N. McDonald of the Tiger Wheelmen from scratch, while the two-mile race went to C. Graham of Bayonne.

H. L. Lind of Brooklyn was prominent in five of the races, taking first with his brother in the team pursuit race and alone in the novelty race, besides being placed three other times. The records made in the various events follow:

Wallenschlager Takes Road Race.

P. Wallenschlagen won the ten-mile road race of the Eastern Division of the Century Road Club Association, held on the Merrick Road, at Valley Stream, yesterday. Wallenschlager had a handicap of five minutes and thirty seconds, and won by several yards from F. Larsen, who started with seven minutes' lead. C. Nerent, from scratch, made the fastest time, but finished seventh.

The two-mile handicap of the Long Island Division was won by F. W. Elfler, who beat his brother, J. M. Elfler, by inches. F. C. Graft and G. Duester finished third and fourth. All started from scratch. Summaries:

Two-mile Handicap, Long Island Division, (eight prizes.)—Won by F. W. Elfler, (scratch;) J. M. Elfler, (scratch,) second; F. C. Graf, (scratch,) third; G. Duester, (scratch,) fourth; C. Zink, (50 yards,) fifth; J. Benedict, (70 yards,) sixth; G. Froebig, (60 yards,) seventh; A. Lewin, (160 yards,) eighth. Winner's time, 4:42 1-5.

FRENCH AUTO TEAM HAS FEARLESS DRIVERS

Hemery and Wagner Will Give Italians Hard Fight.

AMERICA'S CHANCES POOR

Foreigners Have Been Well Tested for Speed and Endurance—Lancia to Set Hot Pace.

The arrival of Hemery and Wagner in America as competitors for the Vanderbilt Cup on Oct. 14 has occasioned considerable speculation among automobilists regarding the chances of the rival foreign teams. Notwithstanding the fast time of the winning American cars, 56 miles an hour, in the elimination race, the showing of the genuine racing machines was disappointing because three that have been elected for the American team, the White steamer, the Pope-Toledo driven by Lytle, and the Christie car, failed to make any satisfactory showing. They will have another chance in two weeks, but with a possible 60 to 65 miles an hour for the entire race of 283 miles that is confidently expected from the foreign cars, critics of automobile possibilities do not place great reliance in the American cars to win. However, every one hopes for the best from the American standpoint, but the way the wind blows may be seen from the fact that several bets have already been made that the American cars will not finish among the first six.

Among many the Italian team looms up as a strong favorite, with Lancia as the individual favorite, although between him and Nazzaro there is little to choose. Lancia, it has been stated, will set as hot a pace as possible from the start, while Nazzaro will drive more cautiously, but will constantly be in readiness to dash to the front if accident should befall Lancia.

Hemery and Wagner have done more successful racing abroad than any of the other French racers who will be here, and as they are known as fearless and fast drivers, they are regarded as probably the most formidable opponents that the Italians will have to meet.

Hemery has been in the racing game for several years, and in 1904 gained prominence as the winner in the light-car class in the hill-climbing contest at Mount Ventoux, France. In the annual French Gaillon hill-climb contest on Oct. 30, 1904, Hemery drove a kilometer on this course, the average gradient of which is over 7 per cent., in 0:32 3-5, thereby winning the light-car class record for this event. He also won the light-car class at Ostende, Belgium, in November, 1904, making a kilometer in 0:25 2-5. It was on this occasion that Barras, with an eighty horse power Darracq, broke the world's record for heavy-weight cars, covering a kilometer in 0:21 2-5, or at the rate of 104.53 miles an hour, which has not up to the present time been surpassed.

It was by winning the Ardennes circuit race in Belgium on Aug. 7 of this year that Hemery made his greatest reputation. Against the best European cars he easily won the race, covering the 600 kilometers (372.82 miles) in 5:58:32½, an average of 62.82 miles an hour.

Hemery also made the best time for light cars at the race meet held at Brescia, Italy, on Sept. 10, for the Florio Cup, covering 312.3 miles in 4:58:01 2-5, completing the first round of 104.1 miles at an average speed of 69.4 miles an hour.

Wagner first came prominently to notice as a clever driver when, in the Fall of 1903, he won the race for cars in the light-weight class at the annual French Gaillon hill-climb contest, making a kilometer on this hill in 0:40, beating the previous year's record by 7 seconds.

BRITISH FOOTBALL TEAM LOST

All-Chicago Association Eleven Won Close Game by 2 to 1.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—The All-Chicago Association football team to-day defeated the visiting British eleven by the score of 2 to 1. The local team was composed of the best players in the city, while the English aggregation, which is playing under the name of the Pilgrims, comprises the pick of the leading university and public school players on the other side. This is the first time the Englishmen have been beaten by an American team during the trip. Th only other defeat recorded against them was scored by the Berlin, Ontario, Rangers.

The combination work of the visitors was perfect, their passing and team play excelling that of the Chicago players, who showed superiority in the kicking game, securing both of their goals from long kicks. The shooting of the Englishmen lacked its usual precision, and many close goal shots went wide of the posts.

TRIBUTE FROM CORPORATIONS.

The movement to free the City of Philadelphia from corrupt rule is one of the strongest and most intelligent ever undertaken there. It is under the leadership of men of experience, sound sense, and high character. There is no trace in it of faddism or fanaticism. It is not complicated by the advocacy of extreme doctrines or the pursuit of doubtful alms. It is directed to the purification of the City Government and to the attainment of honesty and efficiency in the management of public business.

Certainly the need for such a movement has been plainly enough shown. The reform leader is Mayor WEAVER, a loyal Republican, who has exhausted all the resources of his office to secure decent administration under the ordinary conditions of party rule and has found it absolutely impossible, because party rule has been completely prostituted to the private gain of the party managers. He made every effort imaginable to get "reform within the party," and was baffled because the machine was in the hands of thieves, swindlers, schemers, strangely aided by nominal Democrats. In other words, the most open and outrageous violation of every rational notion of party loyalty among the leaders made adherence to party a hideous and ridiculous sacrifice of personal honor. Revolt against the corrupt and shameless usurpers of party authority became the undoubted duty of honest and self-respecting party men. The sense of party obligation which in the past has actuated the Republicans of Philadelphia to signal victories in a good cause was outraged by the basest treachery at the seat of party authority. Mayor WEAVER was convinced, and his experience convinced thousands of his fellow-Republicans, that the highest service to be rendered to the party was to cast out its betrayers, to cleanse it by crushing defeat.

It is no easy task. The machine leaders are past masters in the use of money to influence elections—to bribe voters, to corrupt election officers, to shut out or count out honest votes. And they have lots of money at their command. Some of it is the fruit of their past labors; but that they will save as far as they can. Some of it is money drawn from the usual contributors to party expenditures, and of this a good deal comes from corporations. On the face of the known facts, no officer of a decent corporation should give a cent in aid of the man in control of the party machine. It is like putting up money to help crack the public safe. But there is another side to the question. Corporation officers have explained and justified such gifts as needed to save their property and their shareholders or beneficiaries from injury. They have represented their payments as practically the price of protection from brigands. And even now, when the brigandage is exposed and the robber chiefs are known, it is reported that some of them still hesitate, still fear, still plead the need of defending the interests for which they are the trustees. The machine may "win out." The price of security is known. The methods of the gang are familiar. There is vengeance in store for those who fall away in the hour of danger. Again, if the City Party prevails, everything will be in confusion. It may not be practicable to "do business" with the new men. And so on to the end of the pitiful list of sophistries with which men not strong enough to do their plain duty seek to hide it even from themselves.

The plea of protection for the corporations against "strikes" by those in power is not without foundation; such abuses have existed and still exist. It has been cheaper for the moment to buy off the brigands than to fight them. There have been cases in which fighting would expose the corporations to unpleasant revelations. Prudence on the one hand, consciences not entirely clear on the other, have made the exaction of tribute easy and profitable. But it has always been true that if the corporations were themselves free from blame and if they would unite to refuse tribute, the machine would be absolutely baffled. It is time, high time, that all the honest corporations should combine in such refusing. For one thing, that combination would make it possible to sweep the machine from power. For another thing, if this opportunity be not embraced, there is no security as to what an aroused and indignant and outraged public sentiment may undertake to do. The partnership of corporations with public thieves is proved in some instances, morally certain in others, and suspected in nearly all. It is deeply resented. Now corporations are the creatures of legislation, and legislation is shaped by public sentiment when that is strong enough. If the resentment toward corporations is deepened by their own conduct, if the suspected partnership comes to be generally accepted and its existence is confirmed by further tribute in aid of political robbery, the public will strike at what they believe to be the root of the evil. It will strike blindly, but it will strike hard, and its blows will be destructive. Corporation officers honest enough to be without fear and long-headed enough to see what may come, and come soon, will defy the politicians and take sides with the people. It is infinitely more decent, and on the whole it is safer.

THE TRIUMPHAL CAR.

These be the spacious days of the President. As his victorious chariot of peace rolls its course out of the Summer capital and proceeds along the magnificent distances of Washington the plaudits of the Nation rise from its four corners. WILSON of the Cabinet exclaims for the West that it "will back him up no matter what he says, or what he wants; they are with him on everything." The President's gaze fixes upon the South, and HENRY LOOMIS NELSON cries from Williamstown that "the South is on the verge of breaking its solidity." Southern Senators, forgetting CRUM, will ratify his Santo Domingo treaty, establish his protectorate over Venezuela, spike and tie the iron roads with his rates, gouge the Panama Canal with a silver scoop, and pile Pelion upon Ossa at his slightest motion. In April on his Southern trip Mr. ROOSEVELT's spirit rose in prophetic ecstasy:

> I can, in a sense, claim to be, by blood at least, a typical President, for I am half Southerner, half Northerner. I was born in the East, and I have a great deal of the West in my spirit.

We at that time observed: "What are the points of the compass, what are territorial limits to that heroic soul? It takes for its own the boundless continent, o'erleaps the Caribbean, and attracts within its sphere of influence the countries beyond Ocean's stream. The big round globe pulsates to its outgivings of emotional energy, and if astronomers observe strange perturbations among the planets, let them seek the cause thereof in the White House." We say it again. Has not our President while at Oyster Bay engaged the mighty speculations of the world? Has not he wrested Peace from the warring grasp of Oriental foes, and has not the goddess crowned him? Has he not shown that ROOSEVELT himself is peaceful? We spill the thought into verse, not our own, but Private DALZELL'S:

> No more the cruel falsehood
> ...s name and fame assail
> That Roo...VELT, impulsive, was surely doomed to fail.
> A Hotspur he was painted provoking cruel wars,
> Unsafe and sure to blunder,
> The slander spread afar.
> He bears his high commission, as the prophets used to do,
> And executes it grandly,
> And all the nations view
> The master hand that wrought it,
> This miracle of peace,
> The President who brought it, his praise shall never cease.

But a Shakespeare or a Milton should hymn his praises. Even as the Virgin Queen of England deflected Cupid's darts, so ROOSEVELT has shivered the lance of Mars:

> But we might see old Mars's fiery shaft
> Quench'd in the orient beams of the Rising Sun,
> And the imperial ROOSEVELT passed on,
> In peaceful meditation, fancy free.

"SELECTIVE ENVIRONMENT."

Mr. LUTHER BURBANK, the account of whose practice in the perfecting of plant life fascinated the readers of The Century Magazine in several of its issues this year, has lately been advocating similar experiments for influencing the lives of children by a process of "selective environment," with the laudable purpose of improving the qualities of the race. The analogy which Mr. BURBANK follows is clear. The characteristics of plants and animals may be modified and intensified by wisdom in the choice of specimens revealing tendencies toward the particular consummation sought. So, measurably, with children, whom Mr. BURBANK prefers above all creatures for his artistic purpose because they "are the most responsive to influences of all living things in the entire universe."

The horticulturist has approached the doubtful subject of human stirpiculture with a degree of certainty. He does not attempt the impossible. Philosophers of eugenics have identified the broad influences governing race development in human societies, such as monogamy, marriage within and without the tribe, caste, celibacy, public education, charity, and institutional restraints, that modify considerably the group action of heredity. Among these general influences there are obvious limitations to the conscious experimenter, none less puzzling than that of the individual will. Plants have no volition, and the will of the animal is subject to that of the man; but human beings have an infinite capability and intent of overturning the altruistic designs of their fellows or superiors. Dr. MAUDSLEY of England lately showed, logically enough, that your doctors are your only matchmakers, who should mate couples scientifically with respect to their physical traits—but young people of opposite sex will be governed by their private inclination. Similarly, the legal restrictions upon marriage proposed this year by the homoeopathic physicians to the Legislatures of Nebraska, Colorado, and Michigan would be negligible even should they be fixed in the statute books.

Mr. BURBANK speaks for his California garden:

> I have here a plant school—an academy for fruits, flowers, berries, vegetables, and trees—and I am trying to teach my scholars how to develop their good natural qualities and to learn other virtues. I am trying to train them for greater usefulness; to teach them new virtues, new qualities, which will make them better and brighter—which they can pass along to the next generation, just as if they were men and women.

In this attempt, as those who are acquainted with plant culture are aware, he has succeeded marvelously. The next step is with men and women themselves—of the younger growth. The knowledge is ancient as the world that the child's will interposes but slight obstacles to action upon his impressionable nature. But "child culture," familiar as it is to fathers and mothers, may reveal more vital potentialities under the leading of this gifted perfecter of organic life.

UNDESIRABLE CROWNS.

It would seem to the average citizen that the crown of Norway was about as desirable as any which could be had. A sane people, a prosperous country, a chance to accomplish great material benefits, and the reasonable assurance of loyal support for all reasonable and proper measures, might attract any Prince ambitious of founding a dynasty; but it has gone a-begging, and it may be that the people of Norway will have to evolve a de jure as well as a de facto republic in order to work out autonomy. This, moreover, is not the first time that crowns have been declined with thanks by those to whom they were tendered. More than forty years ago Lord DERBY, an English peer, refused the crown of Greece, preferring to remain a British subject and enjoy life at Knowlsley. A generation before this same crown had been refused by Prince LEOPOLD of Saxe-Coburg, and what the Earl of DERBY did not want the Duke of EDINBURGH would none of. Bulgaria had a somewhat similar experience. It was "hawked" a long time, until finally Prince FERDINAND accepted it, and it may be doubted if he ever ceased to regret his complaisance. After the deposition of ISABELLA of Spain the crown of that country was refused by nearly every eligible candidate except Don CARLOS, who could not get it, until it was accepted by the son of VICTOR EMMANUEL of Italy, who had enough in two years and abdicated by resignation. Of course, there are crowns and crowns, but the most desirable of them is not too attractive.

THE PLAGUE IN THE CANAL ZONE.

In the conflict of assertion between the medical authorities of the Canal Zone and the Consul of Ecuador residing at Colon, as to whether certain laborers in Leboca died of the bubonic plague or of some other disease, the reasonable conclusion is that the physicians are right and the layman wrong. Consular denial of such a statement, which it may be presumed was made on good authority, counts for very little. In the concept of a Consular officer the interests of trade are paramount to any other interests, and it is for this reason that the facts of the beginnings of epidemic disease are so often concealed, to the great injury of countries which are thus induced to neglect necessary measures of self-protection.

In a matter of this kind it is wise for the health officers in responsible charge of the Canal Zone to err on the side of safety. To keep the bubonic plague out of the zone is of first importance, failing in which the plans for sanitation will come to naught and the work of canal construction must be abandoned. The folly of saying it is there already if it is not, and especially if the statement is so palpably in error as to admit of successful contradiction by a Consul, may be dismissed as wholly improbable. The results are even now sufficiently serious to have gravely embarrassed the Isthmian authorities and caused a congestion of freights sent by way of the Isthmus to Central and South American ports. Assuming the statement true, however, and the diagnosis upon which it is based correct, vastly greater harm would have come from concealment than from frank admission.

The sanitary management of the Canal Zone is admirable; that of Panama outside the zone is, naturally enough, much less so. This greatly increases the difficulty of making and keeping the zone safe for the labor, skilled and unskilled, employed on the canal, and may seriously delay, if it does not ultimately defeat, the plan of an interoceanic waterway. The zone is a narrow strip, and if made a "sanitary paradise" so far as its local cleanliness is concerned, the fact would remain that climatic and other conditions, and especially the aggregation of large numbers of men in construction camps, are especially favorable to the lodgment and spread of diseases imported from adjacent ports. Canal Zone sanitation thus becomes a very anxious and difficult problem, and those who have undertaken it should not be judged too harshly if they are less successful than they might be expected to be under more favorable conditions.

A PROMISING PORTRAIT.

The series of portraits of Mayor MCCLELLAN which were preented to our readers yesterday necessarily lacked some of the more attractive traits of that gentleman's very interesting countenance. No photograph—not even the happiest snapshot—can really render the expression of a smile, which in its very nature is fleeting, and which, when fixed, tends to become—well, something quite different, as millions of Mr. ROOSEVELT's pictures sadly testify. Mr. MCCLELLAN's face in the repose demanded by a good photograph shows a shade of seriousness verging on sternness, which is by no means his usual expression.

But if the camera is inadequate, it is not exactly treacherous. The expression it reports is characteristic of the Mayor in not infrequent moods, and the silence of the photographer's studio, the moment of practically solitary reflection may well bring one of these moods. The lips and the lower jaw are set in lines in which one sees the traces of difficulties overcome in the past and promise of firmness in dealing with those yet to come. When a public man of thirty-eight sets out to give his fellow-citizens the best service within his power, it is not unpleasant to see in his face evidence that the power is not exhausted—its limits, perhaps, not yet reached.

It appears, in the ancient Quaker phrase, to be "borne in on the minds" of some of the Republican leaders that it is not good policy to ignore the claims of the people of the County of New York to the continued services of District Attorney JEROME. We have not the slightest doubt that, if the views of the rank and file of the Republican Party in this county could be directly and accurately canvassed, it would be found that a very large majority of them would earnestly demand the indorsement of Mr. JEROME'S candidacy, partly because they are convinced that he is an extremely worthy officer, and partly because they would like to vote a ticket with one name upon it that would stand some chance of coming out ahead. Unless Mr. JEROME'S name is put on the Republican ticket this is a luxury which the strict party voters will have to dispense with.

The report of the State Civil Service Commission on the conduct of the City Commission is the outcome of a long and patient investigation. It discloses some loose practices in the work of the subordinates of the City Commission, especially in that of its Secretary, which should promptly be corrected. Too much license is evidently left to the Secretary, and he uses it with little appreciation of the purpose of the law. Evasions are made practically easy, and the rights of all applicants for appointment to a fair and equal chance, in accordance with tested merit, are neglected or violated. The recommendations of the State Commission are sensible, and if heeded by the City Commission will be found to be helpful. No better time could be found for thorough improvement in the administration of the City Commission than the present. On the eve of a political campaign a strict and loyal adherence to the requirements of the merit system would be particularly impressive and convincing.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Mr. Gaynor Is Resentful.

Mr. JOHN F. GAYNOR, who, with his sometime partner and friend, Mr. BENJAMIN D. GREENE, seems at last to be near the end of his marvelously numerous and effective excuses for deferring acceptance of the United States Government's invitation to visit the charming city of Savannah, is curiously ungrateful for the prolonged hospitality of Canada. That country has been his extremely generous host for over three years, has all through that time placed its judicial and other resources at his disposal, and even now is far from speeding the parting guest, and yet Mr. GAYNOR has been talking about her as if she had set the dog upon him when he first entered her front yard. "We looked for a square deal in Canada," he says, or is quoted as saying, "but did not get it." A Canadian, if of harsh speech and revengeful disposition, might retort to this that if Mr. GAYNOR looked for a square deal after he went to Canada he must have wanted it as a refreshing change from the deals he sought—and according to not a few highly formal legal documents succeeded in finding—in the United States, and that his real grievance against the Dominion is that he couldn't get there an endless succession of deals that were—well, that were just a little curved. But, no, come to think of it, a Canadian wouldn't say that, for the Canadians, unlike some of their neighbors, have a high regard for their own country and a fine blindness in the presence of opportunities to advertise its faults and mistakes. Mr. GAYNOR also had something sarcastic to say about "the much-vaunted justice of Canada." The criticism in his case would be fair, coming from anybody except himself and his companion, but neither of those exiles has any very clear right to expect people to believe that what he wants is justice from Canadian or other sources, particularly the kind of justice that is allotted in courts of law. As men still unconvicted of the crimes charged against them, Messrs. GAYNOR and GREENE must or should he held presumably innocent, but the task of doing so has been rendered extremely difficult by the desperate and expensive fight they have made against extradition. If they would have us believe that they do not fear but want justice, they are obliged to win our assent to the contention that they are the destined victima of a great Governmental conspiracy to turn their innocence into the semblance and the reaponsibility of guilt. They cannot do that. Either wisely or unwisely, they have themselves enormously weakened the presumption of innocence they had in the beginning, and their jeers against C will not help a bit to strengthen it.

THE CURB RISES TO PROTEST.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We desire to express the sentiments of a number of the leading firms on the curb, not connected with the New York Stock Exchange, relative to the onus that has been put upon that market by the recent break in Chicago Subway.

If this manipulation had been handled by curb brokers there would have been a terrible hue and cry against the dishonest methods of the curb, and its collapse would have been pointed to as an illustration of the dangerous features of that market. As a matter of fact, the whole manipulation was conducted entirely by Stock Exchange firms, and no curb firms or individual brokers had anything whatever to do with it except in the execution of commission orders received in the course of regular business. The effect of such affairs upon the legitimate business of the curb is a matter so serious as to warrant the most strenuous objection on the part of curb brokers conducting a business in the large list of good securities traded in in that market.

LANGUAGES IN THE SCHOOLS.

Even Elementary Knowledge of a Second Tongue of Much Value.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial to-day on the question of German as a subject of teaching in our public schools makes me think that perhaps you misapprehend the reason for its being in the curriculum. While it is probably true that the influence of the German element in our population is the force that placed the subject in the curriculum, the reason which lay behind that force was the educational value of a second tongue, for it is true that the ability on the part of a child to read, were it only single words or short phrases, a language other than his own is a very distinct acquisition to him. And this I say, although to many of the pupils who get this instruction, the subject remains entirely unknown by reason of inability to grasp even its merest rudiments or from prejudice against it as "Dutch." It is curious but true that the boys who most frequently refuse it for the latter reason are themselves the children of parents born in the War Lord's dominion. Perhaps Mr. Rupp has them in mind as the "common" or garden variety of German children.

The whole question of a second language for elementary pupils is likely soon to be agitated more than ever, in view of the large Italian immigration. Any argument in favor of German, whether on the ground of utility or literary merit or any other, may be brought forward in favor of the language of the "Divina Commedia"; and adopting Mr. Rupp's argument that the placing of German in the curriculum will prevent "common" German children from belittling their parents as "Dutch," in greater measure would the installing of Italian as a substitute or alternative for German tend to keep young Italians from feeling ashamed of their parents, now so often stigmatized by opprobious names.

GORKY'S INTERVIEW.

Complete Text of Russian Author's Opinion of Peace.

Just before Maxim Gorky left his temporary home in Finland for Moscow, where several of his plays are to be produced for the first time, he authorized an interview for a French syndicate, the full text of which is as follows:

"There is no doubt that the peace has strengthened the Government's hands, and its weakness has been our opportunity. But aside from the effects of the peace upon the chances of liberty being won by the Russian people, the colonial venture should have been finished once for all. We have no mission to colonize foreign territory. We have more of our own than we can civilize in a century. Besides we have nothing to give others. Englishmen and Americans take their state with them when they colonize. We leave rich sections of our own empire to degenerate instead of developing under our administration. Russia has not given Poland one single civilizing agency, but, on the contrary, has suppressed or dwarfed those that she found there. The Caucasus remains as wild as it was fifty years ago. The native Armenian and Georgian Church, schools, libraries, and press have been trodden down, and, the people given over to savagery. I fear our lesson has not been thorough enough, and that we shall return to schemes of Asiatic expansion, instead of devoting our energies to domestic affairs.

"The peace sentiment of the majority of Liberal politicians and newspapers can be explained in part as tactics. The peasants feel the hardships of war, and know nothing of its political value. The Liberals, few in numbers compared with the mass of the people, feel it necessary to gain the support of the peasants and working men. Other considerations that weighed with them were the belief that the work of the war could no longer be undone, and that the returning soldiers would be added to the ranks of the reformers, and of course the natural sentiments of humanity. I can only say that I have been unable so far to share their views. War abroad is no worse than civil war at home, such as the Government has instigated in the Caucasus and as is being waged on a smaller scale throughout the country. Kishineff horrified the world. We have had scores of Kishineffs during the last six months, and even few Russians remember the names of the towns where they have occurred. Bielostok, far worse than Kishineff, secured only a dozen lines in the foreign press. I have good private information that preparations are being made in Moscow for an assault upon the intellectuals.

"I do not, however, despair for the cause of freedom. I am confident that the peasants, under whatever circumstances they may be elected, will surprise the Government by their insistence for liberty, for the removal of the galling oppression of Zemsky nachalniks—the autocrats of the peasant cantons—and police, as well as for land reform. I have faith in the capacity of the peasants to understand their own affairs, when matters are put to them in homely phrase instead of in the ridiculous Latinized words that the newspapers prefer. In proof of this I may mention that the best common schools, the best hospitals and medical service, and the best roads in Russia are in the northeastern provinces, where the nobility plays a very subordinate role, and the Zemstvo is a peasant institution. The typical example is Viatka.

"Political freedom having been obtained, there is bound to be a marvelous unfolding of the spiritual and intellectual faculties of the people. We may experience a veritable Elizabethan age of Russian literature and art. The expansion of the mental horizon to the bold generation of Shakespeare's day, due to the discoveries of navigators, and the exploits of sailors, cannot be compared with the coming discovery of themselves by the hundred millions of Russia's benighted workfolk.

England's Besetting Sin.

At a recent meeting of the Convention of Free Churches in Cheltenham, London, Dr. Horton spoke on "England's National Sins." According to a report in The London Standard he said among other things:

"Drunkenness was not England's worst vice; nor was gambling. We did gamble, but not more than other nations. And our worst vice was not impurity. We were impure, but not half so impure as almost every other country. But where we stood condemned before God was that we had indulged a pride which was almost colossal, a vanity of self-exaltation, an admiration of earthly things and of material grandeur which must be in the eyes of God not only a subject of ridicule but a matter of inevitable punishment. We sinned by our pride of heart, and could only be forgiven by humbling ourselves in God's presence."

WOMEN WHO WOULD VOTE.

They Do Not All Belong to Organizations That Meddle.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not possible that the army canteen matter, instead of furnishing, as you say, a serious argument against female suffrage, in reality furnishes one in favor of it? If all women were permitted to vote, do you fancy the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Suffrage Association—if that be its name—could continue to pose as spokesmen of American women? To many women, suffrage presents itself merely as a question of abstract right.

If a woman can sue and be sued, own real estate, conduct business; if she is a competent witness in court, and subject to the penalty of the law, it is difficult to see why she should be deprived of the privilege of full citizenship. It is not a question of morals, but of logic. No woman of common sense fancies that female suffrage will purify politics or reform the world. Male suffrage does not. Thousands of women believe in their right to vote, but object most heartily to the vain imaginings, the vaporings, the narrowness, and the ignorance of the women who damand suffrage on sentimental grounds.

One cannot announce one's belief in the right of women to vote without being expected to indorse the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, the White Ribbon movement, orthodox Protestantism, industrial equality of the sexes, and dear alone knows what else. A mere expression of doubt as to this purifying influence of women in politics, and such balderdash, bars one from any suffrage organization. And the infinitesimal minority of sentimentalists continues to meddle in public affairs in a way that would be unthinkable if all women voted.

There is no reason except a sentimental one why women should not vote. There is every reason why they should. Let us wear tha yashmak and be done with it, or let us be citizens. Let tha shrieks of the escaped few be drowned in the matter-of-course murmur of the emancipated many. And let us be delivered from the spectacle of the unyashmaked minority who sit on the harem walls and scream that as they are, so are we all.

Banish Factories to the Suburbs.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I can fully indorse the remarks of "Broadway" as to the increasing number of factories and workshops in that thoroughfare below Fourteenth Street, and the obstruction offered to pedestrians through the hundreds of employes emitted therefrom on the sidewalk during the dinner hour. Twenty years ago Broadway, from Grace Church to the Post Office, was the main artery of traffic, and one of the principal shopping districts also. Now with the advent of the loft building and the skyscraper it has become impassable at midday, particularly at Tenth and Twelfth Streets, where one has to plow one's way through a dense mass of people, who will not budge an inch if they can help it even at the approach of women.

I am afraid the remedy proposed by your correspondent, namely, the creation of innumerable roof gardens, would only partially meet the case, though it would certainly be a vast improvement on present conditions. It seems to me the municipality should take the matter in hand in a strenuous manner and enforce a law banishing all factories per se which employ more than forty or fifty hands to the suburbs, on sanitary grounds, as well as for the convenience of the public in general and for the relief of the rapid transit problem.

I do not know whether such a law operates in London, a city with which I am tolerably familiar; probably the prohibition of the loft building renders such a measure there unnecessary, but certainly neither in Oxford Street, Cannon Street, nor even Cheapside do such intolerable dead-locks occur as here in New York City. As "Broadway" further points out, Fifth Avenue is now following suit, and the putting up of loft buildings for the production of silk, woolen, and linen articles, fur goods, pillow shams, &c., proceeds galore.

Wants Policy Holders to Organize.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Granting that one or one hundred policy holders are helpless to influence the control or management of life insurance companies, the case is quite otherwise with one hundred thousand policy holders. Such an organization the companies will hear and heed and fear, and its influence for good will be boundless. It is safe to say that had such an organization existed during the past decade, the dark shadow which now blots our monumental companies would have been avoided. But their need was not recognized. This excuse no longer exists, and it is gratifying to know that a strong movement in this direction is assuming form and substance. Every policy holder should give it encouragement.

Mikado and Divine Right.

From The London Saturday Review.

The Japanese conception of the Mikado's functions resembles much more the Roman Catholic belief in the inerrancy of the head of the Church than anything which has had vogue in European politics. No upholders of the divine right of temporal sovereigns have understood it as conferring such divinely directed wisdom as would insure the infallibility of those sovereigns' acts of state as the Roman Church has claimed for the ecclesiastical acts of the Pope, its head. But the Japanese conception of the Mikado is even a stronger instance of the belief in a personality on earth who is representative of celestial power. Amid all the changes which have come over Japan since 1868, when the position of the Mikado in the State was settled with many of the accessories of modern European constitutionalism, the religious view of the Mikado has remained what it was in Shintoism, the original element which has become so strangely intermingled with Buddhism, Confucianism, and several other philosophical or ethical systems. In that religion Japan is the country of the gods; the Mikado is the direct descendant and actual representative of the Sun goddess; and the whole duty of a good Japanese consists in obeying without question the commands of the Mikado. He unites the spiritual and the temporal functions therefore in a manner to which Europe offers no parallel. His virtues and those of his ancestors have no points of comparison with what we understand by the virtues of a sovereign and his ancestors.

A Noble Feeling.

From The Boston Globe.

"If all the mints in the United States began to coin to-day, and kept it up at the rate at which they have worked since, 1792, making double eagles, eagles, half eagles, quarter eagles, silver dollars, halves, quarters, dimes, nickels, and pennies, they would complete $1,000,000,000 on Aug. 20, 2016, A. INFANT INTUITION.

When Ma put on our boy's fust pants
I vow, you'd oughter seed
How that skeered infant alunk around,
An' sorter hawed an' geed,
As though, in spite of all our talk
That he was growin' old,

At what them clothes foretold.

It warn't no use ter tell that child
That he was most a man,
An' that some day he'd be like Dad,
A drivin' of a span.
He jest contin'ed, stubborn like,
Ter alink an' make a fuss,
As though his little heart was full
Of shame or somethin' wuss.

An', come ter think, 'tain't re'lly strange
Ha took ter pants so slow,
An' sorter hated like ter leave
Thet he was bound ter grow.
I reckon somewheres in his soul
He had ther feelin' strong,
Thet babes is always sweet an' right
While men is mostly wrong.

ECLIPSE PHOTOGRAPHS MAY SHOW NEW PLANET

Astronomers Hope for Great Results from Their Work.

EGYPTIAN CONDITIONS IDEAL

LONDON, Sept. 23.—The Times to-day publishes the following letter from its correspondent with the eclipse expedition at Assuan, Egypt:

It has already been recorded in these columns that the weather on Aug. 30 left nothing to be desired, and that the eclipse operations were successfully carried out. More could not be said until the photographs obtained had been developed, and this requires time, since it is important to develop the plates under the best possible conditions, and to learn any lessons that may be taught by the earlier plates before proceeding to the others.

The American expedition alone developed plates on the spot, for the Russians are carrying their plates to St. Petersburg, in order to secure similar conditions for them with others taken in Spain, and the British expeditions had the offer of the luxury of the spacious dark rooms of the Survey Department in Cairo, with a temperature some 20 degrees Fahrenheit lower than at Assuan.

In electing to complete his work on the spot Prof. Hussey was following the lines of a prearranged programme which he carried through with conspicuous success. At Assuan he felt constrained to develop his plates in the coolest hours of the night, which restricted not only the time for work, but the facilities for his own sleep, he was hampered by various accidents, such as the non-arrival of a freight train and a consequent failure in the supply of ice (without abundance of which developing was, of course, impossible) and the anomalous behavior of some of the chemicals at high temperatures. But he conquered all these difficulties, and is able to report all the plates as satisfactory, with perhaps one exception—that on one plate there are two mysterious markings which spoil a portion of it. But it is scarcely to be wondered at that among a number of plates one should go wrong.

It cannot be denied that the value of these results has been seriously diminished by the failure to obtain others in Labrador for comparison. The possibility of detecting any gradual change in the corona is once again deferred, and the deferment is the more to be regretted because a good opportunity for a crucial experiment does not occur at every eclipse and because excellent preparations had been made for making the most of the present one. But these preparations were made with eyes fully open to the large risk of failure; success would have been very welcome if it had crowned the efforts, but it was realized beforehand that this possibility was only a remote one.

Hope to Compare Plates.

We have still to learn exactly how serious were the "light clouds" reported from Spain. If they were really "light," there is still a fair chance that an intramercurial planet may be found on both the Spanish and the Egyptian plates, and that the change of place in the interval may tell us something of its orbit, perhaps enough to recover it subsequently. If, however, the clouds in Spain were sufficient to obscure the fainter stars, the Assuan plates alone may show a strange object, which will henceforward be known to exist, but which must be rediscovered before any orbit can be computed for it. A third possibility, which many will think by far the most likely, is, of course, that nothing beyond known stars should be traceable on any of the plates, but until they are carefully examined we cannot say what the fates may have in store.

The plates of the British expedition are, with one distressing exception, quite satisfactory. A considerable amount of corona is shown on them, and the method of obtaining pictures in polarized light by reflection from the face of a glass prism was very successful, strong polarization being obvious to a mere glance when these pictures are compared with the ordinary ones; and, if a picture polarized in a horizontal plane is compared with one polarized in a vertical plane, the difference is naturally enhanced. It cannot be doubted that the measurement of these plates will yield results of great value.

The disappointment has to do with the results from Mr. Reynolds's great telescope. It is impossible to say what these would have been in the ordinary course, for they are obscured by an unexpected phenomenon. The plates give a faithful picture of the wood of which the plateholders are made. Such an occurrence is not altogether new. For instance, in his return from the eclipse of 1898 in India, Dr. Copeland, the Astronomer Royal for Scotland, found his plates marked in this way. He had brought them home to develop, and it was thought that the length of time they had been in the slides—several weeks—was mainly responsible for the annoying results. But in the present case the plate was in the slide for only three days, and subsequent experiments showed that the effect was produced in a few hours.

Dr. Copeland's phrase in his report is that "the photographs are much disfigured by an exhalation thrown off by the bass wood of which the plateholders are made, which has caused the grain of the wood to print itself in broad streaks on the picture." Since then the phenomena of radio-activity have attracted attention, and it seems probable that we may class the phenomena under this head. They are, for instance, independent of any exposure of the slide to light, for Mr. Kearney put a plate in one of the holders and locked it in a cupboard in the dark room at the Survey Office, with the result that on development after one day the wood marks were plainly shown. We must investigate the matter fully in order to avoid repetitions of the disaster.

Meanwhile we must bear with such fortitude as we can the loss of results which might have been of great interest, and to obtain which certainly a great deal of trouble had been taken, not only by Mr. Reynolds himself, but by many who had assisted him. The great telescope (120 feet long) was erected across a sunk garden at the railway station, thus giving it an effective height of eight feet above the ground. It arrived only four days before the eclipse, and, though this period would in the ordinary course have been sufficient for mounting the telescope, it was virtually cut down to a fraction of itself by the discovery that, owing to the low altitude of the sun, a modification was required in the mounting.

Considerable exertions were necessary on the part of Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Keeling of the Survey Department to get the work completed in time, but it was completed; the two large mirrors were erected and joined up by a long canvas tube supported on poles, and by the kindness of the local fire brigade the ground was flooded for the day of eclipse to check radiation effects. All that could be done in the time was done, and to anticipate a possible criticism it may be added that the plate holders were ordered by Mr. Reynolds from a firm of great experience, and were so beautifully made as to excite the admiration of all who saw them.

The British party had also arranged a programme in concert with observers in Labrador, though with much smaller instruments than the 40-foot telescopes of the American parties. The plates at Assuan were taken by Mr. R. T. Günther, and four of them have proved very successful, though their main purpose is now defeated by the Labrador clouds.

Americans' Observations.

To the American party belongs the credit of making some interesting observations on the mysterious "shadow bands" which appear at the beginning and end of totality. The observations of these bands hitherto have been very contradictory in appearance. Observers agree that the bands are in motion, but their estimates of the velocity and direction of the motion differ wildly, one comparing the velocity to that of a sharp walk and another to that of an express train. At Assuan the velocity was quite moderate, and its direction was the same before and after totality. Moreover, it was seen to agree with that of the wind; and if this suggested connection with the wind (which has already been suspected) is confirmed, it is easy to see how previous apparently contradictory observations may be reconciled.

There was almost a dead calm at Assuan, which would account for the slow movement of the bands; whereas there is usually a fairly strong wind at a total eclipse well known under the name of an "eclipse wind," and this would explain the high velocities elsewhere recorded. The "eclipse wind" is, no doubt, connected with the fall of temperature at places on which the moon's shadow falls, (at Assuan the fall was very slight indeed,) and has been observed to change rapidly in direction, as we should naturally expect from the swift movement of the cooled area. Hence, we should be prepared for apparent anomalies in the movements of the shadow bands if they depend on this wind. Whether the observed anomalies will prove, on examination, to be reconciliable with this view we have, however, yet to learn. There is, in fact, almost everything still to be done to make proper use of the material collected at the eclipse, and its actual value cannot be assessed for some months to come, perhaps even years.

A few more words may be added on incidents of the expeditions not directly concerned with the main object. A party of astronomers could scarcely visit Egypt without being strongly impressed with the facilities for astronomical work. To the American party, accustomed to the clear Californian skies, the climate of Egypt, and even the overhead sun and planets, were not so strange; but in those who have struggled with the uncertainties of English weather and in Russians who barely see the sun above the horizon in the Winter or the full moon in Summer, experience of Egypt is apt to rouse feelings of wonder, if not of envy. Cannot a better use be made of these fine opportunities for astronomical work?

Fortunately, one person at least has resolved that a beginning shall be made towards an affirmative answer to this question. Mr. Reynolds has presented to the Helaan Observatory a large reflecting telescope, the 30-inch mirror of which was made by the late Dr. Common and the mounting by himself. With this instrument it will be possible to photograph many nebulae which are too far south for our northern observatories; and this is the first piece of work to be undertaken. Mr. Reynolds is also leaving his large coelostat in Egypt, partly with a view to using it himself at some future time, partly with a generous view to the convenience of others.

For its existence makes it possible to mount any telescope up to a considerable size, with very little trouble; and it may well be that astronomers may find it worth while to make expeditions to this fine climate, where it is possible to count upon completing a definite piece of work within a definite time. The facilities for physical researches which require uniform temperature are also worthy of record. Dr. Dubinski found a daily range of only 1 degree Fahrenheit in the tomb put at his disposal. Here are ready-made laboratories which could not be obtained elsewhere without large expenditure.

New Use for Great Pyramid.

But we heard of projects of other kinds, and perhaps of greater interest to those who are not astronomers. One of them is that for determining the mass of the earth by comparison with that of the Great Pyramid. More than half a century ago pendulums were swung, under Airy's direction, at the top and bottom of the Harton coal pit. The comparison of their times of swing told us how heavy the whole earth was compared with the outermost thin shell, of thickness equal to the depth of the pit; and since geologists were able to give a fair estimate of the weight of this shell of surface rock, the weight of the whole earth could be inferred.

Similarly, pendulums swung at the apex of the pyramid, and in the chambers at its centre and base, will give a good comparison of the weight of the earth with that of the pyramid, and we can probably estimate the weight of the pyramid more accurately than that of the thin shell which Airy used as an intermediary. Moreover, the pyramid can be used in a different way; latitude observations taken to the north and south of it will give, on comparison, the effect of its attraction on the plumb-bob, compared with that of the earth, and this independent method would afford a complete check on the pendulum observations. The outcome of these investigations, which the Survey Department contemplate undertaking within the next year, will be undoubtedly of the greatest interest and importance.

Such work lies somewhat apart from the exploring and excavation work usually associated with Egypt. But the special interests of one member of the expedition brought him into contact with a line of research of a more familiar type, with yet a touch of novelty which renders it worthy of record. Mr. R. T. Günther has successfully explored, in the neighborhood of Naples, a submerged city. Taking soundings from a boat he finds abrupt changes of depth, which enabled him to infer the shape and height of a submerged building; and in this way he has gradually mapped out an important city, perhaps the Palaeopolis which supplied by antithesis a name for the Neapolis we know.

He had heard that there were similar opportunities for research at Alexandria, and took the opportunity of visiting that city to learn what he could on the subject. He finds that the evidence for subsidence of the land since the Ptolemaic epoch is very considerable; for in many localities, both in the direction of Meks and of Aboukir, traces of ancient buildings and excavations are to be seen, wholly or partially submerged. Along the sea front of the necropolis to the west of the town a flat shelf of calcareous rock lies awash at the foot of the low cliffs. Several graves hewn in this rock shelf are visible below the surface of the water, and there may be other burial chambers filled with sand at a still lower level. At other spots the rocks show the curious winding artificial tunnels, or cuniculi, which have already been described by Mr. Günther as existing in several submerged foundations along the Neapolitan shore.

Further out to sea the waves break over the harbor works of the ancient port of Alexandria. Not only is there much work to be done in mapping and recording these last vestiges of sunken Alexandria, but the work should be done speedily. Already the foundations of the palaces of the Ptolemies have been lost to archaeologists, since a zealous municipality has caused them to be buried under the new road and massive concrete seawall which are now nearing completion. The stone coping of the wall is hewn from the large blocks of the ancient amphitheatre, and the modern quays and harbor works are said to rest upon a foundation of the drums of granite columns cast like refuse into the sea.

But, happily for the history of the past, not all excavation is being conducted with the same disregard of antiquarian interests. Prof. E. Breccia, the able Curator of the Graeco-Roman Museum at Alexandria, is excavating in more than one locality, not only with energy, but in the true scientific spirit. At Kom-es-Shugafa, in ancient Rhacotis, a determined effort is being made to clear the lowest galleries of the Graeco-Egyptian catacombs of the water which has hitherto prevented further investigation. These flooded sepulchral chambers afford perhaps the most convincing proof of the alteration of land level; and it is to be hoped that those who are endeavoring to pump them dry with a powerful rotary pump driven by electricity may be rewarded by a rich find of objects of ancient art.

In Egypt the old and the new meet; this question of the subsidence of the land, which thus so nearly concerns the archaeologist, is also of primary importance in the modern problem of irrigation, and will absorb a large part of the energy of the Survey Department in the near future. Egypt is especially a land where the man of science and the archaeologist may work side by side, not only with mutual hindrance, but with mutual benefit. Of the two the former has been much the slower to realize his opportunities, but we may hope that he is at last being awakened to them.

SPECIAL DELIVERY MAIL KEEPS ONE OFFICE BUSY

Station E Has More of This Matter Than Any Other in Country.

CAN BEAT THE TELEGRAPH

Supt. Silsbee Declares That is Why He Has So Many Patrons—Theatres Use Service.

Nearly 10,000 special delivery letters are received and sent out every week at Station E, the branch Post Office in Thirty-second Street, near Sixth Avenue, which does the largest business in this class of mail of any station in the country.

The business is about equally divided between incoming and outgoing mail, the daily average of letters being nearly 700 in each direction. The services of forty substitute carriers as messengers are required every day to make the deliveries in that district. Every messenger uses the bicycle for trips of any considerable distance.

The section which Station E covers is the largest below the Harlem River. In it are nearly all the big hotels, theatres, theatrical agencies, retail dry goods houses, and other classes of business which use this class of delivery to a very large extent. Except for a square in the northeast corner of the district, between Twentieth and Twenty-seventh Streets and Fifth and Sixth Avenues, included in the Madison Square Branch, Station E takes in the territory bounded by Twentieth and Forty-fourth Streets, Fifth Avenue and the North River.

The handling of special delivery mail is an interesting part of the day's enormous business in this station. John D. Silsbee, who has been thirty years in the service of the Government and thirteen in Station E, is the Superintendent, and it is due to the system he has introduced that so large a revenue comes from the special delivery service at his office.

The special delivery in the district starts at 8 o'clock in the morning and continues until 11 o'clock at night. At no time is the interval between deliveries greater than half an hour, and often, in the rush of the holiday season, when there are as many as 1,500 special delivery letters a day in each direction, deliveries are made every ten minutes.

Every package of incoming mail is arranged in the bundles so that the special delivery letters are on top. As soon as the packages are untied these letters are handed to a special clerk, who enters them in a large blotter, divides them into routes, and again enters them in a small book, which the messenger carries and which contains the receipt. When the delivery has been made the name of the recipient is entered in the blotter, so that a full record is kept of every letter.

Not only do the letters intended for special delivery here receive extra attention, but the same care is taken with those for delivery outside the city, which are collected in the area covered by the station. There are twenty-eight collection routes in Station E, and the collections are made at frequent intervals.

As soon as the collectors dump their bags full of mail on the sorting tables, a line of clerks begin to sort out the city from the out-of-town mail. As soon as a special delivery letter appears, it is handed over to a clerk detailed to look after this class of mail, and, instead of taking the regular course, the special letter is canceled and hurried over to the outgoing mail sorters.

As in case with the incoming mail, the special delivery letters are tied on top of the bundles and are instantly recognized at their point of destination. This special attention to the outgoing mail often means that a letter will catch a train leaving hours before that on which the regular class of mail collected at the same time is to leave.

In the morning hours most of the mail delivered in the city of the special delivery class comes from out of town, while in the afternoon and evening it is largely local. Explaining this Supt. Silsbee said:

"Persons arriving in the city and stopping at the big hotels in our district are anxious to let their folks at home know of their arrival as soon as possible, and use this means, which is much cheaper than telegraphing and often as speedy. Hundreds of special delivery letters come in every day for the large dry goods houses that do a mail order business and where the delivery of goods is to be rushed. The theatres get a generous part of the mail as well, persons in the city often sending money in these letters to reserve seats. Of course a large part of the special mail is to private persons.

"A special delivery stamp on a letter means, not only that it will be delivered quickly, but that a separate record of it will be kept, and that in case of accident it can easily be traced. It is a separate branch of the service that calls for particular attention and keeps quite a little army of men busy looking after the details."

BISHOP HERE TO MAKE PEACE.

And an A. M. E. Church That Has Made Trouble Is Joyful.

Bishop Benjamin T. Tanner of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, who was sent to this city to attempt to settle the troubles which sprang up in the leading African Methodist Episcopal Churches of Manhattan and Brooklyn after Bishop Arnett's appointment of Dr. S. Timothy Tice, a negro Democratic leader, as Presiding Elder over the churches of the State, preached yesterday morning and last night in the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church in West Twenty-fifth Street. This church has been one of the most stubborn in its opposition to Dr. Tice, and the officers of the church threatened to take it out of the convention unless Dr. Tice was removed as Presiding Elder.

Dr. T. Wellington Henderson is the pastor of the church, and Elder Tice has preferred charges against him to Bishop Tanner and asks for his suspension.

Bishop Tanner, who is acting in place of Bishop Arnett, who is very ill at his home in Ohio as a result of the church troubles, was well received by a large congregation at the church yesterday.

For the time at least church troubles were forgotten, and in the singing of many old-fashioned Methodist hymns all shouted and shook hands with one another. The Bishop, who is aged, was as happy as the rest, and an old-time Methodist love feast was held. In his sermon the Bishop told those present that "extraordinary trials come to every church.

"But these are simply to try you," said the Bishop, "and when they come you don't want to argue with flesh and blood, but must wait for the day of the power of God.

"Be careful how you use your tongue, for the tongue defileth the whole body and sets everything on fire. It is an unruly evil filled with poison."

After the services the officers and members of the church gathered about the altar and shook the Bishop's hand heartily.

MEXICAN TEMPLARS ANGRY.

Intrusion of American Knights Resented—Protest to be Made.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—Grand Master Juan Pablo Soto of the Mexican Knights Templars, asserts that he will protest to the proper authority against the establishment of a foreign commandery in this city. He declares that it is absurd for the new commandery to say it will not recognize the rights of the Mexican Knights, of whom there are now 10,000, with commanderies scattered all over the republic.

Grand Master Soto says he is awaiting authorization from the Supreme Council of Mexico to enter his protest in due and legal form against the intrusion of the American Knights Templars into Mexico without permission from the Grand Encampment here.

PARKHURST PRAYS FOR CITY.

Does Not Mention Politics, However, in His First Fall Sermon.

Rev. Dr. Charles M. Parkhurst preached yesterday morning at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church for the first time since his return from his vacation abroad. He made no reference to political matters in his sermon, but in his invocation he prayer for the city authorities in general and the judiciary, saying:

"Endue with moral purpose that branch of our Municipal Government that is set apart for the enforcement of law and the arrest of crime, that thus life and property may be more safe in our midst and the moral sense of the community cease to be blunted by constant familiarity with laws transgressed and transgression unavenged.

"Guide by Thine own counsels the Chief Magistrate of this city. Let him be always sensible of the vast opportunities of service to the public involved in so large a position of influence and power. And in every movement of our citizens to find some one to fill so responsible a place, may they be guided to the selection of one who shall be after Thine own heart, one whom Thou canst use to the furtherance of Thine own purposes—keen in discernment, temperate in judgment, self-controlled in action; one who is a profound believer in Thee and Thy righteousness, who will use the opportunities of his office to encourage what is right, to embarrass crimes, whether of high or low degree, and to make what is eternally just and holy to be a realized factor in individual and civic life."

Dr. Parkhurst also asked that the Nation be restrained from "being made foolishly conceited by the extent of our territory or by the abundance of our material prosperity." He continued:

"Enrich with special wisdom our Chief Magistrate. Continue to give him health and strength. Sustain him in all his largeness and nobility of purpose, and keep continually alive in him a sense of responsibility to Thee, whose confessed instrument he is, to the people of whom he has been chosen as the representative and servant, and to the future to which the years of his magistracy are making so generous a contribution."

DR. TUPPER IN NEW PULPIT.

The Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper, for the last nine years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Philadelphia, began yesterday his pastorate of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church. Dr. Tupper's predecessor was the Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer, who died suddenly while on a vacation trip to Europe last year.

Dr. Tupper outlined to a congregation comfortably filling the big auditorium at the morning service what would constitute the religious platform of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church during his pastorate. Among other things, he said:

"Not long ago a baseball player of National renown was expelled from his club. To his query as to what the trouble was he was told that the charge against him was indifference to the game. Indifference is the charge to be laid against a vast number of people and against a vast number of congregations. There must be not only loyalty to God, but to the church.

"The most powerful agency in the world to-day is co-operation. Germany, united by Bismarck, is a great power; the United States, held together after the civil war and by it, is what it is because of that unity. Trusts may be abused, but they have the one cardinal principle of co-operation and consolidation, which is so fine an example of beautiful and interested loyalty.

"Into the church must be put some of the enthusiasm, shall we say the vim, which the business man puts into his business, the politician into politics, and the society woman into society."

PLENTY OF COLLEGES.

And Too Little Money for Evangelization, Mr. Simpson Says.

The opening services of the annual convention of the Christian and Missionary Alliance were held yesterday at the Gospel Tabernacle, Eighth Avenue and Forty-fourth Street. The services lasted practically all day. There was a large congregation.

The opening sermon of the convention was preached by the Rev. A. B. Simpson. He attacked those who say that the Bible must not be read without the guidance of a critic, and those who "are leaping over the wall and saving, as they declare, many miles of the road by saying that they will be saved by His life and not by His death." He continued:

"Then men try to leave out the supernatural and preach humanity. Humanity spends enough in public libraries to evangelize the world in ten years; humanity places the Sunday newspaper in place of church. ["God help us!" from the congregation.] Humanity talks of imitating Christ and leaves out the Holy Ghost. Many waste their lives in social reform, in building schools, and so on, which are good, but not the best, and will not help a little bit in fighting sin."

Later Mr. Simpson said:

"There are plenty of people to endow colleges to undermine God's word and so few to build up the means of the healing of the nations. There are plenty of people to supply the funds for the encouragement of the arts or the sciences, but so few to apply the balm to the great sores of the world."

The convention will last until next Monday.

LITTLE CHURCH'S 57TH YEAR.

Bust Unveiled of Its Founder, the Rev. George Hendrick Houghton.

Five thousand people visited the "Little Church Around the Corner," in Twenty-ninth Street, near Fifth Avenue, yesterday. It was the fifty-seventh anniversary of the founding of the church by the Rev. George Hendrick Houghton, and a bust of him was unveiled.

There were three services in the morning. The Rev. Dean Robbins of the General Theological Seminary preached the dedication sermon, taking for his subject "Mammon Up to Date." He said:

"As I look back upon the work that has been done by the founder of this church and of those that have followed him, I realize more and more what it means when I hear of the Mammon of modern times in the world of churches. The trouble with not only the congregations of our large cities, but with the preachers, is that they also follow Mammon to such an extent that although it may not be spoken of, down in the innermost recesses of the majority of the people's heart that listen to them they are more than ashamed of themselves."

The bust that was unveiled was modeled by A. Weinert, who took particular pains to bring out the kindly lines that furrowed the venerable preacher's face. It was cast in the foundry of John Williams.

The "Little Church" has undergone a thorough renovating during the Summer.

MAY LOWER DUTY ON CORN.

Mexican Finance Department Investigating High Prices.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 1.—The Department of Finance is investigating alleged abuses in the rise in the price of corn, which is the basis of diet of the poorer classes. One reason popularly given for the increased prices is that corn has risen in sympathy with wheat, which this year shows a short crop. Another theory is that corn is largely in the hands of large speculators.

Should it prove that corn is likely for any cause to remain at the present high price, it is quite probable that the duties will be abated on American corn, allowing heavy shipments into this country.

20-STORY NEW HOTEL READY FOR BUSINESS

Mrs. Hanna, Widow of the Senator, First Guest at the Gotham.

PLATT FAMILY THERE, TOO

The St. Regis's Near Neighbor Has No Bar—Prices a la Carte on the Waldorf and Holland Plan.

The new twenty-story Hotel Gotham, at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, directly opposite the Hotel St. Regis, will open for guests this morning. A favored few were admitted last night to apartments already reserved for them.

The very first name inscribed on the register was that of Mrs. M. A. Hanna, widow of Senator Hanna, and thereby hangs a story. Frank V. Bennett, the Gotham's lessee was for twenty-five years associated with T. E. Roessle in the management of the Arlington Hotel, Washington. Senator Hanna always stayed at the Arlington and took a great interest in Mr. Bennett. They became fast friends and when the opportunity to get the Gotham came Mr. Bennett's way—the deal was closed long before the building was completed—it was the Senator's aid that made it possible for him to seize it.

There is an excellent portrait of Senator Hanna in the foyer of the Gotham, and when Mrs. Hanna appeared as the first guest it was regarded as a good omen.

Senator T. C. Platt, with Mrs. Platt, her daughter, Miss Louise Snow, and her daughter's fiancée, Mr. Carmody, were among the early arrivals. Senator Platt is also one of Mr. Bennett's old Washington friends.

It is estimated that strike delays increased the cost of the Gotham at least $250,000. Sam Parks met his Waterloo when he attempted to interfere with its builders, and for this reason alone the structure was talked of while it was yet far from finished.

Then there was trouble over its bar. Because there is a church across the street, the sale of liquors within the hotel is prohibited by law. The hardest kind of fight was made to have the restriction removed, but it failed.

Downstairs, to the right of the office, is a large, handsomely decorated room. A bar is in place, and every surrounding could easily be made to breathe conviviality, but this room is deserted.

"We are in the hotel business," said Mr. Bennett yesterday, "and if our guests ask us for anything we don't happen to have, there is nothing to prevent us from sending out and getting it. Suppose a man likes wine with his dinner, or a cocktail before it. Is there any law to stop us from getting it for him? Well, rather think not."

The furnishings of the Gotham, while extremely rich, are far from garish. There is not the slightest striving after gaudy effects, the whole atmosphere being one of good taste. The main dining room, on the ground floor, is designed in the Italian style. The color scheme is of red and dark green, and the massive pillars supporting the ornamented ceiling are a part of the general effect of stateliness.

There are two floors under ground. The kitchen and commissary department is underneath the dining room. Gaston Domergue, formerly of Delmonico's, presides over the kitchen. He has a force of twenty-eight cooks. James J. Nolan, for years chef at the Arlington, is commissary general. The hotel has about 300 employes.

There are 400 sleeping rooms, single and en suite. The rooms opening on Fifth Avenue have already been spoken for. The prices range from $4 up. On the second floor is a banquet hall and ballroom. The third floor is devoted to private dining rooms. Meals are served a la carte only, and the scale of prices is by no means startling. As Mr. Bennett explained, the standard of prices is about the same as those of the Waldorf-Astoria and the Holland House. Breakfast this morning will be the first meal served.

IBSEN SCARES THE RING.

Citizens' Union Play in Orange, They Fear, Is Going to be Mighty Personal.

Special to The New York Times.

EAST ORANGE, Oct. 1.—Dismay has entered the hearts of the members of the Republican city machine. Alden Freeman, who is seeking to be elected a member of the East Orange City Council on the Citizens' Union ticket, has called in Henrik Ibsen to help him in his fight. East Orange ring politicians are not "strong" on Ibsen. Some others in East Orange aren't either; last week one of the local newspapers gravely announced that Mr. Freeman would present the play "Henrik Ibson: An Enemy of Society." The play Mr. Freeman has chosen to illustrate his points is "An Enemy of Society," and the entire five acts will be relentlessly given.

The prospectus which Mr. Freeman has sent broadcast through the Oranges is not worded so as to reassure the ring politicians. It is headed with an adapted quotation from "Hamlet" which reads as follows:

"The play's the thing wherein to catch the conscience and the Ring."

The play, which depicts the unhappy fate of a man who undertook to expose the duplicity of a big corporation and the methods it employed to hoodwink the people with the collusion of their Government, Mr. Freeman expects, will in a measure reflect the conditions in East Orange. In his prospectus Mr. Freeman says that those who go to see the play will undoubtedly be able to pick out characters which correspond to men in East Orange public life. It is this which has aroused apprehension in the breasts of local office holders.

With the courtesy which has marked all his political work, Mr. Freeman has sent to various city officials free tickets to the show. He has received replies from some of these officials, who express at the same time their appreciation of Mr. Freeman's courtesy and the hope that they will not be "drawn into the play."

"I know the feller that wrote that play," said a ring politician to-day. "His name is Gibson, Harry Gibson, and he lives in Jersey City. He's one of those particularly bright young men who think he can hand out a jolly by calling himself Henrik Ibsen. I know all about him. He used to work on one of the Newark papers, and for a while he done society down to the Summer resorts. This man Freeman has got so bold he thinks he can spring near anything he likes on us. If this here play of his attacks us you can say he'll be persecuted to the full extent of the law."

If the law won't help, the ring may appeal to G. Bernard Shaw.

Two Hurt in Train Collision.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 1.—In a bad freight wreck just above the junction of the Northampton Division and the main line of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad to-day, Engineer James Dusken had both ankles fractured and Brakeman Thomas Bresnahan was hurt by being thrown from the caboose. The accident was caused by one freight train running into the rear of another.

William R. Travers Buried.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 1.—The body of William R. Travers of New York, who committed suicide in that city on Friday last, was brought here this afternoon and interred in the family lot in Island Cemetery. The services at the grave consisted only of a reading by the Rev. Emery H. Porter, rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church. The body was accompanied by a sister of the deceased, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, her husband, Representative Wadsworth, and J. Borden Harriman.

THE SPECULATIVE SITUATION.

The bull following has had the faith to take a great deal for granted in the last few weeks, and its confidence not only in the ultimate outcome of things, but in the immediate position of the stock market, remains unshaken. It has trusted, apparently, to the resourcefulness of its leaders to maintain a bank surplus, and this trust was very unexpectedly rewarded on Saturday, when, instead of reporting an impairment of the surplus reserve fund such as seemed inevitable from what was known of the week's movements of money, the banks reported actually an increase of cash holdings and an addition of more than $2,000,000 to surplus reserve. It was without question the most bewildering bank statement that has yet appeared in Wall Street, and was received with extreme skepticism in bearish quarters, but those who are committed to the bull side of the market are satisfied to take things as they seem. They have, at least, profited more by having faith than others have by lacking it, and so long as they have the actual advantage in the market the other side is welcome to its theories. This was the situation at the close of last week.

The effect of an advance of 1 per cent. in the Bank of England's discount rate on Thursday and a 7 per cent. rate for call money here on Friday was merely to check speculative activity on the bull side of the stock market. The market was narrow, uninteresting, and stupid, but not weak. The aggressive strength last week was confined to a few stocks. Transactions exceeded 100,000 shares in only nine issues, and their net changes for the week are shown in the following table:

Stock.	Net Change for the Week. Advance.	Decline.
Amalgamated Copper	1⅝	..
Brooklyn Rapid Transit	1⅞	..
St. Paul	..	1
Erie common	..	¾
Pennsylvania	..	½
Reading common	Unchanged
Southern Pacific	1½	..
Union Pacific	..	⅛
Steel common	¼	..

The only active stocks, therefore, in which aggressive strength appeared were Amalgamated Copper, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, and Southern Pacific. The strength of Amalgamated Copper was due to special influences and special operations. During the week there was an advance in the price of copper metal, the dividend was increased on Anaconda, and the time is now approaching for action on the Amalgamated Copper dividend, which Wall Street believes will be increased to the rate of 6 per cent. The strength of Brooklyn Rapid Transit also was due to special operations. These did not include the traction group, but converged entirely upon Brooklyn Rapid Transit. Metropolitan Street Railway and Metropolitan Securities closed at fractional net declines for the week. The bull pool in Southern Pacific made headway with that stock independently of Union Pacific, which was inclined throughout the week to be reactionary, and ended with a small net decline, as compared with Southern Pacific's advance of 1½ per cent. Mr. Keene was understood to be active both in Brooklyn Rapid Transit and Southern Pacific. In the latter he had the co-operation of several very aggressive professional traders. The movement in Southern Pacific was to some extent discredited because it was based so largely on rumors of an early dividend on the stock, whereas the best information is that dividends will not be begun until next year. The characteristics of the recent speculation in Southern Pacific have been highly professional.

Several of the high-priced railroad stocks which gained undue prominence in the preceding week through the Western crowd, notably St. Paul, Louisville and Nashville, and Atlantic Coast Line, fell back sharply last week. The only stock of the high-priced group which made a further notable advance last week was Illinois Central, which ended with a net gain of 1¾ per cent. New York, New Haven and Hartford and Delaware and Hudson, both of which had been hid up in the preceding week, as part of a general demonstration in high-priced railroad issues, closed at net declines of 3 per cent. each for last week.

There has been constant though quiet selling pressure upon St. Paul stock, and brokers report a steady demand for it in the loan market. This demand appears in the loan crowd on the Stock Exchange, and also privately. The impression is that well-informed holders have been selling the stock on this level against their prospective proportion of new stock to be issued. Notwithstanding technical denials and evasive statements, it is believed by persons who are seldom mistaken in such matters that the St. Paul not only will build to the Pacific Coast, but has already committed itself to that project by certain definite steps.

The distinctly popular feature of the stock market continues to be the pronounced strength of the United States Steel shares, especially Steel common, which sold last week at 38½, this quotation being an eighth higher than the highest price previously recorded this year. The stock closed at a net advance of ¼ per cent., after transactions for the week amounting to nearly 300,000 shares. Steel common was the leader of the market in point of activity. The next most active issue was Union Pacific, which, as we have seen, closed at a fractional net decline for the week. Speculative interest in the United States Steel shares now converges entirely upon the common stock. Transactions in the preferred stock last week amounted to fewer than 80,000 shares. The bull speculation in Steel common is as well advised as such a movement can possibly be. The Morgan following, both here and abroad, is very bullish on the stock, and has been buying it heavily at current quotations.

Much is expected of certain announcements soon to be made under Morgan-Hill auspices. One will set forth a plan of readjustment for the Hill stocks, whereby they will gain greater speculative latitude in the market. At about the same time, it is believed, the deal whereby the United States Steel Corporation will take over the Great Northern ore properties will be announced. This transaction is expected to be very bullish on Steel common. That is the construction, at least, which will be placed upon it officially.

The present general level of prices is the highest that has ever been reached. The public is not trading. Commission houses are carrying very few stocks. There must be an enormous accumulation of stocks in the hands of powerful speculative and financial interests. Speculators who are carrying large lines of high priced stocks believe that the rates now prevailing for call money are only temporary. Some good authorities think differently. The reason that stocks do not come upon the market when prices recede a little or when there is a flurry in money is that they are held by persons who are able to protect them. It would take a break of perhaps five points to disturb those who have been increasing their long lines in the last few weeks.

The Boston bear crowd has served notice that it will be on top of the market this week. Many are curious to see whether it will be permitted, or perhaps assisted, as on several previous occasions, to make its impression upon prices. Its campaign in the first week of September was brought abruptly to a close, presumably because the opposition was found then to be too powerful. There are still some very strong Wall Street interests that favor lower prices temporarily.

FOOD INSPECTIONS MAKE HEALTH CONTAGIOUS

City's Death Rate Decreased, Dr. Darlington Reports.

INFECTION REDUCED ONE-HALF

Millions of Pounds of Bad Food Condemned in Last Six Months—Births and Marriages Increase.

Dr. Thomas Darlington, President of the Health Board, has submitted to Mayor McClellan his report for the first six months of the year. The Commissioner finds that very gratifying results have followed the extra vigilance in inspecting schools and in the analysis of samples of food and milk in the department's laboratory. The total number of inspections in all branches for the six months was 990,658, as against 790,161 in 1904.

Nearly 60,000 specimens of milk have been examined, and more than 19,000 quarts of adulterated milk destroyed, a large increase over any previous year. In the first six months of 1905 53,000 milk inspections were made, which is about 24,000 more than ever before in the same period. Nearly $10,000 in fines has been collected for the violation of Section 53 of the Sanitary Code, which relates to the adulteration of milk. This amount represents four times more in fines than was ever before collected.

Special attention has been peid to the sources of the milk supply, and inspections have been made over all the large railroads which transport milk. The creameries situated along these roads have been thoroughly examined, and owners and operators have been informed of the changes required by this department to permit the sale of their milk in the City of New York.

More than 4,000,000 pounds of fruit, 7,500,000 pounds of food, and 1,000,000 pounds of meat and fish have been condemned and destroyed, 8,000,000 pounds more than ever before condemned in the same period.

Special efforts, the report says, have been made in the Bronx and Richmond to cere for the water supply and dreinage, and progress has been made in connecting premises with sewers, in filling in wells and cesspools, and in dreining open lots.

There has been a diminution in the number of cases of contagious diseases reported, 17,456 being recorded, against 39,114 for the corresponding period of the previous year.

On March 29 a new procedure was introduced in the system of medical school inspection. Previous work had shown such extensive prevalence of contagious diseases of the eye and skin and defects of vision that it was determined to make a general physical examination of the pupils in several large schools, to ascertain what and how numerous were the morbid conditions among school children, which were likely to affect their future general health and usefulness. This examination was directed especially to the determination of defects of vision, hearing, and of the locomotive apparatus, &c., and the presence of disease of the heart, lung, or nervous system. This examination was made in the case of each child in addition to the examination for contagious disease of the eye and skin and the general contagious diseases.

In the two months while this inspection was in progress 17,825 children were examined. Of this number more than 48 per cent. were found to be in such condition as to require medical attention. To confirm the results of this work a second inspection was made by specially detailed men, which gave a slightly higher percentage than the first inspections. These inspections were largely in the primary department, where such conditions are most remediable and have the most important influence in the physical and mental development of the child.

While the cases of contagious diseases have been fewer, the number of visits to the schools, tenement houses, private houses, &c., have been almost as many as in 1904, the total number being 107,042, as against 203,814 during all of last year.

The registration and sanitary supervision of pulmonary tuberculosis is in a far more satisfactory state than ever before. The number of beds in the institutions of the city available for cases of this disease has been increased. Close relations have been established with the New York State Hospital for incipient tuberculosis at Ray Brook. The work of the Clinic for Tuberculosis has progressed satisfactorily.

Cerebro-spinal meningitis, the report says, again became prevalent in the Winter months of 1905, and a special commission was appointed to take up the consideration of his disease. Investigations led to important results, showing conclusively that this was a communicable disease, and making evident the means by which its prevention could be rendered possible. On April 18, 1905, cerebro-spinal meningitis was declared to be a communicable disease, and since that date isolation of cases, disinfection of rooms, and all other necessary sanitary precautions have been taken with each case, as with other communicable diseases. The results of the commission's investigation emphasized the importance of the prevention of expectoration in public places.

Dr. Darlington's report closes with the announcement that there has been an increase in births and marriages and a decrease in deaths. There were 50,043 births, 20,768 marriages, and 37,969 deaths.

BATTLE OF THE CRATER.

Virginia Confederates Will See It Fought Again In Play.

The battle of the Crater is to be fought over again on the old field at Petersburg, Va. This time it will be a sham fight for the benefit of the Grand Camp of Confederate Veterans of Virginia.

The veterans will be in camp three days, Oct. 25, 26, and 27. The sham battle will be on the 26th. It has been arranged to have it conform as nearly as practicable to the famous battle of July 30, 1864, in which the Confederate earthworks north of the Crater were recaptured by Mahone's brigade with some other commands. There will be a charge of 800 infantry at double-quick, with the "rebel yell," and arms at a trail, over the ground over which Mahone's men made their charge on the morning of the battle, the charging troops not firing a gun until reaching the crest of the hill, but being fired at by the enemy stationed there and along the rim of the Crater.

RIDERS THROWN IN THE PARK.

Three Men Tossed to the Bridle Path by Fractious Steeds.

Three saddle horses ran away in Central Park yesterday, and in each instance the rider was thrown.

R. J. Bockman of 167 West Seventy-ninth Street, was riding along the West Drive, when his horse became frightened at an automobile and pitched him on his head, but he was unhurt.

Stuart R. Choate of 209 West Ninety-seventh Street and R. R. Gillespie of 314 West Eighty-third Street were astride spirited animals on the east bridle road in the afternoon when the horses balked and began to rear and pitch. At Ninetieth Street Choate and Gillespie were thrown, landing in the soft dirt and escaping unhurt. The horses ran as far as 102d Street before they were captured by mounted policemen.

NEW POLICE COURT OPENS.

It Is In the Bronx Near Where There Was a Court 320 Years Ago.

The Eighth District Magistrate's Court was opened yesterday morning in the Masonic Building, Main Street, Westchester, as that section of the Bronx is known. The opening was under the auspices of Magistrate Seward Baker, to whose efforts its establishment is primarily due. Court was then adjourned till Oct. 16, to allow complete furnishings to be put in.

Magistrate Baker was scheduled to sit in the West Side Court, but at the last meeting of the Board of City Magistrates it was agreed to allow him to sit in Westchester for the day.

It was a spick-and-apan courtroom that greeted Magistrate Baker and Magistrate Wahle, President of the board, as they entered, escorted by Clerk Philip Bloch. The two Magistrates went et once to the bench.

"The court will be in order," said Magistrate Wahle. "All be seated." Then, turning to Magistrate Baker, he complimented him on the success of his efforts in getting the court established.

Magistrate Beker replied:

"Magistrate Wahle, I thank you and the Board of Magistrates for the honor conferred upon me in assigning to me the pleasant duty of presiding here.

"In the old town of Westchester there have been many changes during the past 200 years. In the year 1685 this town was first established as a borough, or 'shire,' of the County of Westchester, and eleven years later got a royal cherter as such. Here was established the county seat, and a Court of Sessions, a County Court, and the Court of Oyer and Terminer were established, and continued until 1758, when the Court House was burned. Then the county seat was removed to White Plains, where it has since remained.

"The town had a Meyor and a Common Council, the first Mayor being Caleb Heathcote. In 1785 the township was changed into a town by an act of the Legislature, and remained in that standing until 1895, when by an act of the Legislature it, with the surrounding territory, was annexed to New York and became a part of the Sixth City Magistrate's Court District. Thus for 320 years there has been here a court having criminal jurisdiction."

William Alton of Railroad Avenue was the first prisoner arraigned in the new court. He had been arrested for fighting, but as no one appeared against him he was discharged. He left the court smiling.

YOUNG MOTHER INHALES GAS.

Watchful Husband Saves Pain-Crazed Woman and Her Baby.

Mrs. Julius Shengwitch of 98 Allen Street, who is 25 years old, is in Bellevue Hospital suffering from the effects of inhaling gas. Her husband prevented her from killing herself. The couple's eight-day-old baby is also in the hospital, having inhaled some of the gas.

Mrs. Shangwitch had been suffering from severe pains in the head, and on Saturday they drove her almost frantic. So hysterical was her condition that her husband and a man named Hoffman, who boards with them, took turns all day and night watching her to prevent her doing herself injury. On Saturday night Mrs. Shangwitch managed, while her husband was sleeping and Hoffmen was on watch, to reach one of the windows, and was just about to throw herself three stories to the ground when Hoffman caught and restrained her.

Eerly yesterday morning she crept from her husband's side and, taking the sleeping infant with her, went into an adjoining room, affixed a rubber tube to a gas jet, put one end in her mouth, and turned on the gas.

Shangwitch waked up and smelled the gas. He rushed into the other room and snatched the tube from the mouth of his wife, who was nearly unconscious by that time. Then he shut off the gas and sent Hoffman out for a policeman, who summoned an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital, where the woman and the baby were teken. Both will recover.

DELUSIONS OF A WIFE.

Her Latest a Tale of Robbers—Pretended to be Dumb Another Time.

Mrs. Catherine Ledger, 24 years old, of 24 Sutton Street, Greenpoint, told Capt. O'Brien of the Greenpoint Avenue Station a story Saturday night of being gagged and robbed. The Captain and his detectives worked on the case all yesterday, and then expressed the opinion that Mrs. Ledger'a thrilling story existed only in her imagination.

Mrs. Ledger's husband, on returning home Saturday night, found her lying on the floor with a handkerchief tied across her mouth. The woman appeared to be insensible. Ledger raised an alerm which brought in the neighbors. Then an ambulence came from St. Catherine's Hospital. Surgeon De Verona was unable to find anything the matter with Mrs. Ledger.

Meenwhile the police were notified end Capt. O'Brien, with four detectives, hurried to the Ledger home. Mrs. Ledger told them that on Saturday evening, while she was preparing her husband's supper, she went to a front room to get a lamp. She said that a man seized her and tied a hendkerchief over her mouth.

Mr. Ledger made a searcb end found that $14 was missing, and also a suit of his clothes. Mrs. Ledger told the police that two months ago his wife, after a quarrel with him, pretended to have become speechless and did not speek to him for four days.

MORMON APPEAL TO DURAND.

British Ambassador Asked to Procure Action by President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—John H. Scott, a member of the Mormon Church, has appealed to Sir Henry Mortimer Durand to ask President Roosevelt to take some action which will give him, Scott, his rights in the Church.

Scott, now resident of Salt Lake City, is a British subject. He was converted in England eight years ago by Mormon missionaries, who told him he would prosper in the community life of the Church. He went to Salt Lake, end seys he has done all that wae required of him, paying his tithes and obeying all commands of the authorities of the Church.

He now finds himself in poverty, and declares he is denied the right to get up in the tabernacle and voice the protest of the thousands of Mormons who do not approve of the conduct of the leaders of the Church. He asks that the Ambaaaador take up the matter with the President and that the latter demand for him that he be allowed to state before the semi-annual conference this October the grounds of protest and dissent.

Mr. Scott says that the leaders of the Mormon Church preach that President Roosevelt is their friend and that so long aa they stand with him politically he will protect them, provided they live within the law.

Taft Passes Through Chicago.

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—William H. Taft, Secretary of War, and the party which accompanied him through the Far East, arrived in Chicago this afternoon over the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. Their private cars were immediately attached to a Baltimore and Ohio special and left here for Washington at 7 o'clock to-night.

LABOR'S PROSPERITY IN THIS STATE GROWS

Relatively Fewer Idle Wage Earners Than Even in 1902.

BUILDING INDUSTRY'S BOOM

Enormous Amount of Capital Involved in Structures Begun—Report of State Commissioner.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—In his quarterly report, just issued, Commissioner of Labor Shermen points out that the improvement in trade which began in the middle of 1904 has continued almost uninterruptedly until now there are relatively fewer idle wage earners in New York than there were even in 1902, the most prosperous year of the decade. Returns made to his department from trades unions embracing a membership of about 100,000 show that the average monthly number of unemployed members was only 151 per 1,000 in the first half of 1905, as compared with 202 last year and 168 in 1902.

At the beginning of May the idle men among the wage earners in the State was only 118 per 1,000, as compared with 153 per 1,000 in 1902, while at the beginning of last July the proportion wes 91, as against 145 in 1902.

In the months of April, May, and June work wes begun on 7,316 buildings in New York City, as compared with 5,164 a year ago. The number of buildings completed in the second querter of the present year was 4,673 as compared with 3,455. These figures, however, fail to convey an adequate idee of the extent of building operations now going on in the metropolis. The estimated cost of projected buildings for which plans were approved and permits issued in the second quarter of 1905 attained the amazing sum of $78,417,896. As a metter of fact the cost of buildings projected in the first six months of the year exceeds the cost of those projected in the entire twelve months of 1902 or 1903. In the other large cities building operations are also well ebove the average, although of course conducted on a much smeller scale. Thus the cost of buildings authorized in the second quarter of 1905 was $2,370,237 in Buffalo, $1,846,125 in Rochester, and $869,263 in Syracuse.

Because of the close relations between European working people who have settled in this country with those abroad, an unusuel demand for lebor here is almost autometically satisfied through the migration of additional European laborers.

"Thus it is," the commission eays, "that American prosperity is quickly reflected in the statistics of immigration. In the second quarter of 1905 the number of alien arrivels et the Port of New York broke all records, having attained the figure of 294,381, as against 202,099 last yeer and 274,507 two years ago. The largest contingent of immigrants, as usual, comes from South Italy, and now amounts to a small army—95,025 persone or 32 per cent. of the totel. Polish immigration also increased largely and assumed the second place with 33,438 arrivals. The Germans, with 20,904 arrivals, maintain the third rank, while the Hebrews (17,285) have dropped to fourth place from the second piece a year ago. Scandinavian and Irish immigration is stetionary, while a large increase appeared in the immigration of Slovak, Croatian, and Magyar peoples. New York State received one-third of the immigrants, as against 41 per cent. a year ago."

In the second quarter of 1905 the Bureau of Mediation and Arbitration recorded 56 new disputes, as compared with 43 in the corresponding period of 1903. One-half (28) of the disputes were strikes for higher wages, and resulted, in a large majority of casea, (19,) in the complete or partial success of the workmen. The number of employes involved in trade diaputes, however, was only one-third as large as it wae a year ago, and this is mainly due to tha progress of the joint agreement system, which substitutes arbitration for industrial warfare.

Many of the New York east side bakers are employed in underground bakeshops, and the strike in August brought into light the existence of revolting conditions that have grown up during the recent period of heavy immigration from the districts of Central and Eastern Europe, where inferior standards of living prevail. The Commissioner in this connection saye:

"The dangers to the public health threatened by the perpetuation of these etendards in city bakeshops illustrate the need of protective legislation and an adequate force of inspectors. Less than one-half of the striking journeymen succeeded in their efforts, and 500 of them were displaced by non-unionists."

REJECTED SUITOR A SUICIDE.

Took Poison in the Hall After Being Ejected from Woman's Room.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Oct. 1.—The police are investigating the death of Walter Bowers, 26 years old, of 14 Beecher Street, whose body was found in the hallway at 854½ Springfield Avenue early this morning. Only a few hours before Bowers was ejected from the apartments of Mrs. Margaret Dean, in the same building.

According to Mrs. Dean, she found Bowers in her room when she returned from a dance this morning. She had no trouble in ejecting him, and, thinking that he had gone to his home, retired for the night. About 6 o'clock this morning Isaac Barrish, who keeps a tailoring establishment on the ground floor of the building, found Bowers's body sitting upright on the lower step. A bottle that had contained whisky was lying near the body.

While every indication points to suicide, the county physician was unable to determine the exact ceuse of death until an analysis of the stomach can be made. It is believed, however, that Bowers took cyenide of potassium, as he used this drug to end the life of a dog belonging to Mrs. Dean some time ago, and remarked at the time that ahould he ever wish to die he would use this means.

Mrs. Dean, who is thirteen years older than Bowers, said that he had been paying her attention for some time. She refused to marry him, she said, on account of the difference in their agee.

Somebody Told Man Neighbor He Accidentally Shot Was Dying.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ROCHELLE, Oct. 1.—Frank Dawley, a mechanic thirty years old, shot himself in the temple at his home at East Port Chester to-day and will die. He has a wife and two children.

Three weeks ego he accidentally shot a neighbor, William Wason, in the thigh. He was not arrested and Wason is recovering. Some one told Dawley laat night that Wason would die and he would be arrested. It was told in a joke, but Dawley took it seriously, went home and got a revolver, announcing to his wife that he intended to commit suicide. She took the weepon from him. He found it again and shot himself.

SPECTATORS GET A THRILL

Aeronauts Perform Gymnastic Feats During Ascent at North Bergen—Match for $500 a Side.

A new sport was introduced to the public yesterdey et Schuetzen Park, North Bergen, N. J., when Profs. Griffin and Le Strenge met in a balloon race. The contest, in addition to being thrilling, affords the spectators a spectacle at once unique and interesting. Unlike other competitions, the race is really held in the clouds, and requires unusual courage and nerve on the pert of the competitors. Yesterday's contest was the first of its kind ever held in this vicinity, and judged by the result, from a spectator's standpoint, it is likely to become popular.

The absence of promptness on the part of the competitors ceused consideroble dissatisfaction among the 5,000 persons inside the grounds and an equal number outside, but the novelty of the preperations for the race in a measure compensated the spectetors for the delay. The points in deciding the race are height, inflation, and deportment. In giving a decision the judge is required to take into consideration all three points. The two men started the inflation of hot air at a given signal. An assistant was stationed inside each balloon to direct the work of the competitors, who attended to their own fires. To fill the balloons with hot eir, tunnels were built leading to the centre of the pear-shaped canvas bags. Pine wood and gesoline were used as fuel, and as the two balloons gradually filled, the assistant advised the competitors as to the height of the flames in the interior and whether the draught forced the sparks into the canvas bag. It required thirty minutes to complete the inflation. Each man then took up his position, clothed in a suit of tights, at the end of the parachute attached to the end of the balloon. Prof. Leo Stevens then gave the word to start, and the balloons rose swiftly in the air, with the two competitors hanging to the bare of the parachutes.

The wind blew the balloons in the direction of the Hackensack Meadows, the men performing gymnestic feats during the ascent. When Prof. Le Strange reached the height of 1,000 feet he releasod his parachute and descended safely about a mile away from the starting point. The time of the ascent wes 3:35. Griffin continued to ascend for fifteen seconds more, when he, too, parted company with his halloon, the wind carrying him and his parachute about a quarter of a mile further than the point from which he detached the balloon. He reached the ground without trouble and was declared the winner. Upon his return to tho grounds he said that owing to the lateness of the hour the balloons had not been properly filled, which had limited the height of his ascent to about 1,200 feet. Le Strange was dissatisfied with the result of the match, which was for $500 a side, and challenged Griffin for another contest, which was accepted by the latter.

Prof. Leo Stevens exhibited his airship, which he will use in his match with Knabenshue. It is an elongated balloon with a 65-foot bag and 35-foot body. It is made on a similar plan es the machine in which Knabenshue circled the Times Building a few weeks ago. He uses a shifting weight to ascend or descend, and will shortly give an exhibition in this city.

PATRICK CASE UP AGAIN.

Argument for a Rehearing of Appeal to be Made To-day.

ALBANY, Oct. 1.—The final effort to save Albert T. Patrick, condemned to die in the electric chair for the murder of aged William Marsh Rice, will be made before the Court of Appeals to-morrow afternoon.

David B. Hill will address the court in Patrick's behalf in an effort to obtain a reargument of the appeal recently decided against him. The motion will be opposed by the District Attorney of New York. Motions of this character are not usually argued orally, but it is thought that in view of the circumstances the court will strain a point and allow counsel to speak.

It is probable that the District Attorney's office will be represented by Assistant District Attorney Howard S. Gans, who was associated with Judge Landon on the argument of the appeal.

SUNDAY SALOON RAIDS.

Schmittberger's Men Make Several Excise Arrests—Proprietor Clubbed.

The police of Inspector Schmittberger's staff and the Tenderloin Police Station made a dozen excise arrests early yesterday morning. In Jefferson Market Court, however, most of the prisoners were released. Magistrate Crane dealt so severely with the police that arrests stopped and last night resorts were lighted up as usual.

In one case where en arrest wes made it was alleged that a detective clubbed the proprietor.

The case was that of Joseph Beszo, a bartender in Joseph Fantanido's saloon, 116 West Twenty-sixth Street. Detectives Brosnan and Feirchild arraigned Beszo for violeting the excise law, telling Magistrate Crene thet they entered the saloon shortly efter 1 o'clock and found four men sitting at a table drinking beer.

"Did you teste the beer?" asked the Magistrate.

"Yes, Sir," answered Brosnan.

"Did you order the beer and pay for it?"

"No, Sir."

"How dared you drink beer that had been ordered and paid for by another men?" asked the Magistrate.

"We had to get evidence," Brosnan replied.

"How would you like it if you were to order a gless of beer and some one should reach over and take a drink from your glass?"

Brosnan wes puzzled at this.

Attorney Micheel O'Sullivan, who appeared for the defendant, said:

"I wish to call the attention of the court to the way these officers got into thie place. The seloon was closed. The proprietor was standing outside the closed and locked door, when this officer approached him and demanded admittance. Fantanido refused, and Brosnan struck him with a billy and forced him to open the door."

"If that is true, this officer should be punished," said Magistrate Crane.

Brosnan denied doing any clubbing. The case was dismissed.

$300,000 THIEF TAKEN; HIS PLUNDER RECOVERED

Says He Stole to Show Wall Street How Easy It Was.

WAS BROKER'S MESSENGER

Stamp Used to Forged Check Led to Capture of Henry Leonard, an Ex-Police Sergeant's Son.

Henry Leonard, a messenger in the employ of the brokerage firm of Halle & Stieglitz, 30 Broad Street, is a prisoner at Police Headquarters charged with having stolen the $350,000 worth of securities that were obtained from the National City Bank Wednesday last on a forged check. According to the police, Leonard has made a complete confession. He is held in $50,000 bail.

Leonard, who is only 24 years old, is a son of ex-Police Sergeant John Leonard and a member of the Young Men's Christian Association. Up to the time of his arrest on Sunday he had borne an excellent reputation. He has told the police that he stole the securities with no evil intention, and for the sole purpose of showing Wall Street how easy it is to rob banking institutions. The police say that certain features of the robbery that have come to light since his arrest do not bear out this statement.

All the stolen securities that had been left with the National City Bank by the brokerage firm of Pearl & Co. of 27 William Street, as collateral for a loan of $300,000, have been recovered. Young Leonard himself sent $260,000 worth of his plunder, consisting of non-negotiable stock certificates, by mail to the house of Dyer Pearl, senior member of that firm, at 34 West Seventy-third Street. The rest of the securities, consisting of $100,000 worth of coupon bonds and negotiable stock that Leonard had kept, was handed last night to Acting Captain McCauley of the Detective Bureau by the young man's father. The boy had told his father that they were in a wardrobe at home, and they were found there.

The clearing up of the mystery and the arrest of Leonard are due to the efforts of Assistant Supt. George S. Dougherty of the Pinkerton Detective Agency and Detective Sergt. Wooldridge of the Central Office. The fact that Leonard, in ordering the rubber stamp that was used in forging the certification of the check for $300,037.50, which he used to obtain the Pearl & Co. collateral at the National City Bank, went to a firm that manufactured the rubber stampa for Police Headquarters, put the detectives on the trail of young Leonard.

Arrested on the Way to Church.

Leonard was arrested on Sunday morning as he left the house at 586 East 136th Street, where he lived with his parents, on his way to church. Capt. McCauley, who lives only a few doors from the Leonard home, is a friend of the elder Leonard and has known the young man since he was a little boy. McCauley, Supt. Dougherty, and Detective Sergeant Wooldridge made the arrest. Leonard at first expressed great indignation at his arrest and professed to know nothing about the stolen securities. It was not until after he had spent several hours at Police Headquarters with Capt. McCauley and Supt. Dougherty that he broke down.

How step by step the stolen securities were traced was told yesterday by the police and the Pinkerton men. When the robbery was discovered after the Clearing House returns had been received at the National City Bank the Pinkerton detectives and the police were at once called in. The bank officials gave Mr. Dougherty and Detective Sergeant Wooldridge the forged check and a big pile of papers containing samples of the handwriting of employes and ex-employes of the bank.

"Let us put everything that seems to suggest a clue on our right side and all the rest on our left," suggested Dougherty.

As a result, when the detectives had finished with their preliminary work, the $300,000 forged check was the only thing on the table to the right of the two detectives. With the check for their only clue they started on the trail of the forger. The check was drawn on the Hanover National Bank and bore what purported to be its certification stamped on its face. Inquiry there convinced the detectives that the certification stamp of the bank could not by any chance have fallen into the hands of the forger.

Assistant Supt. Dougherty sent half a dozen sleuths supplied with photographs of the check to canvass the various concerns where rubber stamps are manufactured. He was looking forward to several days' work in tracing the certification stamp.

Strike the Trail of the Stamp.

This was on Thursday of last week. On Friday morning details of the swindle were published in the papers with the names of the two banks concerned. Early on Friday morning Capt. McCauley of the Detective Bureau received a visit from J. C. Brinckman, Jr. Brinckman is the son of a rubber stamp manufacturer at 272 Bowery, and assists his father. The elder Brinckman for many years has supplied all the rubber stamps used at Police Headquarters.

Brinckman told Capt. McCauley that a week ago to the day a young man had called at his shop and ordered a rubber stamp to be used for certification purposes. On a slip of paper he had a rough tracing of the kind of stamp that he wanted. He told Brinckman, Jr., that he probably would call for the stamp himself, and wrote on the reverse side of the slip "H. A. Berg, 5 W. 125," as the address to which the stamp should be mailed if he failed to call.

The visitor returned the next day and found the stamp waiting for him, but it was not what he wanted and he left, say-

EGGERS RAIDS AGAIN.

Wields His Axe in the Parole Club and Gets Four Prisoners.

Acting Captain Eggers and a squad of his detectives made a lively raid on an alleged poolroom and gambling house in West Fifty-third Street, near Sixth Avenue, yesterday afternoon. Capt. Gallagher of the West Forty-seventh Street Station was not aware of any untoward happening in his precinct until Eggers asked for the loan of a petrol wagon.

The alleged poolroom has been an eyesore to the police for some time. Several attempts were made during the régime of Capt. Gallagher and Inspector Flood to raid the place, but with little success. The alleged proprietor, it is said, tried in vain to get an injunction against Inspector Flood, whose energy, constantly directed against the "clubroom," caused considerable annoyance to the "members."

For many hours yesterday Capt. Eggers and his staff watched the place closely from various points in the vicinity. Between 3 and 4 o'clock Detective Irving Jones, at a given signal, strolled up to a man who was reading an afternoon paper on the stoop.

"Don't disturb yourself," said Jones, who is a large man. "You're the look-out man. You sit still and we'll talk about the weather."

At the same time Acting Captain Eggers with the rest of his men slipped through a side door and into a back hallway. Here Detective Seligman encountered another sentinel, who, like the first one, was persuaded to sit down for a few minutes and keep quiet.

With the two look-out men safe Capt. Eggers started for the second floor. On the way they encountered two ice-box doors, which required the use of the well-worn Eggers axe. The detectives say that this particular poolroom was about the toughest nut the Headquarters men had to crack in some time.

At the head of the stairs another heavy door had to be dealt with, after which the detectives found themselves in a long room, which had the appearance of a club or a dance hall. It was learned afterward that at night the place was a ballroom and during the day a gambling house. When the carpets were lifted it was found that the flooring was beautifully polished with French wax.

There were about 250 men in the room, quite a number of them Japanese. There was a big "Klondike" table, and the play seemed to have been lively just before the entrance of the police. The sound of the axe blows, however, had apparently given the players a chance to get the money out of sight. One hundred sets of dice were found, however, besides a telephone, a telegraph "sounder," a megaphone, and numerous slips and racing sheets.

The alleged proprietor of the place was absent. Four persons were picked out of the big crowd in the room and placed under arrest on a charge of aiding and abetting in the keeping of a gambling house. The other two hundred-odd persons, including the Japanese habitués, were allowed to file solemnly into the street.

The prisoners were taken to Police Headquarters and locked up. They said they were David Hexter of 142 West Fifty-second Street, Henry Matthews of 117 West 125th Street, Oscar Herrman, a real estate broker, of Long Branch, and James Hynes, ticket speculator, living at 722 Amsterdam Avenue. The alleged poolroom was known in the vicinity as the "Parole Club." But the prisoners were held in bail.

NEGRO ESCAPES TEXAS MOB.

They Had Prepared to Burn Him—Governor Orders Out Troops.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, Oct. 2.—"Monk" Gibson, who has been hunted down on suspicion that he murdered the wife and children of A. J. Conditt, escaped from the jungle in a Navidad River thicket to-day, just when his pursuers were so certain that they had him hemmed in that word was sent to Edna to prepare to burn him on the public square this afternoon. The thicket is almost impenetrable, four miles long, and from one to two miles wide, and Gibson thus had a chance to take a favorable opportunity to get out.

Gibson's escape has increased the public frenzy, and hundreds of men are again trailing in every direction. Fresh horses have been sent from Edna, El Toro, Navidad, Louise, Morales, Ganado, and the country districts. Hundreds of axes have been forwarded also to cut into the jungles.

HOUSTON, Texas, Oct. 2.—Gov. Lanham to-night ordered two militia companies from Houston to Edna, where citizens threaten to burn at the stake "Monk" Gibson, the negro accused of the murder of the Conditt family. The searchers are still confident of capturing the negro.

There are rumors that the officers have the negro in hiding and that the troops have been sent to escort him to Houston. Adjt. Gen. Hulen has ordered a special train for himself and has gone from Austin to take command of the troops.

Mr. Beasley, the father of the murdered Mrs. Conditt, has taken the field in person, at the head of twenty-five negroes upon whom he believes he can rely.

Dr. Pearsons Explains How He Got Cash He Gives to Missions.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 2.—Dr. D. K. Pearsons of Chicago in offering $50,000 to-day to the Board of Foreign Missions of the Congregational Church for the use of Anatolia College, in Marsovan, Turkey, wrote this letter:

"I inclose $50,000 for Anetolia College, Marsovan, Turkey. This money is to form the Mrs. D. K. Pearsons's Memorial Endowment Fund, and the principal is to be intact forever, the interest to be used for the support of the college. This money came in this way: By sharp bargains and rigid economy I acquired $10,000, and twelve years ago I purchased 100 shares of bank stock. During these twelve years this stock has paid me good interest, and now I can sell 100 shares for $50,000. I can give you the name of the bank and the names of the Directors, all good men.

"Will this money be good to extend Christian education in Turkey, or is it tainted? If you refuse it, there are several theological seminaries here that would be pleased to take it, and I know of 100 poor colleges South and West that would be delighted to receive it."

The money was accepted.

MURPHY'S DARK HORSE IS FRANK O'DONNEL

Now on Slate for President of Board of Aldermen.

MEETS THE REQUIREMENTS

Present Head of Tax Commission Is an Irish Catholic and Leader's Closest Personal Friend.

Frank A. O'Donnel, President of the Tax Commission, is the man whom Charles F. Murphy expects to nominate for President of the Board of Aldermen at the City Convention on Thursday night. Thus, if Tammany's plans carry and Mayor McClellan is elected Governor of the State next year, O'Donnel will be Mayor of New York for three years.

Mr. Murphy and his closet advisers have been carefully considering the selection of a man for this place, but no suggestion of their selection has been allowed to leak out. Except to the inner circle the word has been: "The matter still is wide open." Name after name has come up in connection with the nomination. First there was Thomas M. Mulry, but he declined. Then came Francis Burton Harrison, but he was dropped. Then there was a boom for ex-Senator Thomas F. Donnelly, but he never was seriously considered by the men who make the slate. Finally Isaac A. Hopper nursed a boomlet, only to have it smiled out of the Wigwam.

At Tammany Hall yesterday the faithful heard it was settled that the place would go to an Irish Catholic. Somebody asked Mr. Murphy if the interview that had been printed to that effect was all right.

"It looks that way," said the Tammany leader. "But nobody has been decided upon as yet," he added.

Last night the name of O'Donnel was whispered from a source that is the next thing to official. O'Donnel is one of Murphy's closest personal friends. They come from the Eighteenth Assembly District, have been political allies for years, and are very intimate in their family relations. When Murphy became leader of Tammany, O'Donnel was made Treasurer of the organization, and held the place until appointed by Mayor McClellan to be head of the Tax Board at $8,000 a year, one of the fattest places in the City Government.

Prior to that, O'Donnel had been State Senator from the district controlled by Murphy before he became the power in the organization. O'Donnel is an Irishman and a Catholic, and therefore meets all the plans and specifications laid down by Murphy for the place.

His nomination would leave a Protestant at the head of the ticket in the person of Mayor McClellan; a German in second place in the person of Herman A. Metz for Controller, and an Irish Catholic in third place in the person of O'Donnel.

Calls were issued yesterday for meetings of the Tammany Executive Committee and of the Democratic City Committee for to-morrow. The Tammany Executive Comittee will meet in the Wigwam in the afternoon and the City Committee will meet in the Democratic Club in the evening. These meetings will definitely fix the city slete and also will fix the make-up of the various committees for the convention.

It wes announced yesterday that ex-District Attorney Eugene A. Philbin would make the speech placing Mayor McClellan in nomination, and that Borough President Martin W. Littleton was expected to make the seconding speech for Brooklyn. Two years ago, when McClellan was nominated, Littleton acted as spokesman for the old McLaughlin organization in Brooklyn, and placed Judge Gaynor in nomination in opposition. At that time he took occason to bitterly denounce Charles F. Murphy and Tammany Hall.

John B. Stanchfield, who was the Democratic candidate for Governor in 1900, was at the Hoffman House yesterday, and he gave an up-State echo of the talk of McClellan for Governor.

"Mayor McClellan will be re-elected by a handsome plurality," said Mr. Stanchfield, "and it will make him the strongest Gubernatorial candidate next year. From what I have observed of the Democratic conditions up-State he will be the nominee of the next State Convention. The feeling is strong in his favor and is growing stronger each day."

WIFE SINGS, PASTOR QUITS.

Rev. Mr. Ellsworth Riley May Manage Soloist with Victor Herbert.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 2.—Following the début of his wife as a concert singer, the Rev. Edwin Ellsworth Riley has resigned as pastor of Grace Memorial Presbyterian Church of Jenkintown.

Mrs. Riley has signed a contract to tour the country with Victor Herbert as one of his soloists. Her weekly salary will be $200. The yearly stipend of Mr. Riley was $1,000. Mr. Riley will go to New York shortly and join his wife. Whether he will continue in the ministry or will act as her manager is to be decided.

When Giacone Minkowsky in 1903 offered, as he said, on behalf of Mme. Nordica, a prize of a seven-thousand-dollar scholarship for the sweetest voice in this country, Mrs. Riley entered the competition. She sang before Minkowsky and was told that she had won the prize. Later she was disqualified, as one of the stipulations of the contes was that the singers must be unmarried. Afterward newspaper stories were published to the effect that the contest was a hoax. Mrs. Riley continued her studies, however, and determined to gratify her ambition to appear on the stage.

PLAGUE VILLAGE BURNED.

Russians Fear for Manchurian Army—Cholera Spreads in Poland.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 2.—The greatest fear is expressed that the bubonic plague reported from Dalai-Nor, Mongolia, near the Russian frontier, may be communicated to the troops returning from Manchuria, and the troops trains have been strictly forbidden to stop at that station.

The inhabitants of the affected village have been transported to a quarantine location some distance from the railway and the village has been burned.

The Pest Commission reports that on Sept. 29 and Sept. 30, twenty-one new cases of cholera were discovered in Russian Poland—sixteen in the Government of Lomza, four in Lodz, and one in Warsaw—and that during the same period there were nine deaths from the disease.

ROCKEFELLER PAYS IN CASH.

His Gift of $10,000,000 Sent to General Education Board.

The Executive Committee of the General Education Board met at 54 William Street yesterday afternoon to receive the ten-million-dollar gift of John D. Rockefeller, announcement of which was made by Mr. Rockefeller last June. In a letter to the board at that time Mr. Rockefeller said that the gift would be forthcoming on Oct. 1, and would be in cash or securities, at his option.

The members of the board present yesterday to receive the gift were Robert C. Ogden, George Foster Peabody, Dr. Wallace Buttrick, Starr J. Murphy, F. T. Gates, and Dr. Albert Shaw. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was the absent member. The money was delivered by Mr. Gates, and consisted of eight checks, six for $1,000,000 each and two for $2,000,000 each. None of them was signed by Mr. Rockefeller. They bore the signatures of men with power of attorney to act for him.

It was said that Mr. Rockefeller elected to make the gift in cash in order to avoid comment that might arise by any possible depreciation in securities.

The checks do not represent any actual withdrawal of money from the various institutions on which they were drawn, but simply a transfer of the account from Mr. Rockefeller to the board. Incidentally the money will be invested in securities, and the income used in the aid of such institutions as come within the scope of the gift.

There are two or three hundred colleges eligible to be assisted, under the terms of Mr. Rockefellsr's gift, and already the board has received upward of 100 letters requesting aid. The letters come from all parts of the country.

M'NARY TALKS OF THE KAISER.

Congressman Tells Further of His Views on Asiatic Politics.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—Representative William S. McNary, who arrived home from Europe on the Canopic to-day, confirmed a cable dispatch from the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES in Berlin, quoting his description of an interview of American Congressmen with Emperor William. "It was an accurate report of what I said," he declared.

"The Kaiser received the delegation of American Congressmen in the Hall of the Flags in the Schloss," said Mr. McNary. "He talked with the greatest frankness."

"Did he intimate that he was really the first one to suggest the termination of hostilities and that President Roosevelt acted only after he had taken the initiative?" was asked.

"No, but he said that he had assured the Russian Emperor, with whom he was on intimate terms, that he felt he knew perfectly the motives animating President Roosevelt; that they were disinterested and sincere, and that the Czar might rest perfectly confident that anything the President did or proposed in the matter could be acted upon in good faith."

"Did he say that it was now to the interest of the United States and Europe to unite for self-protection against Japan?"

"That is just what he said, and he elaborated on the subject. Japan, he pointed out, was so near to China that the commercial interests of Japan and China would be practically identical. The United States being between Japan and Europe would feel the competition of Japan much sooner than Europe, and hence it was clearly, in the Kaiser's view, to the interest of the United States to join with the nations of Europe in a commercial alliance to protect their markets from this competition.

"The Kaiser also spoke of the fact that when the contracts of the German Army officers who had been engaged in instructing the Japanese in military matters had expired, the contracts had not been renewed, the Japaneae now getting their military instruction from their own officers."

BONDSMEN GIVE UP PECKHAM.

Broker Indicted for Cotton Leak Conspiracy Goes to Prison.

SARATOGA, Oct. 2.—Frederick A. Peckham of New York, who is under indictment in connection with the June cotton report leakage, was to-day brought before United States Commissioner Charles M. Davison and surrendered by his bondsmen, Edward D. Starbuck and William W. Blackmer. They had qualified in $10,000 each.

Peckham was placed by the court in custody of Deputy United States Marshal Elmer E. Belden, and after Belden had given him an opportunity to furnish other bonds he was placed in the county jail at Ballston.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—The Federal Grand Jury to-day reported new indictments in the cotton crop report leakage cases against Edwin S. Holmes, Jr., formerly Associate Statistician of the Agricultural Department; Frederick A. Peckham, and Moses Haas of New York. They cover the same ground as the old indictments, but are believed to be more specific and have been prepared with greater care.

MAY DEFEAT JUSTICE WRIGHT.

Strong Combination Against Him—Dead-Lock in Convention Possible.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 2.—It is believed in this city to-night that Justice Maurice L. Wright will not be nominated to succeed himself at the Republican Judicial Convention of the Fifth District, which meets at Oswego to-morrow noon.

The Onondaga delegation will go to the convention unpledged but favoring the nomination of P. C. J. De Angelis of Utica. The Republican leaders of Onondaga say that this county and Oneida will stand firm for De Angelis, and that there is prospect of aid for him from Herkimer at the proper time.

The Herkimer and Oneida delegates passed through Syracuse to-day on their way to Oswego. The Herkimer men said that their pledge to bring about the renomination of Justice Wright atill stands.

There are prospects of a deadlock. The Lewis, Jefferson, Herkimer, and Oswego delegates are instructed for Wright. With Onondaga and Oneida favoring De Angelis, each candidate would have twenty-five delegates.

J. S. Dobb Dies from Accident.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 2.—James S. Dobb, President of the Delaware Horse Show Association, died to-day from a fractured skull. While returning from the races at Horse Show Park on Sunday evening he was speeding his horse on the Kennett Pike, and ran into a heavy farm wagon. He was thrown out and the wagon wheels passed over his head.

MR. ROOSEVELT BEGINS FIGHT FOR A RATE LAW

Senators Who Call Find Him Insistent on the One Subject.

HE HAS WRITTEN HIS VIEWS

Part of Message Dealing with Campaign Contributions Also Completed—Still Considering the Tariff.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—President Roosevelt had a full house to-day, his first working day since his return from Oyster Bay. To all comers he urged rate legislation.

Half a dozen or more Senators were at his offices during the morning. They all went away with the distinct impression the President has taken his position unequivocally, and will ask of Congress next session practical, adequate and uncompromising rate legislation.

From a source that is above doubt the intelligence came during the day that Mr. Roosevelt has written the part of his message that deals with the railroad question, and that it has been laid away as finished, not to be disturbed or revised. Most of the Summer was spent upon it. His argument is believed by those who have been taken into his confidence to be complete, patriotic, and substantial, unanswerable. It puts the whole question squarely up to Congress, and it is believed that the majority in the Senate will have difficulty in evading the responsibility.

Among the Senators who talked with the President to-day were representatives of both sides of the question of rate control, and of the middle ground. All went out from his office with the idea of his insistent attitude on such legislation. He gave them no chance to misunderstand him, and brought the matter to the front resolutely and positively. The President has arranged for more conferences on rates this week.

Tariff matters were not allowed to come to the fore to-day. The President has not yet written what he will have to say to Congress on this subject. Federal control of insurance is also laid by for further thought.

The subject of contributions by corporations to campaign committees has been fully worked out for the message, and the passage dealing with it has been laid away as completed. The President regards it as a moral question which involves him directly. He did not discuss it with those who called on him to-day.

Mr. Roosevelt probably will recommend to Congress the establishment of a central purchasing agency for the several executive departments. Commissioner Garfield and Gifford Pinchot, both of whom are members of the Keep commission, which has been investigating the business methods of the departments, had a talk with the President to-day. The investigation has developed the fact that the several departments do not get the same class of supplies at uniform prices, and it is believed that by the establishment of the purchasing agency money would be saved on goods and freight rates.

Among the Senators who called on him were Foraker of Ohio, McCumber of North Dakota, Burkett of Nebraska, Hemenway of Indiana, and Fulton of Oregon.

FEARS COMMERCIAL WAR.

George H. Anderson Urges Tariff Revision to Avert It.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 2.—George H. Anderson, Director of the Chamber of Commerce, returned home to-day from Liège, Belgium, where he went to represent the Chamber of Commerce at the International Congress held there last month.

"The position of the United States Government on the tariff question is being very freely and ably discussed in all parts of Europe," he said. "Unless we recede from our present position, and the Senate supports the stand taken by the President, we will have the greatest commercial war on our hands after next March that this country has ever seen. Germany is leading the fight against us, but she is being ably supported by nearly all the other foreign nations.

"Up to the present time England has not passed any retaliatory laws against us, but the sentiment is gradually veering that way, and I would not be at all surprised to see the mother country fall in line against us.

"When we consider that we annually export 1,000,000,000 articles to the various foreign countries, and that we have a profit of $500,000,000 or $600,000,000, it can easily be seen where our wealth is coming from. To nurse that business and to continue to dispose of our goods to people across the water, there must be a revision of the tariff, and that can be done without sacrificing the justice or equity of our tariff principles one iota."

WASHINGTON POST SALE.

John R. McLean Controls Half the Stock of the Newspaper.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—John R. McLean has bought from the sons of the late Beriah Wilkins an amount of the capital stock of The Washington Post, which, taken with other holdings, gives him a half interest in the newspaper. Mr. McLean would not to-day admit the truth of the statement, but the fact is admitted by persons connected with the ownership of the paper.

When Mr. McLean was asked this afternoon if he had bought into The Post he said: "So they're saying that about me, are they? That's about the only thing they haven't said, except that I've sold the dear old Cincinnati Enquirer. No, I don't care to say anything about The Washington Post matter at all."

Mr. McLean has large financial interests in Washington street car lines and banks, and is practically the owner of the Washington Gas Light Company.

SHOPPERS IN A SMASHUP.

A Sixth Avenue Car Wrecks a Cab and Hurts Three Women.

A northbound Sixth Avenue car struck a hansom cab yesterday afternoon at the Twenty-fourth Street crossing, and three women who were in the cab on a shopping tour were bruised some and frightened more. They were Mrs. Rose Brown of 77 East Eighty-ninth Street, Mrs. Florence Strauss of the same number, and Mrs. Josephine Friest of 18 East Sixtieth Street.

When the shock came Mrs. Brown was thrown to the street. Her companions were bruised and cut by the flying glass. Mrs. Brown fainted, but was carried to a drug store and revived. The women called another cab and drove home.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 2.—Three hundred employes of the National Cash Register Company were dismissed to-day. Following the decision to refuse the demands of the Typographical Union for an eight-hour day in the printing department, the company ordered all employes to report in the assembly hall a few hours before closing time last Saturday.

"TEDDY," JR., TRIES FOR TEAM

President Roosevelt's Son a Candidate for Harvard Freshman Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 2.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., son of President Roosevelt, to-day reported for the Harvard freshman eleven. He was clad in a well-padded new yellow suit, with crimson jersey and stockings.

Probably two-thirds of the number out were no bigger than the President's son, and a few were smaller. The whole squad presented an uninviting appearance, being unusually light.

When young Roosevelt handed in his name as a candidate he gave his weight as 145 pounds, and stated he had played four years at Groton.

STOKES AND BRIDE HOME.

To Keep House on East Side at Norfolk and Grand Streets.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 2.—J. G. Phelps Stokes and his bride, formerly Rose Pastor, Settlement worker and writer, arrived from Europe to-day on the steamship Canopic. Mr. and Mrs. Stokes looked very well and happy, and said that they had a delightful honeymoon.

They visited the British Isles and traveled through France, Germany, Austria, and Italy. On the return voyage across the Atlantic they kept to themselves and made few acquaintances. When the Canopic arrived at her dock Mr. and Mrs. Stokes stood together on the hurricane deck, Mr. Stokes noticeably attentive.

Mr. and Mrs. Stokes left this afternoon for New York. They will go to housekeeping in apartments on the east side, at Norfolk and Grand Streets, where they will engage in Settlement work.

JOHN MITCHELL HERE.

Miners' Leader Not to Talk About Coal to Roosevelt.

President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers stopped in this city yesterday morning on his way to Washington, where he will visit President Roosevelt. He had a talk with one or two labor men at the Ashland House and left for Washington in the afternoon. He will be back here to-morrow to attend the Municipal Ownership Conference of the Civic Federation, which begins on Thursday in Columbia University.

The general impression was that he had been sent for by President Roosevelt in reference to the threatened trouble among the anthracite miners. Mitchell declared, however, that his visit had nothing to do with the miners.

"Mr. Roosevelt did not send for me," he said. "My visit is in reference to a purely personal matter. I shall not talk coal to him."

As to the possibility of a strike next Spring Mitchell said:

"As far as I can see there will be no great trouble in the mining district. The union is in good condition now, and the general tone among the miners is amicable."

RAMSEY, SUSPENDED, ATTACKS GEORGE GOULD

I Owe Him Nothing, the Fighting Wabash Head Declares.

REPROVED GOULD, HE SAYS,

For Spending the Stockholders' Money—He Likens the Case to the Insurance Scandal.

Joseph Ramsey, Jr., President of the Wabash Railroad, gave out a statement to the security holders of that road yesterday, denying thet he was ever Mr. Gould's man and asserting that he is guilty of no ingratitude in attempting to retain his place as President of the road against the wishes of George J. Gould. At a meeting of the Directors of the Wabash Railroad held yesterday a resolution was passed granting Mr. Ramsey an indefinite extension of his leave of absence. Mr. Ramsey attended the meeting and formally protested against what was in effect an effort on the part of the board to remove him as President.

In his statement which, it is expected, will be distributed to the security holders to-dey, Mr. Ramsey gives at length the record of his services with the Wabash and with other roads, and replies to many reports which he says have been circulated concerning him. In his address to the debenture and stock holders, Mr. Ramsey says in part:

"When I opened the campaign for proxies, I stated I was not going to make it a personal one, but as the 'personal' element has been forced in by statements made, if not by Mr. Gould, by members of his kitchen cabinet and those working to get proxies for him, I am forced to reply to them.

"It is now due my own reputation, my friends and those whom I have asked to honor me with their proxies, that I should answer, and answer openly, the stories which are being told on the street by Messrs. Butler, Terry, and other Gould adherents, and they, and not I, are responsible for this letter.

"The stories being circulated are of several varieties. One of the serious ones, judging from a Wall Street clipping, is that of 'ingratitude to Mr. Gould, who made him (Ramsey) known to the railroad world.' 'Satan reproving sin' is not in it with 'Wall Street preaching gratitude to Gould.'

"I might admit that I owe Mr. Gould all that is claimed in the statement and then deny that a man who is filling a responsible position as a 'Trustee' and President of a corporation should permit personal 'gratitude' to warp his judgment or blind him to the rights of all the owners of the property.

Gould Didn't Make Me.

"But did Mr. Gould make me known to the railway world? I think not. I had been railroading twenty-five years before I met Mr. Gould, and had some little standing in that world at that time. In 1901 I was elected President of the Wabash, of course with Mr. Gould's support and because he thought I had earned it. No great cause for 'gratitude' there.

"The same item says: 'Mr. Ramsey, as an employe of Mr. Gould, has no right to take the position he has. If he did not like Mr. Gould's policy, it was open to him to resign.' I was not in any sense 'an employe of Mr. Gould.' I was of the Wabash Company—a Director and President—and also interested in the company, and it was my duty to oppose if I did not approve. But I did resign, and resigned twice, on account of not liking Mr. Gould's 'policy,' or, rather, the policy and methods of some of his advisers, and if my resignation had been dealt with in a proper manner the present conditions would have been avoided.

"For eight years I seemed to have Mr. Gould's full support and friendship, and I showed my 'gratitude' by working night and day to carry out our plans. To use Mr. Gould's own words before the board as late as May 28, 1903, 'Mr. Ramsey has done the work of three men for the Wabash,' &c.

"Now, as to making my fortune, which, according to one story, I owe to Mr. Gould. While my fortune is a modest one, and I thank Providence that I am able to take care of my family and live the rest of my life without a salary from the Wabash, I cannot make Mr. Gould a part of that Providence. It is true that I was in several syndicates with Mr. Gould; so were a large number of others. Of all these syndicates, four in number, I made up three, originated them, and secured most of the underwriting, of course, as Gould projects. The fourth I went into at Mr. Gould's request. Of the four, two—the Pittsburg-Toledo Syndicate and the Western Maryland Syndicate—were closed up and distribution was made or to be made under plans of the New York coterie and 'securities' only distributed. The other two, which I managed clear to the end, were closed, or are in process of being closed, in cash, with a nice profit over interest charges, without the slightest aid or assistance from Mr. Gould and his advisers.

Syndicate Profits.

"The story is told by Mr. Gould's adherents that Mr. Gould carried $1,000,000 underwriting for Mr. Ramsey in the Pittsburg-Toledo syndicate. I presume that this is where Mr. Gould made Ramsey's fortune. When the syndicate was made up I signed '$1,000,000 J. Ramsey, Jr., and Associates.' Mr. Gould asked me a few days later who was going in with me. I said I would get some of my Western and Pittsburg friends in; I wanted all I could carry. He very kindly said, 'I will take care of it all for you and charge interest.' I was glad to have him do this. About one year later Mr. Gould asked me if I would be willing to let him have $500,000 of my underwriting for Mr. Hyde, as he wanted Mr. Hyde interested. I said if he wanted it for Mr. Hyde, all right, but if it was on account of his being tired of carrying it so long, I would make other arrangements. He said it was for Mr. Hyde, and he could not get it any place else. This left $500,000 in my name. When the distribution was made Mr. Gould reported that he had only $125,000 for me, (he had never asked me to surrender the other $375,000,) and he had sold my bonds without authority (to a sub-syndicate for buying up the bonds) at an average of 89, when they were about 94 on the Street, and had practically compounded his 5 per cent. interest on the loan. I closed up my investment with Mr. Gould at about $3,000 less than cost. This is the only 'financial deal' I ever had with Mr. Gould, so 'my fortune,' for which I should be 'grateful to Mr. Gould,' is small.

"Out of the two syndicates I handled and closed up Mr. Gould will get in interest and profit about $650,000 more than he paid in. I think Mr. Gould owes me a little 'gratitude.'

"As the properties of these two syndicates referred to were not sold to any Wabash interest, none of the money came from any company in which Mr. Gould or I were interested."

The Pittsburg Terminal.

In regard to the cost of the Pittsburg Terminal, for which Mr. Ramsey says he has been held responsible, he asserts that much of the excess over the original estimates was due to the subsequent determination to make the road high class and modern in every respect. He adds that no word of objection to the cost was ever spoken by Mr. Gould. Part of the excessive cost, however, Mr. Ramsey declares, was directly due to dilatoriness and delays, for which he was not responsible.

In regard to the differences between Mr. Gould's policies and his own Mr. Ramsey says:

"They are exactly the same as are now agitating the whole corporation world and being so thoroughly investigated to-day in the great insurance companies, namely:

"Are corporations private institutions, to be controlled as private property by a large or controlling interest, or are they corporate properties, to be managed and controlled in the interest of all the stockholders? I will state the whole proposition in a nutshell and use Mr. Gould's words in doing so:

"'Ramsey, can't I spend my money and manage my property as I please?' and my reply, 'Yes, Mr. Gould, you can spend your money and manage your property as you please, but this is the money and property of a corporation, in which millions of other people's money is invested, and as its legal head I must know something about and be consulted with before such large contracts are made by outsiders.'"

This conversation with Mr. Gould, Mr. Ramsey says, occurred at a conference between them which followed a letter of resignation as President of the Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal Railway sent by Mr. Ramsey to Mr. Gould. This letter was dated March 23, 1905, and was the second resignation of Mr. Ramsey, the first having been sent last January. Mr. Ramsey gave as his chief reason for resigning that Mr. Gould, by his action, had practically discredited Mr. Ramsey as President of the company.

Referring to Mr. Gould's treatment of this letter, Mr. Ramsey says:

Can't I Spend My Money?

"When Mr. Gould received this letter, he sent for me, and his first words were as above, 'Can't I spend my money?' &c. He then went on to say, 'Mr. Harriman does not permit one of his Presidents to buy a car wheel.' I replied: 'Many good railroad men do not entirely approve of Mr. Harriman's system, but he is at least methodical in his ways. He has a Director of Purchases, an official of the company, and every official knows who is to attend to the purchases, but your way is absolutely demoralizing; one day you; next day Mr. Jeffrey, then Mr. Nicoll, and maybe I am meddling with things at the same time.' He admitted, 'It probably is.' The conversation took on a more pleasant tone, and at his request the matter was laid over for further conference."

Dealing with the Wheeling and Lake Erie financing, Mr. Ramsey tells what he considers advantages of his plan of issuing 4 per cent. bonds of the Wheeling and Lake Erie with $2,000,000 of Wabash notes over the plan to issue Wabash notes to the extent of $17,000,000, which was adopted. Referring to his efforts in regard to the bond plan Mr. Ramsey says:

"I finally delivered to Mr. Gould a firm bid by a responsible house for from ten to fifteen million Wheeling and Lake Erie bonds on a basis of 4½ per cent. The board ratified the bond sale instead of the note proposition. Mr. Gould was in favor of the bond issue provided it could be done, and before the board he was quite complimentary to Mr. Ramsey,' stating that 'the carrying through of the bond proposition was entirely due to Mr. Ramsey, and that by so doing Mr. Ramsey had saved the company four or five hundred thousand dollars.' The aggregate saving would have exceeded $800,000 on the full proposed issue of $15,000,000 as between the note and bond propositions.

"As I have stated, Mr. Gould was very complimentary at this board meeting of April 12, and yet, one week later, on April 19, a meeting of the Pittsburg Terminal Board was called and I was notified by Mr. Gould that my presence would not be necessary to a quorum, and immediately after the meeting I received a telegram from Mr. Gould saying that the board, in accordance with my urgent request, had accepted my resignation.

"There have been many intimations that the bond sale fell through on account of misrepresentations made by Mr. Ramsey. This is absolutely untrue. Of my own knowledge I know that the purchasers withdrew their bid as soon as it became publicly known that I was out of the Wheeling and Lake Erie and Pittsburg properties, they claiming that the dissensions and my leaving would greatly discredit the securities and interfere with their sale. After this negotiations were opened again and the bonds offered them at about two and a half points lower, and these negotiations also fell through for reasons which need not be stated here."

Indefinite Leave for Ramsey.

Mr. Ramsey and Mr. Gould, who is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Wabash, met yesterday at a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the road at the office of the company at 195 Broadway. It was the first time, as far as is known, that the two men have come together since Mr. Ramsey's appeal to the security holders of the Wabash for their proxies to be used at the annual meeting on Oct. 10, at which Mr. Ramsey will contest the control of the road with the Goulds.

The meeting yesterday was called for the express purpose of declaring, in effect, that Mr. Ramsey was no longer President of the road, but Mr. Ramsey attended the meeting to protest in person against any such action. The Executive Committee, it was learned yesterday, had met on Thursday last and passed a resolution granting to President Ramsey an indefinite extension of his leave of absence. The meeting of the Directors held yesterday was a special meeting of the board, called to ratify this action of the Executive Committee. Mr. Ramsey was present, with seven other Directors. When the matter of his leave of absence was brought up he protested formally against the action of the Executive Committee and the proposed action of the board in ratifying the resolution of the committee. Despite his protest, the board confirmed the action of the committee.

It was learned after the meeting that its proceedings were calm throughout. In effect, however, the board was voting him out of office against his formal protest. From statements made yesterday by friends of Mr. Ramsey, it appears that he protested on the ground that he was elected President by the stockholders and could not summarily be suspended by a vote of the Directors.

A leave of absence was granted Mr. Ramsey early last Summer. It was expected to end on Oct. 1. Mr. Ramsey came back from Europe three weeks ago and returned to the Wabash offices, maintaining his right to the Presidency of the road, although, in fact, very little was submitted for his consideration. By voting yesterday to continue his leave of absence the board, as far as its vote was effective to that end, suspended Mr. Ramsey from office from Oct. 1 to the time of the annual meeting a week hence.

ERIE'S $12,000,000 ISSUE.

Formal Announcement of the Financing of the Dayton.

The Erie Railroad's purchase of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railway, it was announced yesterday, will be financed by the issue of $12,000,000 of the company's convertible bonds, exchangeable into common stock at 60. The terms of the issue and the amount agree with the forecast made last week.

PETER H. THOMPSON MISSING.

Retired Paper Manufacturer Disappears from a Sanitarium.

A general alarm was sent out from Police Headquarters last night for Peter H. Thompson, a retired paper manufacturer, formerly Vice President of the Peter Adams Paper Company. Mr. Thompson disappeared from a Pennsylvania sanitarium on Sept. 23.

Thompson's disappearance was reported by his brother-in-law, John H. Sloan of 82 Duane Street. Thompson is 56 years old and his home is at 267 Hancock Street, Brooklyn.

JEROME MAY TAKE HAND IN INSURANCE TROUBLE

Asks That June Term Stay in Session Three Days.

JUSTICE DAVY CONSENTS

District Attorney Will Know on Thursday If Special Grand Jury Is Necessary for His Purpose.

That District Attorney Jerome still has in mind the possibility of getting indictments against some of the men whose names have figured prominently in the insurance investigation was idicated yesterday by his request to Justice Davy that the June term of the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, which already has been kept in session three months beyond its stated time, be continued for three days more, or until Thursday morning. By that time the District Attorney hopes to be in a position to decide whether there is sufficient reason for calling an extraordinary Grand Jury.

The June term was continued at Mr. Jerome's request, with the distinct understanding that he had in mind the calling of a Grand Jury for the special purpose of looking into the affairs of the Equitable Company. Other insurance companies have been brought into the limelight since then, and although the District Attorney has attended but one session of the investigation committee, he has been following very closely all that has been brought out before Senator Armstrong and his associates. A transcript of the testimony has been prepared for his use at the end of each day's hearing.

When Mr. Jerome addressed Justice Davy, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday, he made no direct reference to the object of investigation that might warrant the calling of an extraordinary Grand Jury, but the object was understood by every one who heard him speak. He said:

"I am not in a position to state to-day to your Honor whether I shall have to ask for an extraordinary Grand Jury. At my request, this court has been continued until now because there was a matter pending which might make it necessary for me to request that a special Grand Jury be called. I now ask that the June term be continued until next Thursday morning. At that time I will be in a position to inform the court relative to the matter referred to, and to state whether an extraordinary Grand Jury will be necessary."

Without comment of any kind, Justice Davy then granted the request of the District Attorney. Afterward Mr. Jerome refused to add a word to what he had said in open court. If next Thursday a request for an extraordinary Grand Jury should be made by the District Attorney and granted by the court, that body will be in charge of Justice Davy. The term of office of the Justice expires with this year, and he is not a candidate for renomination.

Attorney General Mayer denied yesterday that a demand had been made upon President McCall of the New York Life on behalf of the State to refund $150,000 that has been contributed by that company to the last three Republican campaign funds. It is understood that Mr. Mayer's policy will be to wait until all the evidence is in before the Armstrong Investigating Committee, and then decide what action, if any, should be taken by the Attorney General's department.

Commissioners Folk of Tennessee, Host of Wisconsin, O'Brien of Minnesota, Prewitt of Kentucky, and Pierce of Nebraska engaged several actuaries and ten accountants yesterday to examine the New York Life Insurance Company. The mission of W. J. Clay of Texas is somewhat different from that of his fellow-Commissioners.

He wants an explanation of the discrepancy between the testimony of President McCall of the New York Life regarding the contributions to Republican campaign funds, and the affidavits which Cashier Banta of the company made after the campaign last Fall, that no such payments had been made. It is understood that the explanation to be advanced by the New York Life is that the payments to which Mr. McCall testified were not made "directly" by the company, but through the agency of some of its incidental accounts.

It was learned that Mr. McCall will again be called to the stand in the near future in the insurance investigation, to undergo inquiry on the actual business of conducting insurance. The examination probably will be conducted by James McKeen, associate counsel with Charles E. Hughes, and Matthew Fleming, as this phase of the insurance situation has been Mr. McKeen's special subject of study since the investigation began.

The policy holders' movement to oust President McCall and Vice President Perkins of the New York Life inaugurated by the Rev. A. Lincoln Moore of the Riverside Baptist Church after his sermon Sunday night did not make much headway yesterday. There was no meeting of the policy holders, and Justice Hiatt, Mr. Moore's attorney, said that nothing definite had been determined.

A. Edward Woodruff, counsel for Herbert G. Tull of Philadelphia, in a suit against the Equitable to prevent the transfer of the Hyde stock to Thomas F. Ryan, and also its transfer by Mr. Ryan to the trustees, again amended his complaint yesterday, alleging that James H. Hyde did not have the right to transfer this stock under the deed of trust until after his thirtieth birthday. Mr. Woodruff said that he did not intend to criticise the Trustees, whose motives he believed to be admirable, but he thought their actions were not legal.

FOOTPADS GET $7,600.

One Brooklyn Robbery Yields $2,000 and Another $5,600.

Two highway robberies in which the footpads got heavy booty were reported in Brooklyn yesterday, one woman being attacked in her door yard and robbed of $2,000, and a man reporting that footpads had robbed him of $5,600 which he had drawn from bank. The last-mentioned robbery was committed two weeks ago, but the victim did not report it to the police until yesterday.

Mrs. Josephine Devito, wife of Joseph Devito, a Washington Market fruit dealer, living at 47 Greene Lane, is the woman who was robbed of $2,000. On Saturday Mrs. Devito and her husband drew $2,000 from the bank, intending to invest it. At about 3 o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Devito was awakened by the barking of a dog chained in the stable yard in the rear of the house. Calling her husband, she told him she thought some one was trying to steal the horses. He sleepily replied that she was dreaming. Mrs. Devito, however, got up and went into the yard. She carried the $2,000 in a bag tied around her waist.

As she stepped out the door two men caught her, choked her, took the bag of money, and fled. When Devito ran into the yard the robbers were gone.

Thomas Johnson, a retired manufacturer, living at Sherman Street and Tenth Avenue, says he was held up on the night of Sept. 19. He had drawn the money from the bank and was on his way home when he was waylaid. He was crossing a vacant lot on Windsor Place, near Ninth Avenue, when four men sprang upon him, and, after beating him, made off with the money. Mr. Johnson was left stunned on the ground.

After hearing Mr. Johnson's story, Detectives Conlon, Keenan, and Sullivan went out and arrested Owen Walsh of 287 Ninth Avenue, and another young man living in the neighborhood. Johnson said he had not reported the robbery before, because he was so badly injured that he could not get out of bed.

$300,000 THIEF TAKEN; HIS PLUNDER RECOVERED

ing that he would return with a sample of what he wanted. An hour later he came back and brought with him a yellow diamond-shaped slip of paper out of the centre of a Hanover National Bank check. It bore the certification stamp of that bank and the signature of Paying Teller Burns. Brinckman said he made an exact copy of the stamp with the name of Burns. The young man got it on Monday previous to the swindle.

The young man forgot to take away the samples. On the yellow slip of paper left with Brinckman, the detectives found not only the signature of Paying Teller Burns, but also that of Halle & Stieglitz. Their next step was to look up Mr. "Berg" at 5 West 125th Street. This is the address of the Harlem Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, of which Leonard was a member. Nobody of the name of "Berg" was known there.

Saturday afternoon they took to the office of Halle & Stieglitz tracings of the "Berg" handwriting taken from the address he had written and arranged as follows:

5.	125.
st.	erg.
H. A.	W.
	B.

They saw Albert J. Erdmann, told him the purpose of their visit, and asked him if he recognized the handwriting on the tracing.

"Yes, I think I know it," he replied, "but it would be an awful thing to suspect that young man."

Crime Fastened on Leonard.

He brought out some papers bearing handwriting that matched the tracings, and told Mr. Dougherty that H. A. Leonard had written it. From that time until he was arrested, twenty-four hours later, the young man was kept under surveillance.

When the detectives went to the Bronx on Sunday forenoon to arrest Leonard they took with them young Brinckman, who, according to the police, at once identified Leonard as the man who had ordered the certification stamp from his father. The detectives followed Leonard to the entrance of the Subway at 135th Street. There Capt. McCauley talked with him, while Brinckman made the identification positive. Capt. McCauley then told Leonard that he was under arrest.

"You are joking, Captain," said Leonard. "That will be about all for you."

"No," said McCauley. "This is no joke. You are accused of a very serious crime, of stealing $300,000 worth of stocks and bonds from the National City Bank."

"You don't think that I would be capable of doing a thing like that," said Leonard, indignantly. "Let me go."

"No," broke in Dougherty. "We don't arrest people on thinks. We know, and we've got the goods on you."

Leonard was first taken to the Alexander Avenue Station, and then to Police Headquarters. He stoutly denied his guilt at first. The Captain and Assistant Supt. Dougherty questioned him for several hours, and then sent him to a cell for the night. Leonard, although he knew that Capt. McCauley knew all about his family, insisted that his name was Henry Ambrose when his pedigree was taken, and that he lived at 5 West 125th Street.

The Prisoner Confesses.

"Leonard," said Capt. McCauley, "made a full confession. He says that he first conceived the idea of doing this thing some three or four months ago, and that his only purpose was to show how easily it could be done. On Sept. 26 he found four or five blank checks on the Hanover National Bank. He thought they might come in handy, so he put them in his pocket. The same day he was sent to the National City Bank on business. He had to stand for several hours in line at the loan clerk's window. Directly in front of him was the messenger from Pearl & Co., on whose envelope he could read plainly '$300,000, 4½ per cent.' He said he heard the loan clerk say to the messenger as he handed in his envelope that the interest was 4½ per cent."

This was on Tuesday of last week. Leonard already had in his possession the stamp and the blank checks. He took one of the checks to the printing establishment of I. Berman in Houston Street, near the Bowery, and asked the manager what he would charge for printing the name of Pearl & Co. on 1,000 of the blanks. A price was agreed upon, and then Leonard asked the printer to print the name on the check as a sample for his employers. He took this blank away with him, and the police declare it was the one that figured in the transaction.

On the following day, Leonard told the detectives, he met a boy on the street and sent him to the National City Bank with the forged check, instructing him what to do. Leonard said he thought the boy was not regularly employed in Wall Street, because he did not know where the City Bank was. Leonard, after he had sent the boy on his errand, stood in front of the Custom House opposite and waited for the boy to return. The boy soon returned, bringing with him the Pearl & Co. collateral. Leonard gave him a quarter for his trouble.

"Leonard said he took the securities home, and without delay sent the bulk of them to the home of Dyer Pearl, in West Seventy-third Street," continued Capt. McCauley. "Mr. Pearl is in Europe, and his house is in charge of a caretaker. We got the securities there on Sunday forenoon, after Leonard's arrest. He mailed the letter containing the stock certificates in West Ninety-second Street. Leonard said he would have sent all the securities, but there was not room for them in the envelope."

Tried to Sell Securities.

The police doubt the truth of this statement. Officials of the bank said that they had information that Leonard had tried to dispose of the securities which he retained. The securities that Leonard kept were 500 shares of United States Steel common, 100 shares of Metropolitan Street Railway, American Tobacco Company 6 per cent. bonds to the par value of $47,000, and Wabash debenture bonds to the par value of $20,000.

Leonard was arraigned yesterday in the Tombs Court, where Capt. McCauley asked that he be remanded to Police Headquarters pending the examination, which was fixed for this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The prisoner seemed greatly mortified, and disposed to shrink from the crowd. The detectives would not let him talk to the reporters, but in reply to a question one reporter managed to get to him, he replied: "It was only a bet."

A report that Leonard was engaged to be married to Miss Lulu Schrader of 277 Alexander Avenue, a daughter of Park Commissioner Schrader of the Bronx, was denied last night by the Commissioner. He said:

"Mr. Leonard was a classmate of my daughter at the 138th Street Public School. He is not now, and never was, engaged to her. He was a visitor at my house and welcomed there in the same way that my daughter's other schoolmates were, both boys and girls. We know him as a polite and gentlemanly young man, and beyond this we have no knowledge of him."

AUTO RACER INJURED AND MACHINE WRECKED

Chevrolet and His Assistant Hurled from Car.

VANDERBILT OFFERS AID

Louis Chevrolet's 120 horse power Fiat racing automobile was completely wrecked yesterday morning on the Vanderbilt Cup course, near the Lake Success turn just below the village of Lakeville, L. I. While taking the sharp curve at a high rate of speed, said to be faster than a mile a minute, Chevrolet dashed into a telegraph pole adjoining the estate of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and was hurled from his machine with terrific force to the road, but miraculously escaped injury. Henri Schutting, his Swiss mechanician, was less fortunate. He had three ribs broken, besides being badly bruised and cut, and was removed to the Nassau Hospital, at Mineola, in an ambulance.

The accident took place during the early morning hours, when the racing cars are allowed on the course for practice. They are restricted to two hours, 5:30 to 7:30. Chevrolet left his headquarters about 6 o'clock. It was extremely foggy at the time, and as the chauffeur approached the Lake Success district the fog, rising from the little body of water but a few yards from the road, seemed to be particularly dense. In making the sharp turn one of the rear wheels skidded, and the car was hurled with great force against the telegraph pole. Chevrolet said after the accident that it was almost impossible to see more than a few feet ahead, and the belief was general around the course that Chevrolet miscalculated the distance in making the turn in the fog, and instead of finding that he had passed the telegraph pole drove head on into it.

News of the accident was carried at once to the residence of William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and the latter hurried to the spot. A telephone message was sent to the Nassau Hospital, and Dr. Linehart responded. The injured mechanic was removed to the hospital, and Chevrolet went with him, but beyond a bad shaking up the latter was none the worse for his trying experience. The mechanician, however, will be confined to the hospital for several days.

The damaged car was the identical machine that secured second place in the Gordon Bennett race last July in France when driven by Nazzaro. The latter arrived here a few days ago, and will drive a similar car in the Vanderbilt Cup race on Oct. 14. The car was the first of the new 120 horse power Fiat machines to be sent to America, and it was driven by Chevrolet in the Cape May races. Hollander & Tangeman, who entered the car, were unable to tell last night whether it could be repaired so as to be available for future use or not. The front wheels and axles were broken, while the complicated mechanism was so badly ripped to pieces that it is doubtful whether the car can ever be repaired for racing purposes, and that is all it is good for.

The accident, coming as it did immediately after the arrests made on Sunday for illegal speeding, will cause the Racing Board of the American Automobile Association to adopt more stringent measures to discipline drivers who exceed the speed rates. Chairman Robert Lee Morrell has notified the drivers time and again that even when their big racing cars were on the course in the early hours the legal speed rates must not be exceeded. Yet none of the drivers has paid any attention to this rule, and between 5 and 7 o'clock every morning the big cars go tearing over the course at thirty minutes or less for the twenty-eight miles. Chevrolet's failure to heed the ruling has weakened the chances of the Italian team by removing from the race one of the best cars entered for the event.

Chevrolet holds the mile track record for a gasoline car, at 0:52 4-5, made this season at the Morris Park track.

STEAMBOAT SINKS SCHOONER.

The Nantasket Rams the Haines and the Prescott Near College Point.

A mix up, in which three vessels figured, and in which one of them was sunk and the other two badly damaged, occurred off College Point, in the East River, early yesterday morning. The Long Island Railroad's steamboat Nantasket, and the schooners Harry Prescott and Lawrence Haines were the vessels that came together, the Haines sinking within five minutes after the accident.

According to Capt. Carroll of the Nantasket, he was on his way to New York from Glen Cove, when, as he neared College Point, he saw the tug Emma J. Kennedy with the schooners in tow, coming up directly ahead. The schooners were lashed together. The Nantasket was very close to the vessels in tow, and the skipper, realizing that he would have to be quick to avert a collision, signaled for full speed astern. The engineer tried to obey the signal, but found that the steering gear was foul of something and would not work. A minute later the Nantasket crashed between the two vessels.

When the steamboat finally came to a stop the Haines was sinking, and the sailors from that vessel were scrambling on board the Prescott. In less than five minutes the Haines had settled, and the Prescott, with the Haines's crew on board, had drifted to one side. The Nantasket's railings, stanchions, and netting were gone, and her bow was twisted.

The Nantasket had thirty passengers on board, and there was considerable excitement, because it looked for a time as if all three vessels would founder.

The Prescott was bound to New Haven from Brunswick with lumber, while the Haines was on her way to Hallowell, Me., with a cargo of coal from Port Reading.

TARIFF WILL BE AMENDED.

Republicans Claim Only That Its Principle Is Perfect, Says Shaw.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 2.—Secretary of the Treasury Shaw in a speech at a Republican mass meeting in the Academy of Music in this city to-night discussed tariff issues.

"The opposition party never claim that their tariff measures are perfect," said he. "They only claim that the principle of free trade, on which they profess to construct their tariff laws, is the correct principle. They claim to eliminate every element of protection from all their tariff laws, as England eliminates protection from her tariff laws. They have openly and repeatedly denounced protection as robbery—they strike at the principle.

"All that the Republican Party claims for the Dingley tariff law is that it is built on right principles, and that it protects all interests and all communities. It will be amended in due time, but the principle will never be amended under a Republican administration. Here and there a rate may be higher than necessary. Here and there one may be too low, but the principle is correct and so wisely have the differentials been worked out that the United States to-day is more prosperous than ever in its history."

WOMAN JUMPS BEFORE TRAIN.

New Yorker Throws Herself Under Engine at Stamford.

STAMFORD, Conn., Oct. 2.—A young woman known here as Flossie Kelley, whose home was in New York City, threw herself in front of the New York accomodation train due here at 10:55 o'clock to-night and was ground to pieces. Apparently she was awaiting the train. As it drew into the station she leaped from the platform in the sight of thirty or forty persons.
